WEDDINGS

McBURTER—RIDDELL

A double ring ceremony was performed by Rev. M. J. Aiken, of Wellington St. Church, Trenton, Brantford, on April 4, when Sadie Amelia Riddell, daughter of Mrs. Mr. and Mrs. William Riddell of London, was united in marriage to Pte. Lorne Ernest McBurter, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy McBurter, of Brantford.

The bride was wearing a blue wool suit with matching hat, brown accessories and corsage of red roses. Bouvardia and white carnations.

Mrs. Flossie Freeman, Toronto, sister of the groom, acting as matron of honor, was dressed in a grey suit with brown accessories and corsage of yellow roses.

Mr. Ralph Carter, of Waterloo, was groomsman.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride in Brantford. After a honeymoon in Windsor, Detroit, and points west, the bride and groom will reside in Brantford.

IRELAND—WILSON

Trenton, April 11.— A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized in Parkdale United Church, Toronto, on Thursday, April 5, at four p.m., when Dorothy G. Wilson, of Toronto, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Wilson, Trenton, became the bride of L. Ck. William E. Ireland, R.C.N.V.R., son of Mrs. Mrs. O. A. Ireland, Trenton, and the late Mr. Ireland. Rev. H. R. Grant-Millan officiated.

The bride wore a turquoise blue dressmaker suit with matching hat and veil, black accessories and corsage of red roses and white carnations. She was attended by her sister, Miss Jean Wilson, as bridesmaid who wore a beige suit with brown accessories and corsage of white roses and daffodils. The groomsman was Lieut. Lorne Elon Brunton of the R.C.N.V.R.

Following the ceremony, the party were entertained at dinner by Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ellis at their home in Weston. For the occasion, Mrs. Weston wore a blue two-piece silk jersey suit. Later the bride and groom left on a visit the former's parents in Cochrane and will shortly resume their duties with the groom's mother, Mrs. Ireland.

Lt. Ck. Ireland has recently been with H.M.C.S. "York" but following his two weeks' leave expects a posting elsewhere.

ZEREDEZ—McDONELL

A pretty wedding took place at the Church of St. Michael the Archangel on Saturday, April 7, when Rita Irene McDonell, daughter of Mrs. Mrs. Joseph McDonell, of Foxboro, and George Albert Zeredez, son of Mr. and Mrs. Zeredez, of Belleville, were united in marriage by Monsignor J. P. Nicholson.

The bride was charming in a white satin bridal gown with lace yoke and sweetheart neckline, accented with long sleeves and panel of red roses.

Miss Mary McCarthy, cousin of the bride, as the only attendant, was in a street-length ensemble of blue jersey, harmonizing accessories and corsage of pink roses.

Mr. Vincent McDonell, brother of the bride, was groomsman.

Following the ceremony, a wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's parents to immediate friends and relatives.

The bride and groom left on a wedding to points east.

With facilities crowded to a maximum, the Belleville General Hospital, total, a total of 6,514 patients was admitted to the hospital during 1944, Hospital during 1944 it was reported by Administrator Colin Campbell at the annual meeting of the hospital Board of Governors held recently.

The number of patients admitted makes 1944 the busiest year in the history of the institution, with crowded conditions being experienced all year and the hospital being forced to refuse admission many times. The reserve list at one time reached a total of 60 patients, which was coupled with the the emergency department handled 726 cases last year and returned to their homes. Automobile accidents showed a decrease but there was an increase in industrial accidents.

The Board of Governors re-elected Mr. Mackenzie Robertson, chairman, and Mr. E. P. Bernard, vice-chairman. New representatives from the city council and county council replaced those who acted in the same capacity in the previous year.

The occupancy of the hospital is 176 beds but crowded conditions during the year made it necessary for extra beds to be placed in wards and corridors to accommodate patients at times being used to cope with the situation. The record for patients in the hospital at one time was 196. As result of crowded conditions 2,000 pounds of laundry per day was necessary to supply patients with the type of room and the daily deaths at the time of admission.

Large Increase.

Increase of patients at the hospital as compared with the year previous was 263 with the total being 6,514 while the number of births recorded was 1,001 as compared with 1,006 during 1943. Major operations totalled 1,264 as against 1,180, and minor operation were up 135 from 1,945. Eye, ear and throat operations totalled 571 with outdoor emergency cases numbering 726. Laboratory tests dropped 7,000 to 32,230, but X-ray cases were up by 1,170 to 7,170.

During the year approximately $2,000 worth of new equipment was added to the hospital, the institution showing improvement each year from the low point of $1,000 in 1931.

A blood bank was started at the hospital during the year, this holding 90 frozen plasmas and 34 whole blood ready for use. The bank makes it possible for blood transfusions to be given almost immediately and in many cases has saved lives. The client may have relatives or friends within the next few days and if this is done no charge is made for the blood taken from the bank.

Mrs. Mrs. Campbell is one of the few which buy their milk from T. B. tested herds and pasteurize it in their own institution, the milk room at the hospital is in charge of Mr. William Wheeler, former Sidney township cheese maker, and a high quality product is supplied for patients and babies, Modern Facilities.

Another innovation at the hospital is the doctors' in and out register. The register is placed inside the front entrance, the names of doctors in the building being shown by an electrically-lighted name panel.

Rev. E. Smith Speaks to Y.P.U. On "Happiness"

The Christian Missions group had charge of the meeting of Holloway Street Y.P.U., held on Monday evening.

The theme of the interesting worship service was "Youth Across Canada", and the Call to Worship was given by Gwen Burley. Beth Robertson read an article emphasizing the need for young Canadians to work together to build a stronger Canada, following which Isobel Richardson led in prayer.

A playlet was then presented by Lois Liddle, Ed Pazos and Isobel Richardson entitled "A Japanese Canadian" which gave much information about the methods used by the government in dealing with the twenty-three thousand Japanese Canadians in British Columbia, since the outbreak of war.

Introduced by Gwen Burley, Rev. E. Smith brought a message of interest to all on "Moments" speaking from the verse of Scripture,—"A merry heart doeth good like a medicine". Quoting personal experiences and from his contacts with others, Mr. Smith showed that "the happiest man is the one who thinks the most interesting thoughts', as was expressed by Edgar A. Guest.

"It takes courage and much common sense to be happy, often, when we are faced with disappointments and bereavement", he declared. Smith. "We must strive to crowd out wrong attitudes which poison our minds and crowd out happiness".

Isobel Richardson thanked Mr. Smith on behalf of the group and delicious refreshments of toasted cheese sandwiches and chocolate milk were served. The meeting was closed with the Friendship Circle and "Taps".

The Experts Say

By HELEN BANNERMAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, April 11.—(CP)— Spring brings spring fever; spring fever brings to workers the urge to spend lunch hours in the sun in a leisurely boring square, on a cathedral lawn or outside the city on a country schoolhouse - the last step is to take a lunchbox out into the sun with them.

Besides sandwiches mainstay of any lunchbox add a cake, fruit or vegetable salad packed in wax paper, a fruit tart, milk pudding or custard for dessert and cold milk to drink. If you are tired of the usual cheese or ham sandwiches here is a hearty type of filling suggested by the home economists at the Agriculture Department Consumer Section.

Wheat Sandwich Filling: To make 2 1-3 cups of filling you need 1-3 pound of wheaties, 1-3 cup chopped pickles or relish, 1-2 cup of mayonnaise, one tablespoon minced onion, 1-2 teaspoon spicy meat sauce and three chopped hard-cooked eggs. Grind the wheaties and combine with the other ingredients.

From the doorstep to the lookout in a jiffy! That's the way to save riboflavin, the vitamin in milk which helps to build up resistance to disease and make for better all-round health and vitality. It is destroyed by light, the experts tell us, so dictate that more than half of the riboflavin content of milk is lost in two hours if it is exposed to sunlight in a clear glass bottle, even on a cold day. However, if milk is stored in a dark room at room temperature for as long as 24 hours the precious vitamin is not destroyed even though the milk may turn sour.

Milk is the best known source of the Nutrition Division of Ottawa in riboflavin and that is the reason and Welfare Department stresses the need for fluid milk every day. Bulgaria, where the people are outstandingly healthy and long lived, maintains of the national diet are milk, cheese and sour milk, both of them rich in riboflavin.

Vanilla, chocolate and strawberry —"Big Three" of the flavoring ice cream—are made famous by pudding. When making cakes and cookies add the flavoring to the fat, then whisk; creaming it. This results in more even and lasting flavor because most flavoring extracts contain essential oils which combine with fats and are held by the fat. On the other hand, when flavoring sugarless and sugar custards (sauces), last, so that as little as possible of the flavor will escape.

Keys a La Hollywood: To make six servings you will need three tablespoons mild-flavored fat, two tablespoons minced onion (optional), two tablespoons flour, two cups milk, one egg yolk, one cup drained canned peas, six hard-cooked eggs, salt and pepper to taste.

Cook onion in fat for five minutes, but do not brown. Blend in flour. Add hot milk, stirring constantly until sauce thickens. Season. Pour some sauce on each of the beaten egg yolk, then stir it carefully back into the rest of the sauce. Add peas and hard-cooked eggs, cut in quarters. Reheat over hot water and serve on toast or crustades.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

A Friendly Note is Always Welcome

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

Oct. 1 I have just returned from very dear friends of mine the formal announcement of the marriage of their daughter to a lieutenant in the navy. I don't know how to go about remembering the bride. Is it really necessary for me to write them a congratulatory note on such an occasion? A friend of mine sent a present and says she will write after the wedding, if I am sending you the bride's address, you can send it. Please tell me what that means.

—K. S.

1. The usual advice given about acknowledging a marriage announcement is that formal notice is need for a reply. I don't agree with this casual advice. Particularly in these war-time days, when there may be no, or very few, invitations to the wedding hastily planned to take place before the groom's departure, it is planned in accordance with some officer's furlough, a note is in order.

So, whereas under other circumstances we probably would have waited to be invited to the wedding, under today's circumstances I feel that it is probably receive the news by return mail.

I have always thought that, in the majority of cases, a formal announcement should be given at the time of the wedding, and a friendly note, usually written to the bride, offering her our good wishes, and the groom our congratulations to the groom. To me this seems a natural gesture to make in acknowledging the news of such an important business in the life of a friend of ours, or at least of his mother.

Moreover today, if we are sure or fairly sure that we would have been invited to the wedding if we had been a wedding of any importance, we usually send a present. For a wedding present, it would, I think, be just as thoughtful to write the girl in response to the announcement.

Therefore, in your case, since this announcement comes from very dear friends, I would say advice is that you write a note to the bride's mother, congratulating her, sending you this important announcement. Then, later, after you receive your own words in a note, asked if you would be kind enough to express of you to send a wedding present to the bride, I say emphatically don't let this significant gift in the family of your dear friends go by unremembered. Why not send a good way of friendship?

2. Yes to your question of "friendly" what she wrote was "under separate cover" meaning that she was sending the packages separate from the letter.

Sweet Courtesy

If you have a sweet courtesy "on the beam," you'll steer right to personal charm and to popularity.

BEAUTY SHOPS report that the locks are getting sheared shorter. It is the mass old getting-thin story. The girl who has put her mind on having long locks and has cultivated them, or her hair, suddenly decides she is sick and tired of having it dangling around her neck, so she tears pell-mell to her hairdresser and tells her to go ahead and give her a three-inch clip.

When bulgy bloom and dreams of swimming, long hair is a bother. You don't feel like spending a lot of time on it. If you can get a strong, durable permanent, all you have to do to put your coiffure in order is to pass a comb through it from face to crown, down at the sides and then out again. Two waves is especially desirable for the short cut. It gives a curl close to the scalp. Even a shred of tress can be spiraled.

Boys at the merchant marine training school, St. Petersburg, Fla., selected Nancy Shaw as their favorite mermaid and gave her the fanciful title of "Neptune's Daughter." We haven't any fault to find with their enthusiasm.

Shoulders Too Please! Shrug 'Em Back

Backs and shoulders are on display all the year round—they are revealed during the Winter season by the formal gown, and they are certainly in the public eye all the seashore. Considering how many people look chores a woman has to attend to, it is not surprising that she does not give herself a backward glance, find out if she looks as well going as coming.

About the nearest thing a back can do is to collect a roll of fat in the upper story. Sometimes when the rest of the anatomy is svelte, of normal lines and good proportions, it is one of nature's jokes, but it isn't funny.

It is possible to dissolve these confidence, but the task cannot be accomplished in a hurry. You have to have a regular time for a workout. The stop-and-go method of never got any yery far along the healthy road. That's the trouble. The majority start out with enthusiasm; don't see results right away, are quitters. Whatever the trouble may be, it is not likely to cure itself. Plunge now and remember that fat cells cannot ensure activity; use muscles vigorously, and calipee cells go off and die.

In schools of physical education the girl who has cultivated home-laily green salads.

The Marry Go Round

JUST IN PASSING

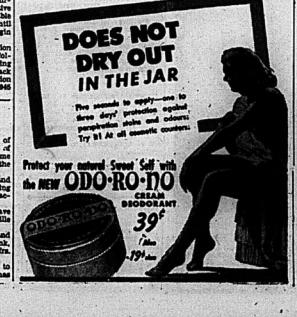
The things which the average man misses most, after marriage is adventure! When a man unties himself from all the rest of the girls in the world in order to tie himself up to just one, it is usually his last romantic adventure. So what! It's the girl's last romantic adventure, too.

"Frustration," is that tired feeling a girl has, when the right man goes home at 10.30, and the wrong man hangs around until curfew.

A summer romance seldom leads anywhere; but at this dangerous season, almost any little romantic detour may lead a man or a girl to the divorce court, via a hasty marriage.

No matter how little a girl may want to marry, the thought of starring at a wedding always thrills her; and no matter how anxious a man may be to marry a girl, the thought of playing the lead at a wedding always appalls him.

I have always claimed that thirty is a woman's most attractive age. It is also her most durable age; with care it will last her until she is forty. Then she can begin being thirty-five.



It has been said that "Fashion follows the figure as trade follows the flag." But this spring the figure is following fashion back to the old corset-bar—and Fashion is giving it the laugh. The 1945 waistline won't squeeze into the 1930 model.

My daughter, consider the man-shortage. For behold, among the thousands of boys there is the making and wailing and gnashing of teeth!

For the damsels are without dates and without dance-partners and without beaux and without joy.

They sit alone by their own hearth-sides, and embroider frilly garments for their hope chests. But what profiteth it them though their hope chests be full if their hearts be empty and weary with waiting?

Then hasten the day when their men shall come ashore, when peace and the damsels will welcome the victors, with kisses and kind words and lionesse and garlands! And their hearts shall be glad once more.

Eddie Schreider Elected Pres. Ladies Softball Association When Annual Meeting Held

As Secretary and Treasurer President Presented Concise Financial Report

E. J. "Eddie" Schreider, who has successfully filled the position of secretary and treasurer of the Bellevilla Ladies' Softball Association for the past two years, was elected president of the Association, for the year 1946, when the sponsors of girls' softball met at their annual conclave and election of officers in the City Hall Tuesday evening.

In retiring from the president's chair, a post held for three seasons, past president Charlie Barnett congratulated the newly elected executive. "I'm sure you will always have the interest of girls' softball in Belleville at heart," concluded Mr. Barnett, in the vacated office.

Reports Appreciated

President Schreider, who capably filled the office of secretary and treasurer for the past two years, presented the treasurer's report, which is given subsequently and in full detail later, a vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Schreider for his concise report, that gave the league a credit bank balance after $700.00 was given to War Charities through the office of the Belleville Ladies' Softball Association in 1944. Of this amount $600.00 was given to the Belleville branch of the Canadian Red Cross, with the appointment of the 'Toronto Sunday Morning Class girls' softball team here last August. Mr. Schreider's financial report of this individual war effort game is deposited in safekeeping in this report. The league voted their secretary-treasurer a slight honorarium for his untiring efforts.

Only Two Teams Ready

Only two of last year's affiliated teams signified intentions of sponsoring teams in the league for 1946, they being Universal Moulded Products and Dawes Bros. However, the meeting was assured of entries from Stewart Warner-Alemite and Bell Telephone. The Quinte View "Bombersites", Wm. Bialid, manager of the Quinte Bombers and Reliance A. C. stated he regretted to report Reliance would not be represented in 1946. Other affiliated teams were not represented.

With Honor Wright appointed acting as chairman the election of officers followed:—

President—E. J. Schreider.
Secretary—D. D. Wickware.
Treasurer—Wm. A. Van Tassle.

An executive committee composed of three outside individuals will be subsequently be made by the elected executive and announced next week. Splendid Year

HURLING STAFF BRIGHTEST SPOT OF TORONTO TEAM

Load of Hitting Will Be on Harry Davis and Jimmy Grundis

SPRING BLOOMERS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, April 11. (CP)—Veteran first baseman Harry Davis and outfielder Jimmy Grundis take the prospects of Orioles' baseball into Maple Leafs in the International baseball League this season.

Not only do they form the club's load of hitting but during a spring manager and Grundis as playing coach—Davis doubtless will they are to be called on to provide the main strength in its attack.

Second baseman Tony Castano, whose .306 average in 1944 was the highest Jack Tavener reached in two seasons, and catcher Charlie Grieve, former Maple Leaf who with Atlanta last year, are the only players likely to be kept by the new manager and coach in the hitting department.

Infielder Angelo Bonker, established in a deal with Jersey City, George Genyk, Stan Skoboda, Mike Zanovitch, Vern Thoels and Harold Rickard are the others in the line of hurling tough in the international baseball league this season.

The hurling staff is the brightest spot in the Toronto picture. It is built around Bill (Hot Potato) Hamlin, and Les McCrabb. Hamlin was a 22-game winner for Toronto in 1943 and McCrabb won 14 games for Lancaster, last season.

Other pitching prospects include Wilmer Stein, obtained from Chicago Cubs, Curtis (Dis) Johnson, Max Samuels, recently discharged from the Royal Canadian Air Force, returned Earl Coole and Frank Crooks.

Byron Nelson Wins Eight Golf Tourneys

Chicago, April 11 — (AP) — The biggest money winner in any branch of professional athletics in the United States, down to golf's latest tournament, Byron Nelson, the incredible Byron Nelson, who never the P.G.A. tournament, who eyes a bottle of dough and the awed respect of his talented colleagues.

Nelson, burning up the winter courses with eight times and only three finished worse than fourth in 17 open events. He also shared a championship with Jimmy Demaret, Montgomery, in the Miami four-ball tournament. He's the professional on the links Lord Byron bamboozled than $12,000 mostly in war bonds.

His total of 367 average for 72 holes in the four finals at Atlanta, Ga., last weekend was acclaimed by the greatest performance in golf history, but it merely was a fitting climax to perhaps the most thrilling tee odyssey the game has known.

P.G.A. figures show Nelson toted up 3.83 strokes per hole for 4,868 holes in the 17 open meets he played an average of 68.6 over a five-month period against the most rugged competition in the business.

SENATORS LITTLE CHANGED FROM TEAM LAST YEAR

Washington Batting Punch Meagre According to Manager Ossie Bluege

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, April 11 — (AP) — Moody, lumbering manager Ossie Bluege is kidding himself about the chances of Washington Senators winning the American League pennant this year.

Fans hereabouts learned their lesson long ago, and the Senators were picked to finish first and second in 1946.

This year's team is little changed from the 1945 club so perhaps the new Senators can hope to do it, get out of the cellar by a notch or two.

Two men have moved into the outfield, George Binks, who batted .271 for Jersey City last season, and Walter Chippell, a .286 hitter from Buffalo.

The other chief worry is the infield through which many a game got away last season.

Johnny Sullivan, erratic shortstop, is the property of Boston, and Oil Tborsen, third baseman, probably will stick with the Boston infield cellar. But he is no Martin Marion in ranging far to right and left. Manager Joe Kuhel, looking five years younger, is back at first. Second base will be filled with Harlond Clift apparently in his old time form at third base.

Dutch Leonard, John Niggeling, Roger Wolff, Mickey Haefner and Marquis Grissom are the main pitching slong with Marino Pieretti, last-string pitcher, who starred in the coast league this year.

What's Doing in Sport

(By The Canadian Press)

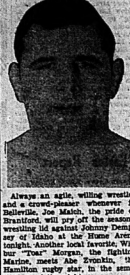
The Ontario Baseball Association last night at Hamilton announced three candidates for the presidency for the 1945 presidency in Herb Serachs, Hamilton, present incumbent; W. J. Snyder, Hamilton, O.B.A. secretary for 30 years, and Ralph Mac Port Colborne. He was renamed having been nominated by Kenric Hamilton and Ottawa. Bill Snyder has again been nominated for the office of secretary-treasurer.

An important resolution to come before the annual meeting at Toronto April 30 and 31 would restrict the number of U. S. players on each affiliated club to three, compared with four last season, and the replacement by any other U. S. import to be permitted during the season by the mutual consent of sponsored by both the Niagara and Intercounty leagues.

Inexhaustible:

Forty-three-year-old "Pat" Bolton of Westmount, Que., is still at it. For the past several weeks Pat has been averaging 70 to 80 miles training for the coming Boston Marathon this April 19. Though he has never been a contender Pat's form so optimist. Says he: "I'm due to get a break anytime. Gerard Cote (three-time champion) in 12 marathons before he got anywhere."

The other day he knocked off the 26-mile, some-odd yards regulation distance in a shade under three hours — which is good time for training session.



Today's Quote:

Marcel (Montreal La Press) Desjardins: "It was a good season. Canadiens gave great performances most of the time."

SHARE COMMAND OF JAPANESE FORCES

According to a report received in London, a reshuffle of the Japanese High Command has placed Field Marshal Sugiyama (left) and Field Marshal Shunroku Hata (right) in supreme command of the Japanese armed forces "in order to strengthen the defence of the mainland." Sugiyama was war minister in the fallen Konoe cabinet. Hata was removed from the supreme command in China last November. Both are leaders of the Nipponese military clique.

FAVORITE HERE

Always an agile, willing wrestler and a crowd-pleaser whenever in Belleville, Mario Vagnone, the pride of Brantford, will pry off the season's wrestling bid against Johnny Dempsey of Hilo at the Hume Arena tonight. Another local favorite, William "Tear" Morgan, the fighting Marine, meets Abe Evenhin, the Hamilton rugby star, in the semi-final go of the night.

The feature bout brings together Nanjo Singh, the unscrupulous rand Hindoo, versus Red Vagnone, the California Rocket. This marks the second appearance of the Golden Gate ring adonis.

JUNIOR HOCKEY POT IS BOILING

Toronto, April 11 —(CP)— Toronto's junior hockey pot today appeared the boiling point as the Central Junior Royals rested somewhat in the slip in grouping, but with a last-ditch stand against Toronto St. Michael's College in the sixth game of the best-of-seven Eastern Canada junior finals.

Royals, undefeated since they arrived in the city early last night from Sydney, Nova Scotia, in search of hotel accommodation, face elimination if the fast-skating Irish record a victory tonight.

Coach Joe Primeau of St. Mikes said he knows his team can finish the series tonight.

He said the scoring injuries resulted from the Montreal games, both of which Mikers won to move into a 3-2 lead in the series.

"The team is full of pep and ready to get at 'em."

Among the most interested spectators at the game will be Mervyn Jaw Cannuck, western champions, who arrived yesterday. Winner of the series meets Canucks for the Memorial Cup and Dominion junior hockey championship.

St. Michael's Buzzers Win Junior B Title

Toronto, April 11 (CP)—St. Michael's Buzzers, who played steadily throughout, trimmed Stratford 5-1 here last night to win the O.H.A. Junior "B" Championship in three straight games. Jerry Udle was Buzzers' first since 1936.

CHAPLAIN GETS WINGS

Buntingford, England (CP) — Rev. Bernard Egan, M.C., among the parachute padres reported missing at the battle of Arnhem, is in a German prison camp hospital. He was the first British army chaplain to be awarded wings as a paratrooper, and won the M.C. in Sicily.

Not Known.

A young soldier in hospital had received many kindnesses from a woman visitor. Asking him one day if there was anything she could do to while away the long hours of his convalescence. He replied that he would like to have a gramophone record of Beethoven's Moonlight Sonata. Some days later he was astonished to receive a letter which began: "I am afraid the record of Frank Sinatra singing 'Moonlight,' but nobody seems to have heard of Bert Woven's band."

Takes on Big Job.

Johnny Mackie, former Noire Dame star athlete who was recently discharged from the United States Marine Corps, has taken a big job in left field for the Detroit Tigers. Mackie takes over the position of Dick Wakefield, slugging left fielder of the Tigers, who has been called away on top for the second time by the American Army.

First of the great name Tigers to play in that position was Bobby Veach, who was followed by Ty Cobb and Sam Crawford in the Detroit outfield. Mickey Cochrane also lives in Detroit, has been ill.

Next came Pete Fox, Barney Mcosky and Gerald Walker.

Still They Come.

There are applications for entry into the Belleville Baseball League coming in daily, Secretary Executive met at the Chamber of Commerce last night, and Messrs. A.G. and Ken Baseball Club. No action was taken in the applications, as the league executive intends to consider well the matter of enlarging the league before the original five charter entries.

General discussion on night baseball indicates Belleville is not ready for a large investment in such equipment, but the league may go in for some lesser lighting, such as the Trenton Legion baseball park, which has a good wood screen as a fourth-seated loop, including "Doc" Empey's team, which takes part of the baseball players desirous of playing the game in a first year league. Empey is also interested in Brown's Bread Juniors are the only ones to have signified their intention of players today. Perhaps the odd baseball enthusiast may drop by problems of the league and also lend to strengthen it as well.

Dykian While.

With a display of benevolence which would have done credit to a Goldsworth scribe, Good Samaritan, Manager James J. Dykes of the Chicago White Sox—"That's my personal invitation to Charlie Graham," Dykes stated, "I will gladly help out the Cubs in any way I can. I'll be glad to do so" way of showing their good-neighbor policy.

"Of course," Dykes added hurriedly, "we shall not be responsible for any concussions caused by the presence of monkeys, the zoo type, of course, in dressing room."

Remember When.

Indian Broom, from Austin Taylor's Vancouver stable, was the first running of the Marchbank handicap in world record time at San Francisco's Tanforan today. The Canadian-bred three-year-old ran the mile and one-eighth in one minutes, 47 3-5 seconds.

Innovations.

Innovations being attending the season's opening at the Hume Arena tonight will be greatly improved at the renovations completed by Manager Walt Gerow and his arena staff. A new wrestling canvas (the grapplers will appreciate this), a new ring, and one-eighth inch paint job of all seats are only a few of the interior decoration efforts for the comfort of all. Of course when Nanjo Singh, that mad Hindoo, starts to work on Red Vagnone, the California Rocket, in the main bout most anything may happen and all of Walt's hard work may be in vain. To predict what Singh would attempt would be merely folly, but regardless it'll be fun.

Cenny Seathye's in Again.

Following a debate in the House of Commons Monday night, George Cruickshank (Liberal member from Fraser Valley) charged that the fiery manager of the Toronto Maple Leafs would carry the Progressive Conservative banner in the Toronto Trinity constituency during forthcoming general federal election.

The Toronto Major Smythe denied such accusations adding—"it's all news to me."

It all came about when Cruickshank charged that some professional hockey players obtained military deferments going as farmers' sons and then went ahead and played professional hockey. Assistant Defence Minister Douglas Abbott stated neither the army or Selective Service has granted deferments or exemptions to men to allow them to play hockey, or any other professional sport.

Cruickshanks' pet peeve was the fact that Fraser Valley farmers' sons were being called up, while hockey players were given deferments to play professional hockey, the Fraser River Valley member charged.

Well, there's a Federal election in the offing and one thing is certain Mr. Cruickshank for getting in the Tory pre-election campaign plug, can one?

Sports Roundup

(By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.)

New York, April 11 (AP)—The pot calling the kettle seem to think that one of their biggest accomplishments in their five-day meeting was the appointment of a committee to deal with protests from colleges . . . They expect to receive plenty of complaints when the athletic start coming back after the war . . . Most of the boys picked in this year's pro draft, one club owner pointed out, were sophomores when they left college. They'll now have families and will be looking for jobs . . . But if the pro star is boy who has a few years of college eligibility left, chances are there'll be a terrific squawk from the school that's wasting him back . . . The pro offer a simple solution: Their committee will meet the college groups and present a contract to keep everybody happy.

BARONS CAPTURE CALDER TROPHY

Hershey, Pa., April 11 (CP)—Cleveland Barons eked out a 6-4 verdict over Hershey Bears before a crowd of 7,360 here last night to capture the Calder trophy, emblematic of the American Hockey League championship.

Barons, who led their own division in the regular schedule and then eliminated Indianapolis in the Western Division finals, completed the Bears four games to two in the championship series. The Bears wound up in second place in the regular season standings, the league leading Buffalo Bisons out of the playoff picture by reaching the finals. Lou Fontinato and Tommy Burton led the Cleveland offensive with a brace of goals each and Burton's second tally late in the final frame proved to be the clincher. Roy Kelly was the other Baron scorer while Chuck Schaus, Alex Kaleta and Mike Shabenk, with a pair of markers provided the Hershey goals.

PRESIDENT ANOTHER TERM FOR WINSTON CHURCHILL

Victoria, April 11 —(CP)— Another term for Winston Churchill as Prime Minister of Great Britain was predicted here yesterday by Alan Pitt Robbins, news editor of the Times of London. Mr. Robbins also predicted that there will be a general election is called soon after the end of the German Party will split, from the National Government and form the chief opposition.

LESSON NO. 623
By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

You look at it you could carry a tune, that you figure out what your partner has after he is through bidding it. Peek over the top of your thoughts when you have this north hand:

♠ A K J 6 3
♥ 8 7 4 2
♦ 9 5 4
♣ 9 3

The bidding now like this:

SOUTH	NORTH
1 H	1 S
2 H	4 S
4 H	4 NT
5 H	7 H or 7 NT

State how many cards in each suit are held in your partner's hand. There is no mystery to any of it. The bids by partner should tell you.

Having bid hearts three times, south must have a re-bidable suit at least six cards. If he had only six cards in that suit, it must contain A Q J 10. Because you have only 9 3.

If he had another bidable suit, he would have bid hearts only twice and the third suit, which he can only assume he has no other suit with four or more cards in it.

If he has six hearts, and two or three card suits, he should have bid them originally. Probably spades, for that is clockwise. Note the six hearts, three diamonds and one spade.

His side-jump to three hearts shows eight tricks. Two of them are the short cards in spades and he must have six high cards (aces, kings, queens).

In answer to four no-trump, six hearts is "the Kibitzer convention for showing" two aces and two kings. So, he must have both ace, both minor kings, heart queen, and one more queen.

You can line up the six solid hearts, two top spades, five tops in the minor suits. A grand slam must be a cinch. Go to it.

AT THE BELLE

"None But The Lonely Heart" starring Cary Grant, and presenting Ethel Barrymore in a return to the screen after twelve years, the dramatization of Richard Llewellyn's best seller, "None But The Lonely Heart" coming next to the Belle Theatre screen, unfolds a thrilling drama of life in the seamy East End of London.

Cary Grant's role is that of Ernie Mudd, a cockney ne'er do-well embittered by poverty and the squalid conditions of his Limehouse Barrymore, 1944 Academy Award Winner, plays his mother, Ma Mudd. She has a working owner of a small second-hand shop beneath their meat home.

Ernie, though an expert pianoplayer, furniture, and clock repairer, does nothing to help his mother. He spends most of his time at a neighboring Pub Parlor and idling around with his neighbors. There is a girl, Ayche, a young milliner, who has always loved him, but he fails madly in love with Ada, a girl at the Pub Parlor.

Rebellious between Ernie and his mother get so bitter that he and his older to leave home, but before he can do so, he learns that his mother has not long to live. Hardened though, he is, he cannot resist the temptation to accept stolen goods in her little shop, . They are both eventually arrested.

Prominent in the supporting cast are Jane Wyatt as the little cockney lass in love with Ernie, June Duprez as the Pub Pair girl, Barry Fitzgerald, Academy Award winner, as Ernie's eccentric friend, George Cleveland as the head of the "smash-and-grab" gang, Roman Bohnen, and Konstantin Shayne.

Though the picture is laid in such sordid backgrounds, the drama is so tense and the characters so quaint that interest never lags. The faithful representation of London's East End are said to help make this one of the most remarkable pictures of the season.

British Took Tokyo By Invitation in 1906

The souvenir in question is a map of Tokyo which outlines by startling prominence the principal spots of the city. It was printed in honor of and presented to officers and personnel of the Asiatic Fleet of the British Empire, on the occasion, of a formal visit to the Japanese capital thirty-nine years ago.

At the top of the map are the crossed flags of Britain and Nippon known as the "Butcher Boy", smashed Alf Mason of London at short and so often that the referee stopped the bout in the fifth round of a scheduled six-rounder. It was the stocky Baltic's second London triumph within a week.

Nobody judged fill in most of the craters, although some were left as hazards. Instead, the flat areas of ground were acquired for wheat and potato growing, but two holes were converted into short ones and the full round preserved.

Although these men were described as "drivers," the Reich repeated a broadcast offer of 100,000 marks (about $18,000) for information leading to the arrest of the flayers.

DETROIT WINGS FIGHTING MAD AFTER 2 DEFEATS

Toronto, April 11 (CP)—Toronto hockey fans, slightly dazed from the array of hockey talent invading the Gardens, tonight plotted today's Detroit Red Wings.

The Wings were expected here to-night for the third game of the eight-point Stanley Cup finals in a narrow night and reports from Detroit indicated the Coast boys were fighting mad after dropping two shutout victories Leafs recorded in the opening games there.

Adams is said to be considering an extensive shuffle of the Red Wing lineup for the game, including use of Eddie Bruneteau, Joe Carveth and Carl Liscombe, highscoring centre on the club, as his first line.

If Coach is bringing 19 players including goalies Connie Dion and Norm Smith, defencemen Gordon Sherritt, and rumors say that star Senator Syd Howe, who missed the first game, may be pressed into service. Adams said it doesn't matter much what steps he takes to put some spark into the lineup.

"Imagine us, going 120 minutes without a goal. We can do much worse than that," he said.

Coach Jack Adams, Leafs, as his bag done throughout the play-offs, refused to comment on the prospects of ending the series. He has said let the record—successive 1-0 and 2-0 victories—speak for itself and await whatever the future holds.

SPORT SHORTS FROM BRITAIN

By ALLAN NICHLESON
(CP Staff Writer)

London, April 11 — (CP) — The one-time Whitechapel Whirlwind, puffing a bit from a layoff against Old Father Time and a tough, young starlet, Jimmy Bott, was back as a winner of the second bout in his comeback attempt.

Jimmy Bott, 37-or-all his 36 years, clearly outpointed young Jimmy Brant over eight rounds in showdown London bout he didn't come anywhere near the world featherweight title as a favorite in the United States 15 years ago. His next task will be another comeback attempt, this one known within a couple of weeks and shortly after the Red Army decide whether to continue or hang up its guns for good.

Fighting as a welterweight, Bert showed toughness by taking all Brant's blows without being shaken. The marines had height and reach advantage but the Kid nullified these with close-in fighting.

On the same card, Harry Dalton (Battersea), a middleweight known as the "Butcher Boy", smashed Alf Mason of London so often that the referee stopped the bout in the fifth round of a scheduled six-rounder. It was the stocky Baltic's second London triumph within a week.

Nobody judged fill in most of the craters, although some were left as hazards. Instead, the flat areas of ground were acquired for wheat and potato growing, but two holes were converted into short ones and the full round preserved.

Although these men were described as "drivers," the Reich repeated a broadcast offer of 100,000 marks (about $18,000) for information leading to the arrest of the flayers.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was looking at the comics, and you said, How does the humor strike at yours?

Yes sir, I'm going to do it as soon as I finish looking at Nick Spencer, but it doesn't seem to be making you laugh, he said. I'm not, I said, I'm not suppose to.

Then what the dooce is it doing on the comic page? pop said, Comic! When I was young we knew the meaning of the word. In fact we used to manufacture our own fun. We used to put up minstrel shows and black our faces, and the jokes flew as thick as popcorn in a popper, he said, and as I said, My goodness yes, I still have to laugh every time I think of the good old days when the humor was the comic of the day. Yet on the other side, he hee, he said laughing.

That was the good old stand by, he ha, we wouldn't of thought of giving a minstrel show without using that one, he ha, pop said laughing, and I said, Well Jimmy, pop, what's funny about that? I mean every once in a while one of the gags asks why does a chickin cross the road, but no fellow ever laugh. Did you have any more jokes? I said.

I tell you we had millions of them for Pete sake, pop said. The middle man would say to one end man, How do you feel this evening, Mr. Bones? and Mr. Bones would say, feel just like a scramble egg, Mr. Interlocutor. All broke up. And then the middle man would say to the other end man, "And how do you feel this evening, Mr. Bones? and Mr. Tambo would say, "I feel like a dog that had his rear end run over—a sad tail."

Making pop and me laugh again but not me, and I said, Do you know any more, pop? and pop said, I know I was a lucky boy not to be born into a world where the only funny sound a suppose to be is the agitation of a machine gun. Now get busy on those lessons, he said. Which I did feeling against it.

COL. BORGMAN KILLED

London, April 11 (CP) — Col. Henrich Borgman, 36, who was injured in the bomb explosion last May, has been killed in action on the western front, a Berlin broadcast said.

Coverage of Canadian and World News to be Widened, President Tells Annual Meeting Can. Press

Toronto, April 11 (CP) — Plans to widen coverage of Canadian and world news were outlined today by Senator W. A. Buchanan of Lethbridge-Herald in his presidential address to the annual meeting of The Canadian Press.

Broader and more considered stories of events and situations in Canada are planned to meet domestic needs, Senator Buchanan told the newspaper publishers and executives who are members of the news-gathering co-operative.

The overseas staff and war correspondents of The Canadian Press would provide a reservoir of unexcelled experience to meet the trend toward lighter writing and better background in the streamlined and interesting newspapers of the future.

Senator Buchanan said the CP's successful effort to cover the war abroad and at home outlined in other problem, that of covering the peace and the world's rehabilitation.

"To this task and that of reporting the Canadians in the Pacific war, we have already committed ourselves," he said.

"Already we have a Pacific correspondent, William Stewart, on the scene where Canadians before many months will be fighting. We have approved a simple editor to correlate and improve the flow of news of the commonwealth in the translation phase from war to peace. And a European correspondent is assigned to cover the Canadian newspapers the complexities which will inevitably arise when shattered Europe rises again."

Tribute to Correspondents

Paying tribute to C-P war correspondents, Senator Buchanan said: "When the first Canadian troops went overseas in 1939, less than four months after war was declared, we sent our own war correspondents with them. They have been with the Canadian forces in Britain, in North Africa, in Sicily and Italy, in France, Belgium, Holland—and now in Germany.

"CP war correspondents were at Kiska and at Sidisperham. They have sailed with our navy, flown with our fighting airmen and been shot down out of the skies. Twice they have been on torpedoed ships. By God's grace we have lost but one of our number, Robertson, who was lost at sea in 1941."

Senator Buchanan paid tribute to reporting the war for those at home, the "unsung heroes who had done a job of morale-building by keeping Canadian servicemen informed, no matter where they might be.

Service to Troops

Since May, 1942, CP had published in London a weekly newspaper, The Canadian Press Weekly, for distribution to Canadian servicemen overseas. A service also had been provided to the Maple Leaf, the army newspaper in Italy and on the western front, and daily bulletins provided for service men at isolated spots in Canada, Newfoundland.

All this news had been provided without charge and CP retained full authority over its selection.

No organization is better able to contribute to national understanding than The Canadian Press, Senator Buchanan said. "If there is one criticism I would offer it would be that there is sometimes a tendency on the part of our newspapers to neglect the news of the other provinces, to play up too heavily one section of the country. Through our service we have the means of informing ourselves about all Canada—not one part of it. We must use it more. Of course can we expect to break down sectional differences."

Guarantee of Impartial News by Press Services Great Contribution To World by Western Hemisphere

Toronto, April 11 (CP) — The guarantee of objective, impartial news given by The Canadian Press and The Associated Press, co-operative, non-profit news services of Canada and the United States, is the "single greatest editorial contribution made by this hemisphere to the world at large," Robert McLean of Philadelphia, said here today.

In an address prepared for a C.P. annual meeting luncheon, Mr. McLean, president of A.P. and publisher of The Philadelphia Evening Bulletin, lauded the "basic principle" of the two news services—"that we as newspapermen should gather the news by our own instrumentalities and in the light of standards set by ourselves," and he declared:

"Our two organizations have indeed demonstrated the virtues of such form of organization as one which I hold the foremost is that each member newspaper having an ownership in the report becomes a guardian of its virtues. Not only each newspaper but each editor and reporter, for each reader—an upset-eyed host also—is a watchful and restrain any injection of bias or special interest."

AT THE CAPITOL — A rogue with a heroine, a dancing darlin' and a fabulous man-about-town, in the persons of Dick Haymes, June Haver and Monty Woolley are the causes of the hilarious entanglement, "Irish Eyes are Smiling," coming next to the Capitol Theatre. The added bill "Silver City Kid", stars Allan Lane.

DANCE OF DEATH

By HELEN McCLOY

CHAPTER 15

The Inspector fell curiously baffled. "Nothing notable," he said, "out of the ordinary in the Jocelyn household the day of the dance? Anything at all?"

Mrs Jowett hesitated. "There were two little things," she admitted finally. "But I'm sure that neither one has any bearing on the dreadful crime."

"Let's hear them."

"Well, the first one is simply the fact that some red roses were sent to Kitty the day of the dance with a gay card attached. Kitty thought the card must have been lost. I thought, it must have, for the roses had been sent anonymously. Spectacular as spectacular as Kitty are always getting anonymous letters — begging letters, threatening letters and letters that are positively obscene."

"What became of all this fan mail?"

"It was destroyed each day, Mrs. Jocelyn forbade Kitty to answer begging letters and the others were utterly silly."

"And I suppose the roses were thrown out, too?"

"Oh, yes. They were thrown out before the dance began, because, as curiously enough — they had begun to fade. As for the second thing, I'm afraid it's more irrelevant. There was an uninvited guest at the dance — a gate-crasher, who confessed that he had concealed himself in the house during the afternoon."

For a moment Foyle was speechless. Then he asked, "Could this fellow have been hiding in the shuttle room when you were all having cocktails?"

"I don't know where he was hidden." Mrs. Jowett didn't seem to realize the significance of this possibility.

"What was his name and address?"

"I never thought of asking him."

The Inspector's face fell. "How did you happen to catch him?"

"There have been a great many gate-crashers this season. To circumvent them, I present each male guest with a boutonniere, and this gives up his card of invitation at the entrance, and ask him to wear it during the evening. I use a different flower at each party and no one knows beforehand what flower it is to be."

"I see, see . . . It was about two o'clock when Gregg, the butler, told me he had noticed a young man wearing a gardenia, instead of the white rosebud that was given each male guest. I, rather expected to find some one that I knew — by actual count three gate-crashers are friends of girls who are themselves invited. But this one proved to be a complete stranger."

"He was perfectly cool. I thought he must be a thief. Gregg searched him and found he had taken nothing — except two supper menus. That was rather odd, wasn't it? He admitted frankly that he was a gate-crasher, and told me he had sneaked into the house that afternoon and hidden himself until the party began. I told him I was going to call the police, and see if he wasn't liable to charge of burglary. He was quite indifferent, frightened. And just then who should walk into the room but Miss Jocelyn looking radiant, and positively knocking me flat. Miss Pasquale."

Her lips puckered as if the name had left an unpleasant taste in her mouth.

"It was most officious. He insisted that this gate-crasher be allowed to go scot-free. I failed to see that the matter concerned him in any way. But he began to make so much noise about it I was afraid he would attract the attention of the people at the dance, and so I gave in and let the gate-crasher go. Instead of being grateful, he stared at us with the utmost impudence and said, I suppose I may keep the two supper menus!' By my amazement Pasquale replied 'By all means!' I made Gregg escort the gate-crasher to the door in order to make sure he really did leave the house."

"Can you describe him, ma'am?"

"Yes, I don't get a very clear view of him for I had most unaccountably mislaid my glasses that evening, just before the dance, and I don't see well without them. I can only tell you that he was tall and young."

Mrs. Jowett was beginning to look tired under the questions. She stretched her hand toward the old-fashioned phial of smelling salts on the desk — and then thought better of it.

Foyle couldn't help thinking that a smelling salt phial would be a very convenient way to carry poison without rousing suspicion. The unpleasant of the thought as he lifted his glance to her broad, motherly face. She didn't look like wife being a policeman. It would be suspect everybody.

"Well ma'am, this testimony of yours may prove important. Can you spare the time to come to Police Headquarters tomorrow? Your statement will be typed by then and you can read it over before you sign it."

"I'm rather busy tomorrow. Couldn't you type it now? My secretary has gone home for the week-end."

Foyle looked at Duff and nodded. Duff went into the outer office and soon the clatter of typewriter keys was faintly audible through the closed door.

Foyle's glance reverted to the woman's face.

"Your daughter, ma'am? She's not in, I hope?"

"Yes." Mrs. Jowett's voice was suddenly vibrant with emotion. "Poor child, poor Kitty!"

"Oh — I'm sorry." The inspector looked abashed. "I have only to stumbled on. Anything to fill that aching silence. He said her aloud about them.

When Duff returned, Mrs. Jowett signed the statement through word for word.

"That's quite correct. Shall I sign here?"

"Please, ma'am." Duff, who had been trained to handle the tough-gangster element, addressed himself to a heavy gentleness with Mrs. Jowett.

He scrawled Duff's formidable name and wrote rapidly.

"Thank you, ma'am." Duff picked up the statement and looked at it mechanically. Then he stared, "Say ain't your name Jocelyn? That ain't the name you've written here. You've written the name of the dead girl, See?"

He pointed to the signature: "Catherine Jocelyn."

"Oh, dear!" Mrs. Jowett paged, after showing a little panic. "How stupid! This terrible thing has upset me so, I really don't know what I'm doing!"

The business offices of the Industrial Finishing Company suggested a cathedral. Lighting was indirect as it filtered through stained glass windows. Desks were panelled in linen fold oak; chairs and tables were Jacobean.

Edgar Jocelyn's private secretary, the Inspector Foyle down dim corridors where the only sound was the clicking of typewriters, until at last they reached a cheerful room with windows overlooking the Thames Embankment.

Edgar Jocelyn rose to greet them — tall, grizzled, with the pale Jocelyn eyes under black brows. "This is a horrible business, gentlemen," he said, gravely. "And I, Police Commissioner Archer over the telephone there must have made a mistake. This dead body was found early Wednesday morning. My niece, Kitty, was dancing, not her own coming-out party until dawn on Wednesday. I remember her and spoke to her two days later at the office."

Foyle met Edgar Jocelyn's direct gaze in kind. "The girl you saw at the office was not Miss Jocelyn."

Before the story of Ann's impersonation was made clear to him, he had left an impression of important moral meaning. All his reserve was gone. His shock had loosened his tongue like wine. And apparently he had not incurred in him that he himself might be under suspicion.

Wound it surprise you to hear that your niece was killed by an overdose of X-Why, the reducing medicine that she's endorsed?"

"X-Why?" Edgar's astonishment certainly seemed genuine. "I didn't even know it was poisonous."

"It contains thermol, or 2, 4 dinitrol-phenol."

"I never heard of the stuff. I'm no business man, not a chemist."

"A large amount of the drug was found in your niece's body, proving that she had a fatal dose."

"Couldn't it have been an accidental overdose?"

"Rhoda Jocelyn and Ann Claude have testified that Kitty never took X-Why before and that she didn't want to reduce. According to them, she was actually trying to put on weight at the time of her death. The autopsy proved that she was under weight."

"They would know," admitted Edgar.

Foyle tried a new tack. "Do you suspect any one among the folks who had cocktails at Mrs. Jocelyn's Tuesday afternoon?"

"That's an embarrassing question, Inspector, but, in the circumstances, I'll try to answer it. Rhoda my sister-in-law — is out of the question. She's the best person we can get. I suppose it must be Pasquale or Leach or one of the others. Leach couldn't be any one else. . . ."

The Inspector said nothing. He had often found silence a more effective way of making people talk than questioning.

Jocelyn broke the accusing silence.

"To tell the truth,I was rather surprised when I saw the sort of people Rhoda was gathering around Kitty at dinner. I dropped in that afternoon on the chance — he hastened to add, "They were not a nice — gang. Especially Pasquale. I told Rhoda he'd have to go, because I naturally didn't want Kitty involved in a public scandal."

"Did you have much talk with Mrs. Jocelyn in the library?"

"Why, yes. How did you know?"

"One of the servants heard voices quarreling."

Edgar frowned. "We were not quarreling," he said with patient distaste for the word. "I was mercilessly frank, which was extremely bad taste of allowing Pasquale to talk Kitty in the direct of the cocktail house. I suppose I'm old-fashioned, but when I was young these affairs were arranged with some regard for appearances!"

"Didn't Mrs. Jocelyn give you a cue to ask you, Mr. Jocelyn," Inspector Foyle said. That you were to pay your father's fortune cut up between you and Kitty's father?"

"Is that really necessary?" was Jocelyn's response.

"I'm afraid so."

"Well, my father left me the old house on Long Island, and my brother Gerald — Kitty's father — got the house where Rhoda is living now. The rest of the fortune was divided equally between us. Gerald, unlike myself, was never good at making money. He was a gentleman, and when Gerald and Rhoda had a settlement, she refused it. The trouble occurred when she married Claude..never mind that.

"Did you and your brother both invest stock in this Industrial Finishing Company?"

"Oh, no. Our money was all in gilt-edged securities originally. I sold mine and invested in the 4½ Z of '45 at the end of the war, when it, like other American dye firms, acquired certain German patents that became available as part of our reparations. My brother Gerald sold his stock, too. But he invested in foreign bonds and railroad shares which have depreciated since."

"Mrs. Jocelyn told us she was hard up."

"Did she?" Edgar was none too pleased. "It's largely her own fault. She's the most recklessly extravagant woman I've ever known. I always told Gerald he should tie everything up in a trust fund. But Rhoda got around him and he left nearly everything to her outright. Poor Gerald was a perfect fool about Rhoda. For some years he was a widower with a little girl and we all thought he'd never marry again. But he went west to inspect some of Aileen's mining properties, and met her in Nevada. She was not — I've approximated in New York, and that's one reason they were abroad so much."

"Then Kitty Jocelyn had no money to leave any one at the time of her death?"

"Not whatever."

"And you gave Mrs. Jocelyn the money for this coming-out party of Miss Jocelyn's?"

"Kitty had to have her chance in life. I am her nearest relative and I have no daughters of my own. I provided sixty thousands dollars."

"That's a pin cuorighit? Or was Miss Jocelyn to pay it back if she married some rich fellow?"

Edgar Jocelyn's pale face flushed angrily. "It was a gift, and I was only too glad to do it for Gerald's daughter."

"Mr. Jocelyn, do you know if anybody was in love with your niece?"

"I do not."

"What about Nicholas Janline?"

"His name was mentioned in connection with Kitty's. That's all I know about it. I should certainly have opposed such a marriage. I don't believe in marrying foreigners."

Foyle rose.

"For the time being."

Jocelyn's secretary, leading the way to the elevator, took a short cut through empty offices. They passed a display room where samples of Jocelyn's textiles were on view in glass cases, like precious objects of art.

Suddenly Foyle stopped in his tracks. "Are those I.F.C. dyes?" he asked.

The secretary looked surprised. "Why, yes. They're prints exclusive on our fabric dyes. We maintain a big research laboratory that is constantly seeking improvements."

Foyle frowned and peered into the show case where he saw, ranged four samples of silk taffeta — lemon, canary, butter color and bonbon.

It was a huge tome on a centre table. On the lefthand pages were stances, fit by a skein of cloth about two inches square. On the corresponding right-hand pages were trade names of each color and the chemical names. Usually there was one chemical mentioned in the compound itself and the intermediates through which the dye compound was made.

Inspector Foyle clutched on a light. "Here are the yellows," he said. "The four you noticed are Citron, Buttercup, Golden Rod and Sunset."

"Very interesting. Thanks." He closed the book with a snap. "Come on, Duff."

The Inspector and the detective left the secretary staring after them.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, April 11 — (CP)—Stocks were steady to strong in the early period, with buying mild weakness only in the western ols. Base metals had an index gain of 26 at noon. Trading continued in fairly heavy volume and the turnover was 2,804,000 shares for the first three hours.

Hdcna weakened to 95 and recovered to 1.15 for a net loss of 15 cents. Other moderately weak golds were Macassa, Proibster, Buffalo-Ankerite, Lake Dufault, Canada and Gunnar. Malartic Gold Fields, Siscoe, Pioneer and Toburn ruled higher.

Smelters, Labrador, Lake Dufault and Nickel were stronger base metals. Mining Corporation lost fifteen cents.

Industrials recorded to changes of importance: C.P.R. gained 1-4 and the senior oils, utilities and foods were steady. Canadian Food Products added a point.

Home Oil and Mid-Continent were weak issues in the western oil list.

WALL STREET

New York, April 11 (AP)—The stock market continued to advance today under leadership of steels, motors and western rails.

Volume expanded a bit on the upturn. Near the finish there was a rush in the leaders ranged from fractions to around two points.

Bonds showed general improvement. Commodities were mixed.

Buyers in the first hour were partial to such stocks as Santa Fe, Great Northern, Westinghouse, U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, Studebaker, U.S. Rubber and Goodyear.

Hiram Walker was up 1-4. Distillers Seagrams eased 1-3 and Lake Shore 1-4.

Major Concessions Won by Miners In New Agreement

Washington, April 11 (AP)—Wage negotiators wound up their work on a contract talks with broad concessions to bituminous miners today after a two-day session that included 200 strike-closed pits in seven states.

Last night's presidential seizure order came hours before announcement of agreement on a contract to supplant the one which expired March 31. The operators were reported to have acceded to a basic daily wage of $10 for miners now receiving $8.50 after John L. Lewis, United Mine Workers President, abandoned his 10-cent-a-ton royalty demand.

Already, Interior Secretary Ickes had stepped into his fourth wartime role as mine operator ordering the American flag down over every tipple made idle by a 10-day series of wildcat strikes that cut deep into steel production. The order seized, however, was fewer than seven pere net of the country's 8,478 set-coal mines, and these were to continued operations.

The heart of the long-stalemated contract talks came with an announcement from conference chairman Ben H. Wilson, an operator, that an agreement had been reached. He said only that the miner-operator conferees would meet at 9 p.m. (E.W.T.) today to approve the agreement. It then must be referred to the War Labor Board and Economic Stabilizer William H. Davis.

Cpl. Dale Sharpe Dies of Wounds

Another Belleville district soldier, one well known in local athletic circles, has given the supreme sacrifice while fighting for his country, his wife at Canniffon has been informed by Army headquarters. On Tuesday, Mrs. Dale Sharpe received word that her husband, Cpl. Dale Sharpe had died of wounds received while on active service.

Second son of Mr. and Mrs. George Sharpe of Corbyville, Cpl. Sharpe was born in that village attending school there and later Bloomfield collegiate. He was active in athletics and starred at baseball in district leagues. He enlisted in the spring of 1943 and went overseas in the early part of this year. He was a member of the Black Watch regiment.

Besides his parents he is survived by his wife and three small children, Dale, Judy and Glenn, the youngest who was born after his father went overseas. A brother, Kenneth works at Stewart-Warner-Alemite, while another brother, William is still at home. Also surviving is a sister, Mrs. Florence Bleecker of Canniffon.

ERNEST ROY LOGIE NOW CHIEF ENGINEER

Former division engineer at Belleville, Mr. Ernest Roy Logie of Toronto has been named chief engineer of the Central Region of the Canadian National Railways, it has been announced by J. F. Pringle, vice president and general manager of the system. Mr. Logie succeeds Barton Wheelwright, who has been appointed chief engineer of the system at Montreal.

Born at Chatham, N. B. Mr. Logie became associated with the maintenance department of the Canadian National Railways in 1912 when he was appointed resident engineer at Bonaventure. From March 1938 until February, 1940 he was division engineer at Belleville.

German Radio Blames Commander at Koenigsberg

London, April 11.—(CP)—The German radio admitted the fall of Koenigsberg today and attributed loss of the city to cowardice of the Fortress Commander, Gen. Lasch.

Moscow announced Tuesday night that Koenigsberg, defended along with 92,000 other Germans in the final reduction of the east Prussian capital, defence of which the enemy once more than 134,000 men.

'First in—First Out' In Defence Personnel Demobilization Plan

Ottawa, April 11 —(CP)— The army's demobilization program of "first in - first out" will apply to home defence personnel in the same way as it does to general servicemen, Douglas Abbott, parliamentary assistant to Defence Minister McNaughton, said yesterday in Commons in replying to questions from George S. White (PC-Hastings Peterborough).

Mr. White had asked whether home defence personnel would be discharged or retained in the army after Germany is defeated. Mr. Abbott said there would be a considerable amount of military duties required in Canada for some time after the armistice.

LARGEST COURT IN BELLEVILLE SEES 45 CASES

Court Collers Knitched by Some $415.54 - When the Majority of Cases Are Settled Prior to Proceedings

The largest number of cases ever presented on a local police court docket were heard before Magistrate T. Y. Wills here Tuesday when 45 cases were prepared and presented by Deputy Chief Arthur Sherman. Although several of the cases listed for trial were adjusted at the request of counsel the total amount of fines and costs paid into the coffers of the court amounted to $415.54.

Various charges constituted the court agenda, but for the greater part it was drunk charges and violations of the city parking bylaw that mounted the number. Inc 23 charges of intoxication and illegal possession of liquor, pleas of guilty were entered and accepted and fines paid before the morning's proceedings opened. The same applied in the matter of six or seven charges of violation of the city traffic regulations, which are being rigidly enforced by police.

That is the largest police court docket I can recall in my 35-odd years on the Belleville Police Department, remarked Deputy Chief Sherman following the court. Crown Attorney R. C. Donnan presented all but one case, which was a charge preferred under the Wartime Measures Act and prosecuted by K. E. Follwell, local barrister. Mr. R. D. Arnold, K.C., also was present in the court today.

POLICE COURT

Odell Lemon, formerly of Clopper and who took an automobile owned by a man in the last previously mentioned place, was sentenced to serve one month in the common jail by Magistrate Wills when arraigned in police court Tuesday after pleading guilty to the charge of joy-riding.

Lemon was arrested near Madoc last week when found in possession of a motor car owned by Mr. D. Dafoe. Wm. Mohrs, Jr., Tuesday in police court a charge of stealing a motorcar was reduced to that of joy-riding and Lemon pleaded guilty. Crown Attorney R. C. Donnan pointed out that Lemon was still in default of a fine previously imposed in city police court. For this delinquent act he was given 10 days to run concurrent with the initial term imposed.

George E. Johnson, Pinnacle St., was convicted of assaulting his wife and after being bound over to keep the peace for a period of one year he was released upon payment of $10.00 costs. "I don't remember, but I know I did not strike her," was the only comment made by the accused.

Fred Pesting and Fred Patterson, both of Picton, pleaded guilty to charges of intoxication and illegal possession of liquor, pleas of guilty were entered and accepted and fines paid before the morning's proceedings opened. The same applied in the matter of six or seven charges of violation of the city traffic regulations, which are being rigidly enforced by police.

Will Ask Government to Remove Remains of Old Grand Junction Dock

With the view of giving increased harbor facilities to the Belleville waterfront, the Federal government will be approached with a request to tender on what remains of the old Grand Junction Dock. It was decided at a meeting of the city council Harbor Improvement Commission, held Friday evening. The old dock was declared a navigation hazard by Harbor Master Mumford. It is used as fill at the south end of the Bolsover Dock property, recently acquired by Mayor Deroche Spence.

Mr. Fenwick, report of the meeting of Monday night's council meeting, Chairman of the Commission, Alderman Fred Chamberlain stated that if the above project were carried out 600 feet more dock space and approximately 80,000 feet of additional storage space would be provided.

Ald. Ellis was suggested that if the present Government docks were extended to a line with George St., and by doing some dredging, a suitable turning basin could be provided for boats coming into the new dock extension. It was also agreed that the inner harbor should be dredged and the government asked to replace the wall on the Victoria Park, out a drain, and build a culvert through the present Fireman's Park for spring flushing purposes.

Would Improve Harbor.

The latter work was stated to be necessary from a standpoint of health and also to provide greater water interest, and as the matter came under harbor improvement it was felt to be a government project and should be done with government finances. The work on the water front improvement from George Street was indicated to be a costly project and would have to be done by the city.

Present at the meeting were Mr. George Stokes, M.P., and Mr. Stuart Lasier, one of Canada's leading consulting engineers, and formerly of this city. These two men will present the matter to the proper authorities in Ottawa in a preliminary manner with the council later to present plans to the minister with a view of having early action.

City Engineer Charles Mott will prepare a revised plan of the work as outlined and briefs will be prepared on advantages to shipping, tourist accommodation and health, for presentation to the government.

Gilead

Gilead — The W.M.S. had its Easter Thank Offering on Friday last, which took the form of an open meeting.

It was opened with Mrs. Bertrand presiding. The devotional part was taken by Mrs. Howard Badgley, Mrs. Wilfred Clare, Mrs. John Lawrence and Mrs. Earl Wyole. Mrs. Fred Yorke welcomed the visiting societies and the following program was given by them: Duet by Mrs. Arthur Hall and Mrs. Willis Sills, of Carmel; reading, Mrs. McKenzie, of Plainfield; piano instrumental, Miss Joy Leland of Bethany; reading by Mrs. Mills and Mrs. Williams, of Canniton. Mrs. James Huffman introduced the guest speaker, Mrs. Stafford, of Belleville, who when a child attended the Gilead public school. She gave a very interesting address and chose for her theme the Whole Family, the Whole Church, and the Whole World." Her talk was very encouraging to small societies. "We must not get discouraged because we are small in numbers, for think that we are not doing much for we are a small part of the whole family of the Lord's children in the whole world."

Mrs. Ralsequah thanked Mrs. Stafford for her kindness in coming and giving such an interesting and inspiring address.

Closed with refreshments. The sum of $22 was received for the Thank Offering.

9th ARMY CROSSES ELBE

22-Mile Advance In 15 Hours Scored By 2nd Canadians

30 Netherlands Villages, Towns Liberated in Sweep

By ROSS MUNRO
(C.P. Press War Correspondent)

With the 1st Canadian Corps, April 12 (CP Cable)—The 2nd Canadian division, driving flat out through the north Holland toward the North Sea coast, has had advanced 22 miles in the last 15 hours and today is 45 Belsen, 25 miles south of Groningen.

Groningen is 13 miles from the coast and the principal town in this area. It may never be defended.

About 30 Netherlands villages and villages were liberated in this great sweep which brought the 2nd division 45 miles from the assembly division, which has been rolling north between the Ijssel division and the Ems river.

Opposition was negligible and all of northeast Holland may be liberated within a few days.

Advance In Kanonwagens

The 2nd division advanced in Kangaroos—armored troop-carriers —with Quebec troops, including French-speaking units, and Canadian infantry in the lead. The columns had trouble moving through the liberated Arnhem area because they were willing about in the narrow streets.

Among the towns freed were Assen, 10 miles east of Zwolle; Balkbrug, six miles north of Gennep; Hoogeveen, 8 miles northeast of Meppel; Emmen, 10 miles south of Hoogeveen, and Sunsique, five miles northeast of Hoogeveen.

All through this area link-ups have been made with Canadian paratroopers who had been roving the area since the airborne operation Saturday night. The paratroopers captured several bridges intact, which speeded the advance of the 2nd division.

Bridgehead Expanded.

The bridgehead west of the Ijssel river established by the 1st Canadian crossing late yesterday was extended by other Canadian troops who now is nearly two miles deep with a one-mile base along the river.

Resistance stiffened as crack infantry pushed inland and one counter-attack with tanks was reported. Of the bridgehead was driven off.

The attack was made over the area between Deventer and Zutphen on a bend in the 100-year-wide river three miles south of Deventer.

The Canadians were fighting in Wilp, three miles south of Deventer on the Deventer-Arnhem highway which was the main German supply perimeter was expanded. Wilp is eight miles south of Apeldoorn, where Queen Wilhelmina's summer home is situated, in high country which dominates the Ijssel runs north and south through Apeldoorn, which also is the junction for roads and railways in this Holland country.

Breach Barrier.

The assault over the Ijssel breached the first Canadian barrier in the way of Canadian liberation of the area to the great Netherlands cities of Amersfoort, Hilversum, Rotterdam, Amsterdam, The Hague and Utrecht.

The Canadians in the bridgehead took 190 prisoners last night, including some from the 346th German Grenadier Regiment, which normally is a crack defence unit.

It was announced by Army Headquarters that formations of the 1st Canadian Army Corps captured a total of 6,021 prisoners during the last 72 days.

While the front was expanded north and east in the bridgehead of the 3rd Canadian Division advanced 10 miles south of Deventer and took nearly 300 more in a thrust which carried it to a point 10 miles south of Zwolle, the last German-held Netherlands town before the Ijssel river, which now was extremely light.

Leading Polish troops reached a point east of the 2nd Canadian Division and 26 miles south of Groningen. The Poles were also believed to have been overrun by the 3rd Division, and the Polish units disclosed yesterday to be fighting again under Gen. Crerar's command.

Wild Rush of 4th Armored Div.

The wild rush of the 4th Canadian Armored division's bridgehead by the Ems river across the northwest German plain meanwhile was slowed somewhat, although armor has advanced at all points to a point 27 miles southwest of the city of Oldenburg, 30 miles from the coast, now occupied.

Today the 4th division is pushing east for a link-up with the British 2nd Army that would seal off the German forces in Holland and the North Sea ports.

The Polish 1st Armored Division in two days scored 15-mile advances northward and northwest of the Netherlands-German frontier town of Coevorden.

SPAIN BREAKS RELATIONS WITH JAPANESE GOVT.

Protests Bayonetting of Spanish Nationals in Philippines by Japs

Madrid, April 12 — (AP)—Spain has broken relations with Japan in protest against the bayonetting of Spanish Nationals in the Philippines by Japanese soldiers.

"Direct information of Spanish origin and officially confirmed has come to hand concerning the attack on Feb. 13 by Japanese troops on the Spanish Consulate at Manila, followed by the assassination of consular functionaries and other Spaniards there, and the wilful burning of buildings, in addition to many other outrages committed in flagrant desecration of the property of Spanish citizens.

"As a result of these exceptionally grave facts, the Spanish government, extremely chary nonetheless with the maintenance of friendly relations between the two countries, has resolved to break diplomatic relations with the government of Japan, while maintaining a demand for indemnity sent Japan for the loss of life and damage caused to Spanish citizens."

It was expected the Spanish government would intern Sumu and other Japanese diplomats until the repatriation of Spanish diplomats from Japan can be arranged.

Demand Made Public March 24

Spain made public the demand March 24 in notes of the first announcement of the atrocities came from Washington. Yakichiro Suma, Japanese minister, said this week the Japanese government had not received the Spanish protest April 7.

Besides the Manila Consulate incident, 250 men, women and children were massacred in the south of Negros, included many members of prominent Spanish families.

Spanish nationals in the Spanish press declared Japanese attacks on Spaniards and attempts to wipe out Spanish culture in the Philippines began at Singapore and had been repeated at Brandenburg, barely 30 miles west of Berlin.

GAS TRAINING CENTRE TAKEN

Final Objective Overrun

April 13 — (AP) — Allied troops today took over the big German army gas training centre, 30 miles northeast of Hannover, and thrust beyond the city's former front line, less than 50 miles away.

Weather Forecast

Western Provinces: Mostly cloudy with a few scattered showers tonight and tonight. Friday, generally fair and cool.

Superforts in Large Number Spill Destruction on Jap Homeland

Guam, April 12 (AP) — Superfortresses dealt another punishing blow at the Japanese homeland today, at 11 a.m. today (Tokyo time), as 150 or more, escorted by fighter planes, spilled explosives on two industrial areas.

The B29s roared over the big Nakajima Musashino aircraft engine plant in Tokyo's suburbs, while another force of superforts poured bombs on Nagoya, 170 miles south of Tokyo, five their second war mission over the enemy capital.

Twentieth Air Force headquarters in Washington termed the B29 force attacking the Mitsubishi O plant "very large," this could indicate many as 200 of the Marianas-based superbombers participated.

Fighters based on newly-conquered Iwo Jima, 750 miles south of Tokyo, flew their second war mission over the enemy capital.

BRITISH CROSS SECOND BARRIER AT SANTERNO R.

On Opposite End of Line Americans with Help of Partisans Capture Carrara

Rome, April 13 — (AP)—British 8th Army troops, battling heavy opposition, have pushed across a second barrier thrown up by the Germans at the Santerno River, while on the opposite end of the front American troops, assisted by Italian partisans, have captured Carrara, Allied headquarters announced today.

The Santerno River runs parallel to and 10 miles west of the Sesto Reno River line from which the 8th launched its new offensive four days ago.

Carrara is four miles north of Massa, west coast hub, the capture of which by the Allied 5th Army was announced yesterday.

(Meanwhile, in a message to Italian patriots behind German lines in northern Italy, Gen. Clark said the "final battle for the liberation of Italy have begun.

His warned, however, that the moment for co-ordinated action had not yet arrived. The initiative, he declared, rests on the Rome radio and recorded by the Federal Communications Commission.)

Dozens of bombs have been reduced to rubble around the stubborn German defences, fast and heavy concentrations in the new attacks.

Ostiglia, Destroyed

Ostiglia, which was one of the first towns taken by the 8th Army in the new drive, was destroyed. Only about 1,000 of its normal population of 19,000 remained, living through the bombardment in cellars.

Capture of Carrara apparently was by the 442nd Regiment, made up of Americans of Japanese ancestry, who had been spearheading the Allied advance for only half a mile from the town, a mile-and-a-quarter north of Massa.

The Germans obviously were putting up one of their "show piece" defences all along the Italian front —a stubborn bloody fight for every crossroad, despite the general situation inside Germany.

Partisan forces were out in support of the 8th Army ground forces during the night, attacking enemy troops in the Lugo area, 20 miles west of Lake Comacchio where enemy supplies were concentrated.

SAYS CHUTISTS CLOSE

Paris, April 12 — (AP) — A report attributed to French sources in Switzerland declared reinforcements aided tonight Allied paratroops who had been rushed by air to Brandenburg, barely 30 miles west of Berlin.

General Election For Ontario on Monday June 11

Toronto, April 12 — (CP)—Premier Drew today announced that the Ontario general election will be held Monday, June 11.

He said: "The Ontario election date has been fixed for June 11. Writs are issuing for that date. Regulations have been passed by the government making effective provision for taking active service votes overseas and in Canada. A more detailed statement explaining the method of taking the vote will be issued later in the day."

Premier Issues Statement.

The Cabinet meeting ended about 12.02 p.m., and immediately afterwards the Premier issued the statement: "The Cabinet has considered its meeting and it was presumed at Queen's Park it would discuss the statement promised by the Premier for later in the day.

The Premier followed a two-day visit to Ottawa this week by Attorney-General Blackwell, Chief Election Officer Alex Lewis and other officials to discuss with them certain arrangements for taking the Active Service vote.

The election is brought on by the defeat of Premier Drew's Progressive Conservative government in the Legislature, March 22, by the combined Gordon Conservative, the C.C.F., Liberals, Labor-Progressive and Independent on a C.C.F. amendment to the address in reply to the Speech from the Throne. The Drew administration government had not taken proper steps to provide for the farm problems and to carry out the program on which it was elected in office in the last election August 4, 1943.

MEMBERS SHOW INTEREST IN REHABILITATION

Sharp Exchange Between Leaders Over Time of Sitting Heard

By FRANK FLAHERTY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, April 12 — (CP) — Casting their eyes forward into the post-war period members of the House are showing keen interest in plans for economic reconstruction and veterans' rehabilitation.

These subjects are expected to call for a great deal of discussion during the few days remaining of the short pre-election session which became evident last night after Mutual Co-operation Minister Gardiner, minister of reconstruction, delivered a report on the munitions and supply department and Veterans Minister Mackenzie began talking about reconstruction.

Mr. Howe promised his statement on reconstruction for today.

A sharp exchange between leaders at the government and opposition at the time of finishing the session indicated Prime Minister Mackenzie King and Opposition Leader Conservative Drew, House Leader, suggested the House sit in the morning starting tomorrow and on Saturday with a view to finishing Saturday night.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King said he saw no point in that unless there was assurance that the business would be finished by Saturday night. Mr. Drew replied that he would speak only for his own party and could give no assurance that other members, Liberals and Independents, would not prolong discussion.

King Makes Charge

Mr. King charged that the Progressive Conservative party was being run by "some little group outside the House and said the opposition parties in the House were the government in the war effort by opposing." Defence Minister McNaughton in the City of Toronto by-election Feb. 5.

Since the last general election the government had never been able to find the leader of the opposition on his own, the Prime Minister said, since "some little group outside."

FALL OF VIENNA APPEARS TO BE MATTER OF HOURS

Red Tanks Driving Swiftly for Bavarian Frontier, Reported Near Danube Bend

London, April 12 (CP) — Russian tanks, driving swiftly for the Bavarian frontier, were reported 10 more reached the Danube bend 43 miles west of Vienna today as other Soviet troops virtually completed occupation of the Austrian capital.

"The Berlin radio said Soviet armored spearheads had penetrated Sendelbach, 10 miles from Linz, 75 miles from Vienna and little more than 115 miles from Berchtesgaden, mountain-top retreat of Hitler.

Fall of vienna appeared to be only a matter of hours as mopping-up of the last enemy resistance progressed in the capital.

Russian shock troops yesterday battled across the Danube canal inside the capital, gaining control of half the nine-mile-long inland waterway, and in the area where the Germans were making a last stand.

Nine-tenths of the major part of the city south of the Danube already was in Soviet hands.

Northeast of the capital the Russians slashed one of the last German escape routes—a secondary railroad running south to Tandenburg and the Czechoslovak city of Brunn (Brno).

A great tank battle raged in that area as the Germans sought to check the Soviet drive at the critical Ivan S. Malinovsky's 2nd. Ukrainian army sweeping through and north of Vienna.

Clear Supply Road.

In Czechoslovakia, meanwhile, the 2nd. and 4th. Ukrainian armies linked up in the Carpathian mountains and cleared a supply road from Uzhgorod to Vienna for the first time.

Tolbukhin's forces captured one of the Danube bridges in contact and raced across under mortar fire, aiding the Russian drive to power station and clearing the entire Prater Park area, chief amusement centre of the city. Others broke into the Jewish quarter of Leopoldstadt on the last three districts held by the Germans.

The Soviet high command announced 1,000 more Germans were killed into the German Volkssturm were joining the Red Army and that anti-Nazi demonstrations had taken place in several Austrian towns.

The announcement of the first official Russian indication of Austrian opposition to the Nazis came as Moscow's pronto Sunday that diplomatic independence would be restored and that Russia would be unable to change Austria's social system.

Allied Planes Rake Berlin and Nazi Shipping

London, April 12. (CP) — Allied planes raked Berlin with bombs for the second time in daylight following blows to German shipping and pressed their methodical pre-D-Day campaign against Germany's air defences.

Yesterday R.A.F. Mosquitos visited the battered German capital and unloaded 2,000-pound blockbusters, running up the total there in the last two nights and 36 in the last 46 days.

Five German merchant vessels were sunk late yesterday by Beaufighters and Mosquitos of the R.A.F. Coastal Command during their stepped-up attacks on enemy shipping off Norway.

Allied planes destroyed 112 more German aircraft — 39 on the ground and 80 on the ground—in operations Wednesday and Wednesday of enemy planes knocked out in the two days.

R.A.F. Typhoons combing Holland blew up what was believed to be a big flying bomb supply, the pilots reported seeing a tremendous explosion and numerous fires followed their bombing.

Last Barrier Before Berlin Forced Giving Tanks, Armor 57-Mile Clear Run to Capital

Other Units Drive for Leipzig And Junction With Russians

By JAMES M. LONG

Paris, April 12 —(AP)— The U. S. 9th Army crossed the Elbe river today and began beating along the last 57 clear miles toward Berlin.

The last river before the German capital was forced by the 2nd Armored Division, which blazed more than 50 miles to Magdeburg in a 12-hour dash yesterday. Precise site of the crossing was not announced.

The 2nd Armored Division "can be at the Brandenburg Gate in Berlin by tomorrow night or Saturday morning" if ordered to attack and occupy the capital unless the Germans shift forces from the Russian front, Robert Bunce, AP correspondent, reported from near Magdeburg. The German defences were crumbled. The Elbe had been crossed by a conqueror for the first time since Napoleon.

Large and important cities toppled. Among them were Wolmar, Essen, Cobnitz, Northausen, Schwelnfurt, Halberstadt, Emmen in Holland, Neustadt and, by German account, the Ruhr coal and steel centre of Bochum.

Industrial falling were Brunswick, Dortmund, Hellbronn and Erfurt. The Germans said Bremen was under all-out British 2nd Army assault; the 9th Army imminently threatened Magdeburg.

One report placed American tanks near Halle, 31 miles from Leipzig. Infantry following the swift tanks of the 3rd Army beat to within 40 miles of Leipzig and 90 of Dresden. A junction with the Russians may come between those two great Saxony cities within a week.

15 Miles from Leipzig

The U.S. 1st, 3rd Army and at least parts of the 3rd, were driving hard for Leipzig and a juncture with the Russians which would sever Germany's armies in another pocket placed American tanks in the Halle area, 15 miles from Leipzig.

The 9th Army, on the last river barrier before Berlin, was about 115 miles from the Russians.

The 3rd. Army reached the outskirts of Erfurt, capital of the German republic, and captured Weimar, 15 miles southeast of Coburg and 43 Czechoslovakian. Infantry followed hot tanks marched and rode to points 6 miles southwest of Leipzig and 95 miles of Dresden.

The full extent of the 3rd. Army drive was masked by a German radio blackout. The 9th. Armored Division raced 50 miles across Central Germany yesterday and the 4th Armored Division gained 35.

Other important cities fall in the last 24 hours. These included the steel and coal Ruhr centre of Essen (634,000); Germany's 14th city; the central German supply town of Nordhausen (35,000); historic Cluny (30,000); and the Dutch city of Emmen (30,000).

Fighting continued in Brunswick (301,900); Dortmund (337,000); Bochum (320,000); Kassel (164,161); Halberstadt (56,000); Celle (35,000) and Pelheim (12,000).

In the Magdeburg area, where 5 bridges existed (the 4th Army's Elbe, the 9th. Army was 115 miles from Russian lines east of Berlin. The 9th. Army Armies generally were closer in the narrowing waist of Germany.

Stars and Stripes, the American army newspaper, quoted U.S. 9th. Air Force sources that American tanks were nearing Halle (320,561), 13 miles southwest of Leipzig (711,-586), but this was not confirmed at The Netherlands Government-in-Exile official officially announced 1st. Army troops had entered Czechoslovakia — was 48 miles from Leipzig. Lt.-Gen. Hodges' tanks had pushed within 40 miles of Leipzig on the approaches of Leipzig, 30 miles from Halle.

Aerial attacks which destroyed or damaged 120 German tanks near Halle suggested strongly that stiffer tie 1st. or 3rd. Army or both was in the area.

Two 3rd. Army tank divisions made gains yesterday in spite of 15 and 25 miles before the blackout closed down. When the 4th. and 11th. Armored Divisions took off the 3rd. Army was 46 miles from Czechoslovakia. Their gains could place them close to the border of that republic. The blackout suggested that the tanks might have reached it. Without an escape route of the disorganized and shattered German army units heading for the Alpine national redoubt in south Bavaria, where Hitler is reported planning his final "operation Gotterdaemmerung."

Crumbling German resistance stiffened somewhat as the enemy strove mightily to defend the North and Baltic coasts. Bremen, Hamburg and Wilhelmshaven along the Frisian coast remained in Nazi hands.

At last report Canadian troops at Delfz were at the Ems mouth. Hamburg With the Russian offensive across the Oder-Neisse Allied hop by Jhaws which made Polish supply of Berlin possible, it appeared likelihood that the western Allies yet would be the first to reach the Baltic coastline. Further inland the late Wehrmacht pulled up within 27 miles of Berlin's Unter Den Linden—but 5 strikes still were more than 100 miles from the capital.

Operate as Highway.

The 9th. Army's 2nd. Armored Division reached the Elbe at an undisclosed place near Magdeburg on a bridge near for the German defenders. The 2nd. Division, operating along the Berlin superhighway, reached the Elbe river five miles north of Magdeburg, a river which flows through a region where synthetic oil plant and plane engine factories are located. Most of Magdeburg's 340,000 pre-war population was evacuated.

Tens of thousands of slave laborers were in the area, among the most spectacular of the war on German soil. There was no immediate indication whether the Magdeburg bridge had been blown. Only 60 miles further east the collapse of German resistance made it possible for more than 5 bridges might have been taken intact.

Leads River Near Magdeburg.

The Germans said the American infantry reached the Elbe 11 miles south of Magdeburg in the area of Schoenbeck, 63 miles from Berlin.

Obviously, it might be left of the Germans to blow up the bridges along the stiffened eastern line, but enemy weak link in some of the divisions along the Russian front and just then against the Allied push.

That might explain the presence of the Russians in the Brunswick number of German tanks seen since Allied armor crossed the Rhine.

But not of the immediate, decisive, the hard-pressed Wehrmacht has been unable to stop the rush of the victorious pincers. There was no indication that it will now. The Germans were fighting hard with 88s and Tiger tanks, but it was not the manpower to stem the tide of 1,250,000 or more combat troops of the Americans and Britons moving against them day after day.

Moscow, April 12 — (AP) — The Soviet Union and Yugoslavia concluded a 20-year friendship and mutual assistance agreement today and early ratification was expected at a meeting of Premier Tito and Foreign Minister Molotov for Russia.

The pact, contains a one-year cancellation clause whereby either party may denounce it one year before the 20-year period expires. Otherwise it is automatically valid for another five-year period until one party cancels it a year before expiration of any five-year period.

The Soviet people will receive this treaty with feelings of satisfaction," said an editorial in the government newspaper Isvestia. "It has two main aims — to continue the fight and to continue friendship and close collaboration after the war."

Isvestia praised the part played by the Yugoslav resistance forces against the Germans, declaring "united down their arms and cease fighting when the enemy was assaulting Belgrade in the previous days of the war. . . ."

The treaty, said Mr. Molotov, "strengthens the relations of friendship and closes collaboration formulated in the agreement of April 11, 1941." S. R. and Yugoslavia in their joint conduct of the war against Germany, the German invaders." He added that it is also aimed at the United Nations in establishing a "firm peace and security in Europe."

PTE. C. V. JACKSON DIES OF WOUNDS

Names of two Hastings County soldiers are listed in the 941st Canadian army casualty list released for today's publication, one as having died of wounds and another reported as slightly wounded.

A Trenton soldier, Pte. Charles V. Jackson, son of Mrs. Vera Jackson, 31 Cedar Street, Trenton, has died of wounds, while Spr. Ronald W. Scott, son of Mrs. Millie Scott, Maynooth, is reported as slightly wounded.

KINGSTON FIREMEN REQUEST MORE MONEY

Members of the Kingston Fire Department are requesting an increase of 12 per cent in their salary schedule, according to a report in the Kingston Whig Standard. As salary schedules for other departments throughout Ontario were not at hand, however, members of the Fire and Light Committee postponed action on the request until a later date.

THREE VALUABLE RINGS STOLEN FROM HOUSE

Burglars are reported to have entered the residence at 125 West Bridge St. and stolen three valuable rings as well as over $5.00 in cash. The money and rings belonged to Mrs. Blanche Wagner, who reported the articles missing yesterday. A two-stone diamond ring, as well as one set in pearls and another with amethysts were described as the rings missing. Police were told the money and rings were stolen from Mrs. Wagner's purse. The matter is being more fully investigated today.

40 Hours Adoration At St. Michael's Is Concluded

The concluding ceremonies of the Forty Hours Adoration on Tuesday evening will long be remembered by the vast congregation which filled to capacity the Church of St. Michael The Archangel. After the recitation of the Act of Consecration by Rev. R. J. Rowell, of Kingston, a sermon on the real presence of Christ was delivered by Rev. J. G. Hanley, of the Canadian Register, Kingston. Messrs. Edward Brown and Lester Shiels led a large choir of pupils of St. Michael's Academy in the chanting of the Litany of the Saints. His Grace, Archbishop J. A. O'Sullivan, D.D. Kingston, carried the gilded monstrance containing the Sacred Host under a beautiful canopy of gold cloth borne by four members of the Holy Name Society. Other societies represented in the procession about the church were the Fourth Degree Knights of Columbus, the Children of Mary, the Holy Angel Sodality, as well as over fifty altar boys in red, black and white cassocks.

The parish priest, Monsignor J. F. Nicholson was assisted by Very Rev. Dean E. Lacey, of Napanee, who acted as deacon of the solemn ceremonies, also Rev. J. V. Meagher of Stoco, as sub deacon. Other clergy present were Rev. Charles O'Gorman, Marysville; Rev. J. Carley, Trenton; Rev C. E. Baker and Rev. A. L. O'Donnell, Belleville. His Grace the Archbishop expressed his pleasure at being present in the parish and congratulated the people on the magnificent faith they had displayed. Beautiful Spring flowers and lights adorned the altar throughout the ceremonies.

Police Blotter

Residents at No. 28 Charlotte St. complained to police yesterday that a valuable kiddie's wagon had been stolen from their verandah. The wagon was equipped with rubber tires and no doubt was taken by some child.

Occupants of an upstairs apartment at 212 East Dundas St. complained to police that acid had been thrown about their furniture during their absence from home Wednesday afternoon. Inspector Hayes investigated and found that a dark colored substance had been thrown with reckless abandon about the living room furniture damaging it beyond repair. The matter is to be thoroughly investigated as the wilful damage to private property is a serious offence, police stated today.

Other disturbances were reported in an apartment situated at [illegible] Front St., where a woman is alleged to have run rampant breaking down a door and damaging furniture inside a relative's domicile.

AMBULANCE PLANE

A French doctor in the First Great War is believed to have invented the first ambulance airplane ever used.

Eight Discharged Veterans Hired By C.N.R. in City

Railroading as a life vocation seems to be in favor by returned veterans of the present war, according to Mr. Albert Jones, locomotive foreman, who reported that eight discharged veterans have been hired with the Canadian National Railways here.

It's a considerable change from operating the rear turret guns of an R.C.A.F. bomber on bombing missions over Germany to firing a C.N.R. yard locomotive, but that is the move which Flying Officer Howard Welch, D.F.M., recently took. On Tuesday he completed his trial runs and last night went to work as fireman on a local switching engine.

Winner of the Distinguished Flying Medal for service during his first operational flight overseas, the former air gunner completed the equivalent of two operational tours before he was returned to Canada. He was given 30 days' leave and then honorably discharged from the airforce. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Welch, MacDonald Ave., and has a brother, also an air gunner, in the Air Force overseas.

Obituary

MRS. WILLIAM EDWARDS
(River Valley)

After a lingering illness, there passed away in Belleville General Hospital on Wednesday, April 11, Elizabeth Ida Carr, the wife of William Edwards of River Valley. The greater part of her life was spent in Toronto. She leaves besides her husband five sons, George, Bernard, Arthur and Gordon, all of Toronto, and Maynard of Detroit. She also leaves two sisters, Mrs. Arthur Thoms, of Oakville; Mrs. Gorie Hearns, of Frankford and one brother, Robert Carr, of Toronto.

The funeral will be held at her late home in River Valley near Stirling on Friday. Burial in the family plot in Frankford Cemetery.

GEORGE ALBERT PALMER

Former Sidney township farmer, Mr. George Albert Palmer, 276 Coleman Street, died in the Belleville General Hospital early Thursday morning following an illness of one week. He was in his 76th year.

Son of the late Mr. and Mrs. George Palmer, the deceased was born in Shannonville but for many years was a successful farmer in the Johnstown district, Sidney Township. Retiring from the farm he resided with his son for some time near Frankford and for the last three years had lived retired in the city.

He was associated with the United Church and was highly esteemed by all who knew him. Old friends will regret to learn of his death.

Surviving him are one daughter, Miss Lulu Palmer, at home, and one son, Kenneth Palmer, of Frankford. His wife, the former Hattie Grills, died some years ago.

MRS. EMMA TAYLOR
(Madoc)

Madoc, April 12 (Special)—Mrs. Emma Taylor, widow of Horace Taylor, died at her home here on Tuesday evening, April 10th., after an illness of several months' duration.

The late Mrs. Taylor who was in her 70th. year, was born at Actinolite and was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. George Parks. All her life was passed in this district and she was well esteemed. She was a member of the Standard Church.

Surviving her are one daughter, Mrs. Slaght of Dresden, Ontario; one adopted daughter, Miss Doreen Taylor Madoc; three brothers William Park and Arthur Park, both of Madoc, and Frank Park of Cooper; one sister, Mrs. Wannamaker of Stirling.

The funeral took place Thursday afternoon, April 12th, and the service in the home and at Lakeview cemetery was conducted by the Rev. W. R. Schamehorn.

EMMANUEL BOYER
(Herchimer Avenue)

Seized with a heart attack late Tuesday, Emmanuel Boyer, died suddenly early this Thursday morning at his residence, Herchimer Avenue. He was born in Quyon, Quebec, 60 years ago, being the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Basil Boyer and for the past four years has resided in this district being a valued employee of the Canadian Industrial Alcohol Company of Corbyville and his death will bring regret to a wide circle of friends. He was a member of St. Michael's Church and a member of the Holy Name Society and leaves to mourn his wife, the former Margaret Beaudy, two sons, Lawrence and Dolphus at home, six daughters, Mrs. Annie Chycalysek, Quebec City; Mrs. Catherine Bourgeou, Belleville; Mrs. Dorothy Stephenson, Belleville; Miss Lillian, Miss Evelyn, Miss Margaret Boyer also of Belleville and three sisters Mrs. Nelson LaSalle, Westboro, Mrs. David Martial, Hull, Que., and Mrs. J. Gagnon, Schrieber, Ont.

Resting at the Corrigan and O'Brien Funeral Home, the funeral announcement will be made later.

Oh, For Life of Sailor

If and when the German armies in Europe surrender to victorious Allied forces, V-E Day, (Victory in Europe) will be formally announced in Belleville by the blowing of locomotive and factory whistles, sirens, ringing of church bells and other noise-making apparatus on a pre-arranged signal.

This decision was reached by the V-E Day Committee at a special meeting called by Mayor Frank Follwell in the city hall yesterday afternoon.

Locomotive engines in railway yards, and other steam whistles will signalize the announcement by the continued blowing of three short and one long blast, the Morse code for the letter "V".

Official announcement will come from the office of Mayor Follwell, who will advise railway, church, police and other city officials. Centralization of the release of the announcement is being done in order to prevent the general spread of any false rumors to the effect, that hostilities in Europe have ceased.

It was decided by the committee in session to order the local signal of receipt of the announcement thirty minutes after it has been received by the Mayor from official government sources.

Program to be Given.

The program for V-E and subsequent days will appear in a large advertisement in this newspaper on Saturday. It is virtually unchanged from that laid down at a previous meeting of the committee.

From a highly authoritative source, the committee learned that the Secretary of State has recommended to the government that to issue a radio announcement to the general public asking it to wait for the official announcement of German surrender, from government sources; that the government following the official announcement proclaim a general holiday to be held at a suitable date; that the Sunday following be named the day for special religious observances, and that the manner of celebrations be left to local authorities.

The government, however, the source stated, has not thus far concurred in the recommendation, but action is expected in the near future.

Committee Secretary Harold Bateman was authorized to communicate with the Secretary of State for information regarding the official announcement of the day, and other data pertaining to it.

Officers of Sea Cadet Corps Enjoy Course

Hundreds of business and professional men from all parts of Canada, officers in the Royal Canadian Sea Cadets Corps, attended a special course of instruction series held at H.M.C.S. "Cornwallis," largest naval training base in the British Empire.

These courses were arranged by the Naval Service in conjunction with the Navy League of Canada, which sponsors the seacadet movement. A highlight of each two-weeks course was a three-day sea trip aboard Canadian warships on active service. Aboard ship, the sea cadet officers stood watches and carried out the duties of ordinary seamen.

Four officers of the Quinte Sea Cadet Corps of Belleville attended one of these courses. Included were Lieut. W. Fox, Lt. E. Zeran, Sub. Lieut. J Howe and Sub. Lt. C Gibson.

Thrills of seagoing life were experienced by the local officers, one of which was provided by a trip on a submarine across the Bay of Fundy from St. John's, N.B. to Digby, Nova Scotia.

Did Not Submerge.

"The sub, did not submerge," one of the officers smiled," but that did not make much difference. The water was so rough that we thought we were submerged.

Some of the cadet officers spent two days at sea aboard corvettes and others aboard minesweepers. They lived on board a Canadian warship under actual active service conditions and stated that this part of the two weeks training was one of the enjoyable phases of the course.

The rest of the time was spent ashore, where they underwent training in seamanship, drill, gunnery and other parts of the syllabus. They did actual firing at sea at specially arranged targets, and the roar of the guns and the geysers of water sent up by exploding four-inch and other calibre shells added to the reality of the cruise.

Given Wardroom Dinner.

The officers were given a typical naval wardroom dinner at the conclusion of the course where the "King" and the "wine" was observed in traditional naval custom.

The Belleville Quinte Sea Cadet Corps is busy at present with its spring training, and officers stated today that there are vacancies for recruits from fourteen years of age upward. The Corps trains every Monday and Thursday nights at headquarters at the Collegiate Institute.

Kiwanis Show Sparkles with Music, Comedy

The rollicking tuneful musical comedy "Pack up Your Troubles" being staged by the Kiwanis Club here on May 7-8-9 for the benefit of the club's Children's Camp is well into rehearsal and neutral observers predict the show to be one of the best staged by local talent in many years.

A mixed chorus of forty voices and an orchestra of ten pieces under the baton of Mr. E. Reg. Hinchey will promulgate the many delightful musical numbers, while outstanding soloists of the city will be heard in melodies of yesteryear and the present.

The show moves along at a smooth rhythmic tempo interspersed with hilarious comedy, that is bound to keep audiences on seat-edge.

For example, the opening number in which the entire company appears is one of the big musical efforts of the show, embracing, opera, the classics, Strauss, "boogie-woogie" and ballad Soloists in this offering are Alfred Evans, Wallace Muir, Ethel Smith, Harold Carruthers and George Cooper.

Another musical highlight of the show is the presentation of a medley of fifteen melodies written by Irving Berlin and drafted into a musical whole in a special arrangement. Some of the comedy is being provided by the B.C.I. quartet.

Many other features and numbers sparkle the offering and the whole should make a decided hit with musical comedy lovers, and those who like high class entertainment. It is being staged under the direction of Mr. T. E. Schwab, entertainment impresario of the Kiwanis Club.

CONDEMNED TO DEATH

Paris, April 12 — (AP) — Lucien Henri Rottee, former Vichy Chief of Detectives, yesterday was condemned to death at the close of a trial in which he was charged with denouncing and arresting French resistance patriots and torturing them for sheer love of torture.

Herbert Watt President Of Holstein Club

Prominent Foxboro district farmer, Mr Herbert Watt, 6th concession Sidney township, was named president of the Hastings County Holstein Club as members met for their annual meeting in the agricultural office in Stirling early in the week.

Honorary president of the club is Mr. Kenneth Caskey of Madoc, with vice president being Ronald Longwell of Foxboro and secretary treasurer, H. Lynn Fair of Stirling.

One of the features of the meeting was the presentation of a Superior Production Certificate to Ronald Longwell by Mr. F. Roy Ormiston, Holstein fieldman for Central Ontario. The certificate was presented to Mr. Longwell for the outstanding production record of one of his herd, Posch Colantha Jessie. This cow was fifth for milk production and second for butter fat in her junior three-year old class for the Dominion of Canada in 1944. The cow produced 17,185 pounds of milk containing 609 pounds of butterfat in a 305 day test on twice a day milking.

Mr. Ormiston also spoke to the club on the general dairy cattle situation and prophesied that there is likely to be a good market for Holsteins in Great Britain following the war. He also answered questions regarding selective registration and pointed out that the grading of Holstein herds for Hastings would be done during the summer.

Directors of the club named were Rawdon, Jas. Eggleson, Harold, and Allan McComb, Bonarlaw; Huntingdon, Sam Donnan, West Huntingdon; Hungerford, B. J. Hunt and Harry Coulter of Tweed; Marmora, Harry Neal, Marmora; Madoc, Earl Burnside and Max Burnside, both of Madoc; Sidney, Fred Campbell, Foxboro and E. Masse, Belleville; Thurlow, Jack Parrott, Belleville and Clifford Ketcheson, Halloway; Tyendinaga, J. E. Walsh of Shannonville.

GALE DEFINED

A gale is a wind of considerable power, stronger than a breeze, but not severe enough to be called a storm.

CARD OF THANKS

Mrs. Gordon Burkholder and family wish to thank their many friends for the kind expressions of sympathy extended to them in their recent sad bereavement in the loss of a loving mother and grandmother, Mrs. Esther Hasledon, of Toronto.

Seed Cleaning Plants in County In Full Operation

To meet with the demand for seed grain to be sown in seeding operations now under full swing, seed cleaning plants in the Hastings area are operating at full swing, according to the Provincial Department of Agriculture weekly crop report. Very little work was done on the land during the past week because of the wet weather, but with fields again drying cultivation and seeding has again resumed.

As result of the feed shortage on some farms and with ideal growing conditions bringing grass on rapidly some young cattle have already been turned out to pasture, it is reported. Weanling pigs are in strong demand and are selling up to $8 each depending upon quality. Experienced farm help is very scarce.

Livestock is in about average condition for the time of year with some ten carloads having been shipped from the Prince Edward district last week. These were made up chiefly of calves and hogs. Two cars of springers were also shipped with American buyers looking for August and September calving cows, now.

18TH CENTURY LOTTERIES

In England authorised lotteries were established as early as 1569 and from 1709 to 1824 the government annually raised large sums by lotteries.

Fleet Air Arm Across World

At dawn on March 26 British carrier borne aircraft delivered a smashing attack against Japanese targets in the Sakashima group of islands. A few days earlier on the other side of the world British naval fighter pilots, flying in gales and snowstorms, had brought an important convoy safely to North Russia through repeated attacks by German torpedo-carrying aircraft. On April 1, an Admiralty announcement told the story, how the Naval Air Arm had made a series of significant enemy shipping in the Alesund and Trondheim areas of Norway, during the course of which they shot down three ME-109's without loss to themselves.

The Air Arm, which is capable of operating simultaneously and in strength in areas so widely separated both geographically and climatically as the Arctic and the Pacific, is obviously a very different type of force to that with which the British navy went to war in September, 1939. There were then only seven operational aircraft carriers. The Naval Air Arm was very short of aircraft, and those which they did have were too slow for modern warfare. There were not enough pilots and the training scheme for the immediate future was inadequate to meet the demands caused by a high casualty rate and an already expanding service.

Many factors have contributed towards the rapid growth of the Naval Air Arm. Very important among these are the various types of aid given by the United States. Under Lend-Lease they have supplied the navy with many of its best fighting and bombing aircraft. Also under Lend-Lease they have built for the British navy a powerful force of escort carriers which have been invaluable in the Battle of the Atlantic and as bases for the air covering forces in the invasions of Salerno and the South of France.

But most important of all, is the complete realisation by naval planners and administrators that air is no longer of any use unless it is firmly allied to air power over the sea. This realization is why the Naval Air Arm today is the spearhead of the Royal Navy's striking force stand in every part of the world. It was H.M.S. Illustrious, now the flagship of Rear Admiral Vian and in the forefront of the British attack on the Japanese in their Sumatra waters, which put over four years ago carried her Swordfish aircraft so bravely to within 170 miles of Taranto to launch them into the epic attack culminating in the destruction of half the Italian battle fleet. Which at the same time proved conclusively the immense striking power of carrier borne aircraft.

Speeding Through Germany

Allied columns are now busy cutting across Germany devouring space at a great rate that must terrify all Germans. Never in history have columns sped with so great speed and effectiveness. Passage of a brief space of time changes the position of the battlefronds. On Tuesday afternoon the column nearest to Berlin was about 127 miles away. Yesterday afternoon it was about one hundred miles away and in a little while the news came the forces of the U. S. 9th Army were within ninety miles of the Reich capital.

Airplanes gave an early indication of the tempo of modern war. Hitler's blitzkrieg showed it. The fall of the Low Countries and France came with unbelievable swiftness in 1940.

Then the Allies began to build their strength better than Hitler knew and there has come into being the greatest force of military strength in all history, Allied power, assembled to crush militarism and Nazidom's unholy aggression. It is the power that is cutting Germany to pieces today.

In the invasion of Normandy was disclosed the might of the Western Allies. Here modern armed power was seen at its greatest up to that time and again it is being revealed today on the soil of Germany. It has been developing and coming into its own in the successes of the North African campaign.

In the invasion of Europe last year Allied co-ordination showed its effectiveness. Since the crossing of the Rhine, Germany has been penetrated at many points, the Germans being unable to resist Allied power and the country has been seen falling apart.

Allied might is at its greatest now. The defeats suffered by Germany have lost her much territory and the decreasing size of her territory has intensified the war upon the enemy.

Never has mankind witnessed such a struggle, for today men occupy as it were a seat in the world theatre and look down upon the stage which is a whole world of many. The modern age knows more of war than people of other generations.

With fast armor the conquest of Germany is speeded up by united strength. Armor and co-ordination of services work to perfection.

Germany could have escaped this punishment for she was warned that continued resistance would mean her annihilation as the troubles of the Germans. But the Hitlerites defiantly and stubbornly continued to battle on.

So what is taking place today is that Germany is being beaten in every respect and field of war as no other nation was ever defeated in all history.

Age of the Uncommon Man

(Montreal Herald)

Said Mr. Assheton recently:

"I have seen it said frequently that this will be an age of the common man . . . I do not believe there is any such thing as the common man. Men and women love differences and won't tolerate regimenters who want to impose sameness upon them . . ."

We believe that he is right as far as Britain is concerned, and we hope that his words are applicable to Canada.

May the future prove that we are all uncommon men, resistant to regimentation save under the artificial conditions created by war.

Painted Textiles

(London Daily Mail)

A British textile printing company has perfected a new process of screen-painting on textiles which, it claims, will put British fabrics ahead of the world.

In the new technique silk, satin and rayon are printed in designs of from 14 to 18 colors on one material.

Buyers from France say that the new process will revolutionize the British textile trade. Nothing of this exquisite nature had come from the Continent. Orders worth over $120,000 have already come in.

Privations Only by Comparison

(Baltimore Sun)

The point is that any privations faced by Americans this year will be privations only by comparison with the lush food years of recent date. Every American will eat enough to eat. The foods sent abroad for lend-lease and relief will be part of a plan first to make the peace and then to keep it. And agriculture in the liberated areas will be able to take hold pretty well once the first harvest is in. Soft-headed prodigality in the disposition of food abroad, of course, we do not want. But ill-tempered squawking from people who even in 1945 will be the best-fed in the world would be hard to take.

Good thoughts are blessed guests and should be heartily welcomed, well fed and much sought after. Like rose leaves they give out a sweet smell if laid up in a jar of memory.—Spurgeon.

Whatever you would have your children become, strive to exhibit in your own lives and conversation.—Mrs. Sigourney.

Absence of Fighting Made Landing On Beachhead Unique Experience

By ERNIE PYLE

Okinawa (by Navy radio)—Never before has there been an invasion beach like Okinawa.

There wasn't a dead or wounded man in the entire sector of it. Medical corpsmen were sitting among their packs of bandages, their stretchers and stretchers, with nothing to do.

There wasn't a single burning vehicle, nor a single boat lying wrecked on the beach or in the water.

The carnage that is almost inevitable on an invasion was wonderfully and happily absent.

There was hardly anybody at all on the beach when we landed. A few assault waves ahead of us had pushed inland. And all that vast water of people and machines that make a beach hum with work was still somewhere out at sea.

The bulldozers and the jeeps had not yet arrived. There was no activity and hardly any sound. It was almost as though we were the original explorers.

Our little party, which was the regimental staff, moved to the foot of a bluff about 100 yards back of the beach. It was full of sand and our naval gunfire had made a rubble at the foot of the bluff. But several cave mouths still gapped open.

We decided to set up there until the colonel could get the picture in his mind, through the reconnaissance by runners, of just what was going on.

There was about a hundred men with us, in addition to the officers. The men were under First Sergt. Andy Anderson, from Waxahachie, Texas. The first thing Andy told them do was to make sure that there was no Jap lurking in the cave to nibble on us, for the first wave had gone through so fast to clean everybody out—if anybody had been there.

So they would sneak up on a hole, with Andy ready. Andy would take out a hand grenade and throw it in the hole. Then the first one to hit the edge of the hole and rolled down would get it.

Andy threw himself on the sand and all the rest of us lay flat. Andy's grenade went off with a bang, but nobody got hurt. From then on, the men in battery began to display of marine marksmanship he had given us.

In addition to being great fighters, 2nd Division men are the friendliest bunch I've ever been with. They have had any number of with people being unfriendly, but they seem determined to have no part into them to be pleasant and to make you feel at home.

Nothing like Okinawa had ever happened to them before. They're accustomed to fighting on the beaches. They'd kept saying to me, "If you could just have been with us before we'd have shown you some sentiment."

And I would reply, "Brother, I've had all the excitement I need for a lifetime. This kind of invasion suits me fine."

I started wandering up and down the beach. The boy who carried me a little vase in his hand, saying, "Here's the first souvenir of Okinawa."

He was James Cosby, pharmacist, mate first class, of Lovington, Ill. All medical corpsmen with the marines are actually in the Navy, you know. He had found the vase lying outside one of the burial vaults. It had blue Japanese characters on it.

Then I noticed a tall and heavily built man carrying a big roll of telephone wire on his shoulders and leading a white mare by the end of a string. I stopped him and said, "Would you like to have you and your goat in the newspapers?"

He grinned and said, "Sure, Why not?"

He was PFC Ben Glover of Beloit, Wis. He was a telephone lineman at home, and that's what he is here, except that he runs the wire by the first shore.

The evening of Love Day, scores of marines had baby goats for pets and were leading them around, while the kids in the 2nd Division and the little guys were so white that I'm sure that any animal-loving American would couldn't resist adopting them.

I saw one marine who had commandeered a horse and had it carrying his pack. Another had a bicycle. By Love Day plus three, the Okinawa Japs were putting their Japanese babies on their backs. Americans are the damnedest people! Why can't everybody be like them?

McNeil Outlines New Task of Canadian Press

(Toronto, April 13 (CP)—Telling the story of the Canadian Press to a meeting among the smaller nations, Wilfrid Eggleston, C.B.E., general manager of The Canadian Press, J. A. McNeil, General Manager, said in the regard: "The Canadian Press is a unique institution."

The Second Great War has marked the coming-of-age of The Canadian Press, Mr. McNeil declared. He said the full emergence of Canada in the international field had been marked by the newspaper publishers and executives from all parts of Canada, who are members of the CP.

"At its outset, the CP increased its overseas staff to give Canada the story of the war and of Canada's effort in it. All men proved outstanding in the finest competition and there was no favoritism in every Allied land. They covered Canada's effort in the war for the Dominion.

Mr. McNeil said the AP, for its expanding world service had established a staff man in Ottawa where he had associates with the CP, however, CP also had recently taken a man, Gerald Clark, to serve the Reuters' global service.

"These developments just as our efforts are centred on reorganization of Canadian news and handling of the staff in the field. At the same time our staff dispositions are designed to meet the changing pattern of news with the approach of peace. Reorganization of our facilities to handle interpretive and background news by liberated Europe and by members of the staff commanded for assignment to the European beat."

Artillery Duel Rages on Okinawa Near Capital City

Guam, April 12 — (AP)—Southern Okinawa's no-quarter artillery battle went into its eighth day today as the United States Navy announced American casualties of 2,936 dead, wounded and missing in the campaign. The invaders were killing 11 Japanese for every American.

Japanese in the bitterly-contested southern sector hurled their heaviest mined counter-attacks against U.S. 96th Corps troops yesterday after the Nipponese had received 'Fred Vs' artillery fire.

The Japanese were calling for supporting marine fire even though they were in the midst of their own men lines. Artillery shells and small arms fire pounded into the American positions as the Japs launched a "Banzai Line" about four miles north of Naha, capital city.

Marines in the north ran into organized resistance in the hills as they pressed toward the end of the island's 60-mile length.

Carrier and land-based planes as well as warships gave close support to the ground operations.

Admiral Nimitz announced the 2,936 casualties included 431 dead, 2,103 wounded and 180 missing.

The last report of Japanese dead showed 2,662 counted on Sunday, but much heavy fighting has been under way since then.

WARTIME ORDER RESCINDED

Ottawa, April 12 (CP)—Royal Canadian Mounted Police Headquarters said that the wartime order requiring a permit for the possession of a rifle or a shotgun has been rescinded.

The permit still will be necessary for possession of wartime firearms, however. Any firearms such as automatic rifles, machine guns or cannon.

LINER SALVAGED

London, April 13 — (CP) The famous Cunard White Star liner Georgic, gutted by fire and sunk by bombs in Liverpool Docks three years ago, has been salvaged and transformed into a 27,000 ton world's finest troop ships, the ministry of war transport announced yesterday after a 1941 run.

It is so logical an answer for the Hygiene family problems as it suicide for an individual problem.

If statute law does not define such sterilization as A, injury it is because America is already on the way to defeat in the next great war.

By your yardstick or standard, young man, I should never have been born. I was No. 2 in a family of nine children, and I never expected to provide the type of education for children that I received, or even poor children should have— as a Methodist Social Service worker.

One-child sterility may or may not be intentional — in some instances it is fate. In some it is the consequence of specific infection, and in some it is the product of any hazard — to the wife. That's just Yankee ability.

In the name of health and happiness — and I do not profess to be an authority, moral or religious adviser — I say that no one who is sound and fit for parenthood and even poor children should have— as a Methodist Social Service worker.

ST. LOUIS A REPUBLIC

For four years St. Louis, Mo., was the capital of what was in effect an "independent republic."

In 1762, during the French and Indian War, for the Seven Years' War—1754-1763), France secretly ceded to Spain, New Orleans and her territories west of the Mississippi to prevent their falling into British hands.

Without knowing his king had betrayed them, a group of men led by Pierre Laclede Liguest French fur trading colonial governor, arrived in 1764 went up the river and chose a site for a trading post on the western bank.

Acting under orders from Laclede, Auguste Chouteau selected a party of workmen built a storehouse and a shanty or cabin.

At first the place was variously called "Laclede's Village" or "Chouteau's" and "Mound City," but after it was named "St. Louis" in honor alternative pronunciation.

of St. Louis of France (Louis IX), patron saint of Louis XV, the then reigning French monarch.

England and France rendered Spanish ownership of the Louisiana Territory in the peace treaty of 1763 whereupon Louis St. Ange Bellerive, commandant, abandoned it. Part of Charters moved his headquarters up the Mississippi 10 miles to St. Louis.

No Spanish governor had showed up by 1765 when Auguste Chouteau of St. Louis formed their own government and called a town meeting which met and elected St. Ange as governor.

The St. Ange government functioned as an independent state until a Spanish governor arrived in 1770 to set up Spanish government in the territory.

The general rule the inhabitants of St. Louis pronounce the second word of the name of their city "LOO-is" with "LOO-is" an an

Tabernacle W.M.S. Presents Program

Sponsored by the W.M.S. Afternoon Auxiliary of Tabernacle Church, a family party including members of the Evening Auxiliary, the C.G.I.T. groups and the children of the Mission Band, was held Tuesday evening in the Sunday School Hall with Mrs. H. W. Froats presiding.

An opening hymn and a prayer by Dr. A. J. W. Myers was followed by a cordial welcome to all guests, the President expressing the wish that all present would enjoy the party and since it was a family affair the Mission Band sang "Happy Family" led by Mrs. J. A. Charlton.

The Thank-offering was accepted by four C.G.I.T. members and dedicated in prayer by Marlene Halsey of the Band.

Mrs. D. A. Archibald read the Easter story as told in the 28th chapter of St. Matthew's Gospel, following which three numbers were sung most acceptably by the Girls' Chorus under the direction of Mrs. Myers.

Mrs. Frederickson held her listeners spell-bound as she told a tale of Scottish courage in the days of Covenanter persecution, and by request gave "The White Rose" as a second reading.

"A Living Hope" was the theme of an Easter Worship Service led by Miss R. Fox of the Evening Auxiliary, during which Master Ronald Elmy, well-known boy soprano, delighted all present as he contributed an Easter solo. His accompanist was Miss Hogle.

Mrs. G. F. Lent expressed the appreciation of the Auxiliary to Mrs. Frederickson, to Master Elmy and to all who assisted in presenting a program both inspirational and entertaining.

The closing hymn and benediction was followed by a social hour when the ladies served delicious refreshments.

PROTESTANT CHURCHES PLAN LARGE FUND

New York, April 12 — (CP)—The British Information Services reported last night that Britain's churches aim to raise £1,000,000 — ($4,500,000) for rehabilitation of churches and ministries throughout liberated Europe. The B.I.S. said the plan was made known in a statement from the Archbishop of Canterbury endorsed by the head of all Protestant denominations in Britain.

Great American Designer

By ALICE ALDEN

IT SEEMS to us that our own American [illegible] is designing better here than ever he did in his pre-war Paris days. Restrictions, limitations and shortages, plus the times have [illegible] his fine simplicity and added to its charm. From his recent collection comes this frock of [illegible] yellow cotton pointed up with [illegible] of black and white polka dot satin laced and bowed at the V neck and used for a novel belt with bow clusters. It is definitely cotton with an air, yet essentially and youthfully simple!

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Young Wife Should be Careful About Her Next Move

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm 24 years old and have a son a year old. My husband is in the Army for the past two years. After we were married he asked me to live with his parents. I tried my best to make a go of it, but his mother is just impossible to live with and won't make friends with anybody. She has six daughters-in-law, none of whom can get along with her.

My husband is overseas and has written me many letters saying he doesn't want me as his wife if I can't get along with his mother. I've decided to move away from my mother-in-law, and I'm not going to tell my husband, but I guess when he finds it out he will want to divorce me. Do you think he really loves me if he's willing to give me up for such a reason?

P. M.

It would seem, if none of her six daughters-in-law can get along with her, that your husband would realize his mother is difficult. On the other hand, you are making a mistake not to tell him you are moving away from his parents' home. You see there is the question of his little son, and he should be told your plans concerning the child.

Are you going to make your home with your parents? If you wish to avoid the divorce of which you hint, you must be careful about your environment. At the same time let me say that inability to live with one's mother-in-law is not grounds for divorce.

What Some Women Think Concerning Essential War Work

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Near the city in which we live there are three Army posts, and we Army wives get together and discuss your column, which appears in one of the local papers. Some of the "problems" of soldiers' wives, whose husbands are on the firing line with death and maiming facing them momentarily, disgust us.

These women imagine themselves in love with other men. To what order of anthropoids do they belong? And those other women who would like to have husbands who are doing essential war work at home, sent overseas. If they had a particle of love for their men, they'd thank God they were privileged to remain at home and do essential war work. My husband is overseas; would to Heaven he were here with me and the children.

Mrs.

I've often wondered too, what goes on inside the minds of some of these women who want to have their husbands sent overseas, and whose only interest seems to be the Government allowance. Of course, when an able-bodied man refuses to support his family, and evades his duty to fight for his country, and squirms out of the draft by hook or crook, I don't blame his wife in the least for reviling him. He qualifies as a [illegible].

But it's incomprehensible why the wife of a man who is doing essential war work, and at the same time is [illegible] out for his family, should want to have him sent overseas.

Boy About to be Drafted Feels Himself a Misfit

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm eighteen years of age and expect to be called up soon. I don't seem to fit in with the crowd here because they lead lives I cannot accept. They drink, run around 'til two or three A.M., even the high school students. I too have had a high school education, but I'm not a sport. I spent my leisure time reading reference books and studying good literature. The bunch submit me to a good deal of teasing because I iron my own clothes—I like to look neat.

Girls I know don't interest me because they too go in for night life. Will being on the straight and narrow side keep me from popularity in the Army? Will the guys understand me? Do you think it advisable to change?

Lost

You're very fortunate to have a more serious side than those high school "kids" who, in the words of the old song, "Won't come home until Morning."

In the Army you'll meet plenty of boys with whom you'll have real companionship. Those who, like your high school friends, keep late hours when not on leave, get into trouble.

KISS YOUR TIRED FEELING GOODBYE!

Pepless Many Suffer Low Blood Count—And Don't Know It.

The baffling thing about low blood count is that you can weigh about as much as you ever did—even look healthy and strong, yet—you can feel as if you had lead in your legs, dopey, tired and pepless.

Low blood count means you haven't got enough red blood corpuscles. It is their vital job to carry life-giving oxygen from your lungs throughout your body. And just as it takes oxygen to explode gasoline in your car and make the power to turn the wheels, so you must have plenty of oxygen to explode the energy in your body and give you going power.

Get Dr. Williams Pink Pills today. They are world-noted for the help they give in increasing the number and strength of red corpuscles. Then with your blood count up, you'll feel like bounding up the stairs as if you were floating on air. Ask your druggist for Dr. Williams Pink Pills today.

Home and School Club Given Report On Convention

The regular monthly meeting of the Queen Alexandra Home and School Club took place in the school auditorium on Tuesday evening, April 10th., with the President Mrs. Howard Trusdale presiding.

The meeting opened with the singing of 'O Canada', with Mrs. J. Deacon, at the piano.

The business portion of the meeting was speedily conducted and brief reports were given by Mrs. H. Smith, membership convener, and Mrs. Ed. Buchanan, nominations convener.

Mrs. John Deacon, and Mr. Stanley Hagerman, a former pupil of the school, delighted the members with two lovely piano solos "Beethovens' Fifth Symphony", and "Country Gardens", Mr. Hagerman responded to enthusiastic applause by playing Prelude in C Sharp Minor.

Mrs. Trusdale and Mrs. Gilbert Scott were the two delegates from the club to the recent annual Home and School Convention held in Toronto.

Mrs. Trusdale started her report by saying that "both Mrs. Scott and I feel that it is quite impossible for us to bring to you the marvellous feeling of interest and co-operation prevalent at the convention but we would like to express our thanks to the Association for the experience we have had in acting as your delegates.

Highlights Given.

Mrs. Trusdale then went on to give the members a few of the highlights of the convention. Among these were the interesting facts that there were 90 new H. & S. Associations and that that brought the membership up to 26,000.

After the various reports had been given, there was a very interesting discussion based on the topic 'Our Civic Responsibility'.

There was a banquet at night for the delegates and a very enjoyable sing-song started things off".

Miss Norma Arkles was then called on to lead the members in one or two songs, which everyone thoroughly enjoyed.

Mrs. Trusdale resumed her report covering the Health Group conference which she attended the next day while Mrs. Scott attended another one.

"Nutrition was the first item discussed and it was decided that proper nutrition gives us a more enjoyable life, less fatigue from work and play, a better appearance, greater resistance to disease, longer productive years and is a great morale builder.

In the afternoon Miss Di Cola of the Dept. of Public Health, gave a short talk on sex education. She stated that this 'bug bear of sex education shouldn't have the stress it is given nowadays.' She suggested that the book entitled 'Growing Up' should be given to the children to read at the age of 11 and again at the age of 14".

This brought to a close Mrs. Trusdale's report.

Miss Margaret Houston then delighted her audience with a group of three songs. It was of a great deal of interest to all present that one of these songs was composed by Mrs. J. Deacon, who also accompanied Miss Houston at the piano.

Home Education.

Mrs. Scott then gave her report and like Mrs. Trusdale gave the members a very vivid description of all the things of interest that transpired.

Mrs. Scott selected the conference on Home Education led by Mrs. Doan. Mrs. Doan opened the conference with the quotation, 'a man wrapped up in himself makes a very small parcel, and a very ineffective one'.

In other words we must reach out and look beyond ourselves if we are going to be effective in our own homes and in our community.

Mrs. Doan pointed out that during the past thirty years there has been a growing consciousness of the importance of childhood, so much so that some schools have gone to the extreme to provide what they consider the best conditions for child development. It has been said that the child must be free to develop as he will, unhampered by parental restrictions. Acting upon this theory these schools provided facilities for learning, but had no definite course of study. The child learned when and what he wanted to. This theory was based upon the idea that the child will always choose what is best for him. You may rest assured that there are many pros, and cons, on this theory, and the present trend, rather fortunately, is that the child needs definite guidance in the home and school, and place a great importance on the matter of parental influence.

Child Training

It was pointed out that this matter of parental responsibility is far more than a matter of providing food, clothing and shelter for our children. It is even more than "doing our best", to bring them up well. It is up to us, not only to find out all we possibly can about good methods of child training, but to see that we ourselves provide that atmosphere of harmony and growth which is so essential to the child's development.

Mrs. Scott went on to say that this vast subject of Home Education could only be touched on in the time allowed for the conference.

In closing Mrs. Scott said "As Mrs. Trusdael has said it is very difficult to bring back that part of a convention which is the most impressive. I kept wishing that all of you who are interested in Home and School work and in the upbringing of children, could have been there to see and feel the inspiration which comes in such a gathering, with a common interest and an united purpose. I would like to express my appreciation too, for the opportunity to share in this".

Mrs. Ralph Morden, on behalf of the members, graciously thanked Mrs. Scott and Mrs. Trusdale for their splendid reports. Refreshments brought the meeting to a close.

in discussions they have been asking questions to set them what has been said by others," said Mr. King.

Mr. King spoke after Mr. Graydon said that failure of the government to call parliament when it should have been called last January "lay at the bottom of the difficulties about ending the present session."

Speaker Replies

Mr. Graydon's statement was in reply to one of Mr. King on Monday, saying a speech by minister of finance Mr. Abbott, "was prepared in all its essentials from now on and progress Saturday. There was no justification in the light of what has happened since January for asking parliament to put in its belt since and cut down on discussion.

Mr. King said that if parliament had been summoned after the defeat of Gen. McNaughton the Grey North by-election campaign would have been rammed on the floor of the Commons "day after day."

He had been given good reasons for believing that Gen. McNaughton would be a candidate, decided differently, and the minister was opposed and defeated.

"At a time of crisis, a government has the right to count on the cooperation, not only of all parties but of all the people," said Mr. King. "And I felt it was in the interests of the war effort in time of war to have the minister of national defence in parliament."

Reasoned In Attempt

The Progressive Conservative party had attempted to keep Gen. McNaughton out of the Commons and in combination with another party (the C.C.F.) had been successful.

"May I ask, was that assisting the government in carrying on its war effort?" asked Mr. King.

The reference to the Progressive Conservative party being run from outside the House came after Mr. King said he was surprised that Mr. Graydon, on being invited to be among Canadian delegations to San Francisco, said that he would have to ask his leader, John Bracken, National Progressive Conservative Leader. "Someone who had never been in this parliament at all."

Not Taken Up

For 2 1/2 years, Mr. Bracken had not taken up the government's offer to facilitate his entry into the Commons.

Hamilton York," interjected Hon. Earl Rowe (PC — Dufferin-Simcoe), with reference to the defeat of Hon. Hamilton Mayhew, Ontario Conservative party leader, in a by-election in that constituency in 1942.

"No, North Grey," retorted Mr. King. "Why did he not run in North Grey?

"If the honorable gentlemen opposite were testing the strength of their party and the strength of their leader, they would have had him run in North Grey against the Minister of National Defence."

"What was his position? Five of all, he would not come into parliament himself. He did not want to keep out of parliament a minister of the Crown. Follow that to its logical conclusion and you find that if the opposition is willing to take the position that it will not be represented in parliament by its leader, but that his sole function is going to be that of keeping out of parliament those other leaders taking part in the government of the country and you have your parliamentary institutions completely abolished."

Mr. King made another reference to his position when A. M. Rose (PC-Saskatoon City) at one point interjected.

"I don't see you put Ralston back?"

"I think that before honorable gentlemen opposite talk about putting anyone back, you has already served in the House for nearly years they had better get the House of Commons their leader, who has never been inside the House", said Mr. King.

"He will be in the Prime Ministe's place next fall", said Mr. Rose.

Will Be Guided by Green

"My friend says she will be in", said Mr. King. "And what will happen to him if he does in? If the honorable gentlemen opposite follow what has been done in the last five years they will have somebody outside the House, some little group —I will not say where they will be located — and they are not a little group dictating the whole policy of the party."

Mr. Graydon said there was no justification in the light of what had happened since January for asking parliament to "pull in its tents" once and cut down discussion.

Mr. King's statement on Monday was construed by some as an intimation parliament might be dissolved before the appropriation and civil estimates were passed. He could not conceive of the government taking that course, but if it did the responsibility was on it.

Mr. King said he had no such intention. Parliament would be dissolved on Monday night because its term would be up.

Whitehall Notebook

By JOHN DAFOE
(CP Staff Writer)

London, April 12 — (CP) — Increased friction among the various political parties is becoming evident as the war against Germany draws to a close and the time for breaking up the coalition in its present form approaches.

Prime Minister Churchill has indicated he intends to form some kind of national government when labor and liberal groups withdraw to fight the coming general election as soon as possible, and it undoubtedly he would be pleased if any non-Conservative members of his cabinet decided to confine in offices.

Some may do so — but it is clear that the labor and liberal party organizations have made up their minds to form a little group dictating the whole policy of the party."

Mr. Graydon said there was no justification in the light of what had happened since January for asking parliament to "pull in its tents" once and cut down discussion.

those issues between the Conservatives and the Labor party.

"If there is not an adequate degree of agreement on the question of monopolies and economic controls; to prevent inflation, the issue must be fought out and the people, at the polls must settle whether they are going forward to economic looseness or even anarchy or whether there is to be a settled state of affairs."

The touchiness of Labor members in the present situation was demonstrated by the protest raised in the Commons over Foreign Secretary Bevin's leadership of the British delegation to the San Francisco Conference.

Labor backbenchers contend Mr. Churchill is electioneering here and they feel their leader, Clement Attlee, Deputy Prime Minister, should have refused to go under such terms. Mr. Attlee, however, was quite agreeable to the arrangement.

In a public speech, too, Labor Minister Bevin has differed with Mr. Churchill over nationalization of industry. That is the issue which may jeopardize the prospects of the further coalition after the election, despite the Prime Minister's statement he hopes to arrange it.

This week information Minister Brendan Bracken, speaking at another speech by Mr. Bevin, attacked Labor's nationalization policy, and Arthur Greenwood, leader of the parliamentary labor party, accused the information minister of thus hastening the time for a speed election.

WANTS $12,335 IN SUIT

Los Angeles, April 12 — (AP) — A suit against Mrs. Elizabeth Whitney, former wife of Col. John Hay (Jock) Whitney has been filed by film producer Tim Durant who asked the return of one pig, one cow and one horse, Durant, who valued the livestock at $12,335, asserted in his suit that he left the animals on Mrs. Whitney's ranch, where he resides for a time as a tenant.

CEMETERY CONSTRUCTED

Somewhere in Southern England, April 13 — (CP Cable) — A Canadian cemetery, similar to that at Vimy Ridge in northern France, is being constructed halfway between Caen and Falaise in Normandy where the Canadians were engaged in bitter fighting last summer, it was announced last night.

Pte. H.N. Hannan Killed In Action

Mrs. Marjorie R. Hannan, 340 William Street, was notified by official cablegram this morning that her husband, Private Norman Harold Hannan, has been killed in action overseas.

Last War Prisoner Leaving Bowmanville Camp by Tonight

Toronto, April 12 — (CP) — Provincial Secretary Dunbar of Ontario said today the last German officer prisoner of war was expected to leave the Ontario training school for boys at Bowmanville, a former internment camp, by tonight and that the school would revert to its original status.

He said he did not know where the Germans would be taken because "that is a matter for the defence department." He added that some of the officers had already gone.

The school, an institution for delinquent boys, was taken over by the defence department in 1941. Steps to get the school and farm in working order for its resumed role will be started at once, Mr. Dunbar said.

Had Weak, Nervous Stomach; Limbs, Back Pained Badly

Could Hardly Eat a Meal Without Having Gas, Sour Acidity and Indigestion. Got Dizzy Spells and Sick Headaches. Says Syntone Gave Her Grand Relief.

MRS. M. NORTON

Syntona has given me such good results that I am very glad to tell others about my experience with this medicine," said Mrs. M. Norton, 198 Mary Street, Hamilton, Ontario, in a recent report.

"For a good many years, I suffered with a weak, nervous stomach. I had many nervous spells after my meals with gas, sour acidity and indigestion. I would feel all bloated and upset internally. I was subject to dizzy spells and sick headaches. I got no appetite and I had bad pains in my limbs and back. I was nervous and irritable and could not sleep properly. I seemed to ache all over. Everything combined made my nerves all worse. I couldn't get a restful night's sleep and got a tired feeling all dull and drowsy when I got up in the morning.

"I had taken many medicines, but they didn't help me one bit of good. Then I began taking Syntona and in only a few days I noticed that my stomach felt better. The gas, acidity and heartburn were not troubling me as they did before. I felt more like eating and without any distress, or bad after-effects. I kept on taking Syntona and now I can say I feel like a new person with my stomach has been relieved, without pains for it is nothing at all wrong with my stomach and see!

MOTORLESS COMPOUND DESTROYS BY ION STIMULUS

London, Ont., April 12 — (CP) — Motionless compounds, long held merely an academic subject, were presented yesterday by Dr. Arthur Rudolph Mold of the department of physics and education at Washington, as the "ideal" of the chemical industry in the modern era. Motionless compounds, the scientist explained, are those which destroy by ion stimulus rather than by energy in the use of light or heat.

Each Won a Fall by Their Favorite Hold Before Enthusiastic Assembly

Although bedecked with his Oriental turban and at times bowing politely, but with head uncovered, to the Hindu god, Nango Singh, the mad Hindoo, in his efforts to defeat Vince Vagnone, the California Rocket, at the latter proved a crowd pleaser in upwards of 1,300 wrestling fans at the Sluma Arena last night. The Punjab pride had the patrons a full hour's entertainment while batting away at each other with the strength of a bull, but in the fight to usher in a new season of the month's business at the arena, neither fell somewhere in the twenty minutes of the scheduled route, so the match was a draw.

Fresh from a victory over Ivan Rasputin, the terrible Russian, in Toronto, Singh made a few bows to the crowd prompted by a translator Vagnone with the application of the famous Navajo Indian hold, no doubt obtained when he was a cowboy in the days of Buffalo Bill sort Maxwell, who's not exactly popular with the Sluma Arena patrons, seemed to delight in Singh's gestures, politics, but when the referee, Ken Mackenzie, Toronto, also attempted the same method of attack, Maxwell talked his hand in caution to indicate "naughty, naughty", much to the displeasure of the general populace of the arena fans. As a matter of fact Maxwell "cheats" resentful most everything, not from outward and inward appearances, but in actuality, during the bouts public. (Who do you think slayed Dan's what they're paid for.)

Appealed to Fans For Support.

However, when Vagnone retaliated Singh, realizing appeals to the fans for support, but after all he is not from a Hindoo with a harem is good policy, pulled the "what Vagnone made—his No. 1 error. The resulting quick fall saw Nango Singh snapped on his favored toture hold and not to be outdone in bringing the fuzzy pulled Vagnone's head to within a foot to lose the first fall.

Rather irritated over his one fall Vagnone completely took Singh over the jumps in the second, some effective elbow and fist punching, before the Hindoo was forced to open the second round and this time Singh, with a quick flip, proved as good as the California Rocket proved to all and sundry he could something on the wrestling mat when he clamped on his perfected "Indian" hold and Vagnone tapped. A 21-yard loss and a fall to even matters at one each.

Singh tried all the Hindoo rites to impress in the third of the bout in the final stanza, but was, nevertheless, one of the busiest fellows inside the squared circle. At times Vagnone was standing up at the corner, bodily, and Maxwell would "cheat" again in my eye", but Referee Mackenzie was not to be denied and "rookie" hold to look like a winner, when suddenly the Punjab pride broke out and there was no winner. After the all over Singh consented to have his arm raised in token of the bath's been defeated and graciously bowed when Referee Mackenzie and Vagnone looked on and there was some of that should stuff. There was a great fight, I'll be home now and I'll be back." As if there are stains that plentiful.

Morgan Wins Medly.

Local wrestling fans know and admire Morgan Marine who became a boy by killing 32 Japs on Guadacanal before being wounded a few years ago. Now Wilbur has married a Belleville girl and has settled down to five in Fort Moyne town. Last night Morgan wound up the Private Ian, the former Hamilton rugby star gave a standout performance throughout the contest to pace his team in their victory.

Toronto, April 12 —(CP)— Though the shadows of post-war planning and anticipating the return of our boys from overseas, Ken (Vancouver, Province) McConnell has come out with an interesting suggestion in regard to the professional sport leaders and the re-turning service men. Ken says:

Johnny Athlete (who packed his kit bag and duffle bag and off to war still belongs to the club that employed him prior to his enlistment—but, unlike other institutions, the club does not have to provide him with employment upon his return. The result is that only the club's management, and perhaps who should be protected, is not.

The professional athlete returning is still the property of his old team—for their rights will be respected. But he—there are four years out of active sports—is faced with the problem of finding odd or losing his employment.

It's an odd situation that certainly needs consideration. The best suggestion to date comes from the Province columnist who thinks that the clubs should have provided re-habilitation for all athletes in using the professional's job at the local Arthur Golf and Country Club.

Boston Hopefuls: Lieut. Frank Flood, stationed in Boston; Barrett Kingston, has his eye on the Boston Marathon this spring.

Opening the night's performance saw Referee Cliff Fox give Joe Malich, of Brantford, the decision over Johnny Dempsey, of Idaho, following a speedy performance of acrobatics that proved pleasing to the patrons. The boys provided plenty of action of thirty minutes.

Montreal Georgians Meet Merritton Hayes

Montreal, April 13 —(CP)— Montreal Georgians, giving a polished performance, will be favored to win a place in the field when the International Baseball League season opens April 19.

Chino Rodriguez, his Cuban captain and third sacker, who made a keen fight for the batting leadership last season, will be back in the veteran outfielder, are his sons with the ball. Hartle Moore does ever at shortstop, John Bebber and Bob Eagle, both of whom pitched good ball last year, are returning and are expected to be his mainstays on the pitching staff.

To date, his catching staff consists of one man, Jack Tighe, who with Chicago, former semi-pro battery mate of Bill Veeck, Georgians turned to the best from the opening whistle to the bell as the Hamiltonians were completely outclass their visitors.

Spearheading the Montreal's offensive again, shifty Dave Greene-berg accounted for a total of 13 points. The former Winnipeg star gave a standout performance throughout the contest to pace his team in their victory.

CINDERELLA BOYS SETTING PACE IN EXHIBITION TILTS

St. Louis Browns May Repeat In American Loop According to Experts

By JOE REICHLER

New York, April 12 — (AP) — It took St. Louis Browns 44 years to win the American League flag, but it may take them only one year to win their second.

Experts who watched the Mites who were vanquished by the Cardinals in the world series last fall, have picked up this spring where they left off during the regular season last October.

The Browns, with their champagne ability keen practically intact, are setting the pace in the exhibition tilts with 10 triumphs against two defeats.

George McQuinn and Don Gutteridge, who usually wait until them to find their batting eyes, turned on the heat yesterday to help Browns defeat Cardinals 10-3 in a game hailed by rain after six innings. Gutteridge, who hit a double in the run, his second four-bagger of the series, and Outlaw got three hits in four times up, also including a homer.

Other developments were:

New York Giants defeated Brooklyn, Dodgers, 6-1, in an 11-inning benefit game for the Red Cross, which brought in $27,400.

Cleveland Indians, Tribe defeated Indianapolis 15-3 yesterday as Pat Seerey hit a pair of home run. He also hit a triple and single.

Boston Bruves — Defeated Red Sox 5-0 in first of a three-game city series. Alva Javery, recovering from an arm injury, limited Sox to five hits.

Washington Senators — Beaten again by Brooklyn Dodgers as Dixie Wakefield, former Tiger star, hit home run and Stan Musial, former Cardinal ace, shaped two doubles for Sailors.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

New York, April 12 —(AP)— Harry Matheson, the boxing impresario, who presided over the story that New York City police commissioner Lewis J. Valentine is a fight fan, announced today. It seems that Val used to play ball in the old Catholic high school by the cops. He sits so fast getting away that he developed a neighborhood reputation as a catcher, which led to an invitation to join the police department's ball club and hooking glove and when Val got to be commissioner he kept running and set out to become a boxer. . . . The point of the story is that Matheson says that Dempsey fights Jake Lakotta at St. Nick's next month. . . . Maybe he should start running again.

What's Doing in Sport

(By The Canadian Press.)

In the expectation that heavy fighting will terminate shortly in Germany sometime Hitting the ban on racing in the United States, ending blanks for the Tisk Kentucky Derby were sent out yesterday from Churchill Downs with the date left open. The Classic 501-mile stakes was scheduled for May 5.

President Allen Duncan of Hialeah announced the 1 1-4 mile race for three-year-olds would be run for a purse of $75,000 plus entry fees and the gold trophy for the winning owner. More than 500 horses are quartered at the track and among the eligibles are Stymie, Pavot, Devil Diver, Pigging Don, Best Effort and Bon Mann.

President Bill Tobin of Chicago Black Hawks, stated yesterday four prospects including Ossah Johnny Gottselig were being considered for their managerial succession to Paul Thompson who resigned April 4. The other candidates could not be mentioned, Tobin said, because they are with other N.H.L. clubs.

Toronto Leafs of the International Baseball League fell before Philadelphia Athletics 15-1 yesterday in an exhibition game at Frederick, Md., in which Russ Christopher and Jesse Flores held Toronto to three scattered hits.

Cleveland Barons, champions of the American Hockey League, announced the trade of three star players to Boston N.H.L. Black Hawks for four pocketbaser, to be named later. Barons involved in the deal are Tom Burlington, center; Jou Trudel, left wing, and George Agar, centre.

Although they finished last in the western division of the American Hockey League, Buffalo Bisons last night announced renewal for next year of the contract of Leighton (Happy) Breen as coach. It is called for a slight increase in salary.

A Britisher, while touring the United States before the war, remarked to a friend in the west: "You have an extraordinary country here you know — very entertaining." Upon questioning, the friend, a little old fellow of other things, but "Who what?" asked the westerner. "The aristocracy," replied the Britisher.

"Oh," answered the son of Albion, "people who never did anything — people who have had grandparents who never did anything before them."

"Oh yes; we have 'em here too, but we call 'em 'swamps'."

Throw Season

When the Belleville Ladies' Softball Association named Jim Hamilton as president she had the best interests of the league at heart and does much for the advancement of the game, but not necessarily the fair sex. For two years President Hamilton has filled the office of secretary-treasurer, and during that time the league has flourished to the tune of a handsome bank balance, proceeds of dollars were raised for war charities, the Red Cross in particular benefitting to well over $1,000 alone.

However, today the ladies' league is facing a lean year, insofar as secretary-treasurer is concerned. Only three teams have definitely been mentioned as starters for the 1945 campaign, Bridge St. Girls, Bell Girls and Bell Boys. . . . The crash of the ball against the wall during the game, when a ball is a base hit, pounced on the ball, fired it to second base and then sent a bow for a snappy fielding play.

Remember when:

Larry Gains, Toronto boxer, unbeaten in 20 bouts, knocked out British Empire heavyweight bouts, was instructor of the Royal Canadian Regiment of South Africa in London 13 years ago tonight. The veteran Newton Waterloo in the ninth round squelched Canada's hopes for him being a world's championship contender. Gains is now in the British Army.

London, Ont., April 11 — (CP) — A Russian-born Canadian scientist is conducting experiments at the University of Western Ontario on a new drug, similar to penicillin, which is hoped to prove effective in the treatment of tuberculosis.

Dr. I. N. Asheshov and his assistant, Miss Freda Strilla, German-born laboratory technician, are working on the new organism, aspergillus fumigatus, a branch of the mould or fungus family of microscopic plants, which has already produced drugs which kill streptococcic and staphylococcic germs and has shown itself, in some forms, to be more stable and easier to handle than drugs of the penicillin family.

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Throw away the crystal ball. Close into your partner's eyes and tell him what cards his hand contains. He will think you are psychic.

Train yourself in the south seat with this hand:

♠ A 3
♥ A Q J 10 8 7
♦ A K Q
♣ K 7 4

The bidding goes like this:

SOUTH	NORTH
1 H	1 S
2 H	3 S
4 H	4 NT
5 H	7 H or 7 NT

Before partner shows his hand, you should know he has exactly five tricks: both black aces, both major kings, no queens, a short card in three of your spades, two hearts, three diamonds, three clubs.

His four no-trump bid is the convention signal for asking how many aces and kings you have. To use such a signal, he passes two aces and a king or better.

You get heart power to four no-trump in the convention signal by showing two aces and two kings. He would not have bid seven if he did not have the other two kings.

You don't know he has two aces and two kings. You know he has not six tricks, because if he had, he would have made a one-jump on the first round. But you do know he has five tricks.

Having bid Spades twice, that suit is established at least five cards. With five cards in any suit, he must have one suit with less than three cards. He will have a short card trick in that suit.

His short suit is probably hearts. But both two aces, two kings, and one short card are five tricks. Since he does not have six tricks, he has no queens.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was coming home from school down the back street for a short cut, and I accidently looked in a ash barrel and found a mersherum pipe broke in 2 pieces, looking just like pop's good mersharum pipe and thinking me a swell idea for a magic trick to play on pop, and after supper pop was sitting in the parlor in his private chair and I said, Hey pop!

If it's not something important, postpone it till some time when I'm not at home, because pop said, and I said, It is important, non I want to show you a great magic trick, I said, and pop said, Well, if it's really great, perhaps I can spare a little attention from this cigar.

It's called the Magic Mending Trick, I said.

And I showed him the broken mersherum pipe with 2 pieces together making it look as if it wasn't broke at all, saying, Do you reckonize it, pop?

Of course I reckonize it, go see with that what are you doing with it, anyway? pop said. It's the only mersharum I have smoked in comfort without letting it fall and breaking, for Pete sake, he said, and I said, That's just the trick, pop, I'm going to break it in half and fix it again by magic, one 2 three, hokey pokey rotten tomato cans. I'm breaking it in half.

Horse blanket to blazes, you broke that pipe once before today some time and this is just one of your smart alick dodges to get me in the new gently, confonid it all, pop said.

Looking mad as anything and I thought, Good night I better finish it quick. Which I did, saying, Hokey pokey 4 five six, there's your pipe in your pipe rack all the time, pop, and this is just a old broke one I found.

The result being pop still felt partly mad still after he had smoked a load of tobacco in his mersharum pipe while he made me stand there and listen to a lecture about fun not being fun if it's not pleasure for everybody concerned.

LEAFS FAVORED TO TAKE WINGS IN THIRD GAME

Adams Shuffles Lines in Effort to Effect Winning Combination

Toronto, April 12 —(CP)— Hostilities between Detroit Red Wings and Toronto Maple Leafs in possession of the Stanley Cup, professional hockey's No. 1 trophy, resume tonight with the third game of the eight-point final series. Leafs, with victories in the first two games at home, can annex the potato to mine.

Leafs favored 2-1 to extend their winning streak to three straight, will play to a packed house, Gardens' 14, Maple Leaf Gardens said yesterday "we could have sold 50,000 tickets if he had them."

The Detroit team, 19 strong, moved into the city last night and manager Jack Adams said he has shuffled his lines in an effort to effect a combination that will produce goals.

Scoreless in the series to date, Wings will throw a combination of Eddie Bruneteau, Joe Carveth and Earl Liscombe at Leafs. The line will alternate with one centred by Pete Babando, and with Mud Bruneteau and Syd Howe on the wings. Howe has played centre all season, missed the first game of the series due to injuries suffered in the semi-finals against Boston Bruins.

Tod Lindsay, Jud McAtee and Steve Wochy make up the third line. All three played their first year in the National Hockey League, with Murphy Bruneteau as a possible replacement for Lindsay.

Adams brought two spare goalies —Connie Dion of the American Hockey League champion Hershey Bears, and veteran Normie Smith—to Toronto. Gordon (Bert) Sherritt also from the Cups.

Aside from Howe, the Wings are all in good shape. Leafs lost Nick Metz and Jackie McLean through injuries in the semi-final series against Montreal Canadiens.

DOUBTS HITLER SERIOUSLY ILL

British Press Skeptical of Story of His Yielding to Himmler

London, April 12 — (CP)— British morning papers greeted with skepticism today published reports that Hitler is seriously ill and has yielded his place to Himmler.

The diplomatic correspondent of the Daily Mail recalled that Goebels is "still a good propagandist" and warned that "such stories must be treated with reserve."

"There have been indications that Himmler wasn't a do-or-die Nazi, that in certain circumstances he might try to negotiate peace," the Mail correspondent added. "If that is one of his tricks at the moment he is not likely to obtain a hearing from the Allies."

The Daily Herald's diplomatic correspondent, writing under the heading "Beware of Hitler guns," took a similar attitude toward the reports.

"I do not place the least credence in them," he said.

Some papers said even if reports of Hitler's illness were true it was not a matter of great moment.

"To the Allies, who will soon rid the world of the gang, one visiting lunatic, it does not matter much," observed the Yorkshire Post.

The Mail, commenting in the same vein, said "Himmler, the butcher of Europe, has undoubtedly been gathering power into his hands lately but his record is hardly less villainous than that of Hitler."

A wave of speculation over Hitler's status was stirred yesterday when the diplomatic correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph said he had authoritative information that Hitler is "a dying man" and has been superseded by Himmler.

Foreign Secretary Eden subsequently was asked in the House of Commons if he could confirm a report that Hitler had been assassinated, but indicated he gave the report no credence.

IRISH QUALIFY TO MEET CANUCKS IN JUNIOR FINALS

St. Michael's Defeat Montreal Royals in Sixth Game by 7-4 Count

By EDDIE LEE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Toronto, April 13 (CP)—Unless coach Joe Primeau of Toronto St. Michael's Majors has his wires crossed in the Memorial Cup finals with Moose Jaw Canucks, will almost be an anti-climax to the Eastern Canada junior championship finals.

Majors last night registered a 7-4 victory against Montreal Royals in the sixth game of the best-of-seven, eastern final to qualify to meet Canucks for the Dominion junior crown. The victory was the third straight for St. Mikes after they had dropped the two of the first three meetings.

"The eastern final was tougher than I expect the final will be," Primeau said. "Our Ontario Hockey Association finals with Oshawa Generals, St. Catharines were tough but we knew the boys had a good chance all season."

"We were fresh for the series with Porcupine (Combines) but were tense for the finals with Montreal. The championship is gone—the crisis is past."

Canucks, who watched last night's game, were still as confident as when they carried the play while defeating Winnipeg Monarchs in the western Canada finals.

Coach Frank Selinsky declined to comment but the players expressed the opinions "we'll beat 'em" or "tough." Some were not sure how they would line up against the heavy bodychecks they saw between Royals and Majors.

"But we'll rely on our speed," they said.

Majors dipped into their bag of goals-for-and-cash on hand in four goals in the first 10 minutes, added a fifth in the second period and when Royals drew within striking distance of the lead in the last session, added two more.

Joe Sadler, who scored three goals—one in each period—scored what proved to be the winning one in the second period. Jimmy Thompson, hefty rushing defenceman who accounted for two of the St. Mikes goals, got the play with a rink-length dash, passed to Sadler at the Royal defence. Sadler flicked the puck past Howard Harvey.

Tod Sloan another two-goal producer for Majors, started the first period carnival with a goal at 2:16. Four minutes later he banged in another on a passing play with Frank Turik.

Came in Clusters.

Royals' goals also came in clusters, two in the first period and two in the third. Jimmy O'Connor spured one in each outburst, both on passes from Johnny Grenier who accounted for the other first-period goal. Lyall Sherman scored the other.

Sparkplug of the Montreal offence, which missed success by an eyelash in the third period, was Flemming Hackett the 17-year-old freshman in junior company. He was robbed several times by Majors goalie Pat Boehmer.

Primeau told St. Mikes "you can be mighty proud of yourselves" after the boys had knelt in prayer when they came off the ice.

JIM FITZGERALD, DEAN OF SPORTS EDITORS, FETED

Took Over Sports Desk of Toronto Telegram in 1906; Presented With Gifts

Toronto, April 79 — (CP)—Nearly 600 Toronto and district sportsmen last night paid honor to the dean of Canadian sports editors — Jim (Jim) Fitzgerald who took over the sports desk of the Toronto Evening Telegram Nov. 16, 1906, and has filled the job ever since.

Once the outstanding baseball catcher, Mr. Fitzgerald betrayed his lasting love for the diamond sport when the first of the remarks he made in reply to the flood of tributes to a discussion of baseball urging sportsmen to devote their attention to encouraging young players.

A small, grey man, Mr. Fitzgerald contented declined to reveal his age. A Telegram associate — sports columnist Ted Reeve — described him as "the only sports editor in the world who is 111 years old." Mr. Fitzgerald himself hinted that having played baseball in Toronto in the early 90's. But the only definition he would give of his age was: "You're as young as you feel."

At the banquet were men he had met in his 39 years of sports writing, lasting friends won by his modest sincerity. At two tables sat all but two of the surviving officers of the Sportsmen's Battalion with which he went overseas in the First Great War in which he held the rank of major. The battalion was split up before going to France where Mr. Fitzgerald won the Military Cross.

Some of the tributes came by telegram, expressing regret at inability to attend. They were from Premier Drew of Ontario, President Gideon (Red) Dolson of the National Hockey League, R. J. Barrow of the New York Yankees and a Father Murphy who expressed sympathy with for divine blessing and long life.

Mr. Fitzgerald, who received numerous gifts, was given a strong sports love besides baseball — racing—on the Toronto Island. "It's a sport I know. This year I'll see my 45th King's Plate, but I've never bet on a race yet."

14-Car Japanese Train Exploded With Direct Hits

Manila, April 13 — (AP)—United States heavy bombers ranging far from their Philippine base over Indo-China exploded a 14-car Japanese troop train with direct bomb hits Monday, it was announced today.

Fellow pilots bombed Hong Kong's Victoria docks, two radio stations and rail installations on Hainan Island and sank six small freighters in the China Sea.

In South Luzon the 1st Cavalry Division advanced 14 miles from Lechon to control Santiado and sent advance elements to Mauban on the east coast.

The Japanese still were stormly defending Baguio, summer capital, where the fighting has been bloody.

Help to Convert Service Morale To Civilian Morale

Saskatoon, Sask., April 13—(CP)—Milton F. Gregg, V.C., of Fredericton, President of the University of New Brunswick, appealed to employers for patience, understanding and help to veterans seeking to reorient themselves in the "strange and unfamiliar atmosphere" of civilian life.

Speaking at a luncheon meeting of the rehabilitation conference, Mr. Gregg said changes in characters since 1939, "will win the average Canadian who has been out of the country a good deal of that period."

Something more than jobs and activities would be needed, though, the veterans would welcome these.

"Some of you old retreads need only think back to a few years after the last war to understand what's going for some disenchantment of the spirit that reigned in the old trenches. Some new leaks have exactly the same feeling of futility their service morale is reaping behind them," he said.

Mr. Gregg suggested as one step in this process that the men should not be allowed to feel that during the time in the services was entirely wasted; they should be shown how their experiences would be adapted to the new role.

They should be encouraged to take part in community activity and offered responsibility—months after they have had it under conditions of life and death and have shown themselves fit for it, and the more they can take the load, this whole thing will be a problem.

Advice on helping veterans to rehabilitate themselves was offered to employers attending the reassignation conference by Brig. A. F. Chant, acting director of Rehabilitation Services in the Department of Veterans Affairs. Here are some of his observations:

1. No government program and no employer's effort can transform a fighting man into a well-adjusted peacetime citizen. In the last analysis that is a job he must do for himself. But government and employer can help to provide conditions favorable for reassimilation.

2. Veterans are much the same as other employees. Give them good working conditions, show concern for their welfare and they are likely to settle fairly easily into their jobs.

3. If a veteran is not shouldering his responsibilities he is not the only person who can deal with him successfully is another veteran.

4. The attitude of the rest of the staff is important.

5. Veterans feel that their period of service has increased their bargaining power and they have been trained not to back down in going after an objective.

"If employment managers are sincerely interested in the welfare of veterans they must be prepared to accept occasional redrawn or unnatural resistance in response to some of their best offers. Telling the veteran of will merely increase his sense of resentment."

Nursing Sister Hilda Mumby Has Tea with Queen Elizabeth

Marmora, April 13—The delightful thrill of having tea with Queen Elizabeth within a month of landing on Britain's shore has befallen Sister Hilda Mumby, who graduates to graduation from Belleville General Hospital joined the Canadian Army Medical Corps as a nursing sister and is now on the staff of No. 17 Canadian General Hospital in England. So the letter written by Lieut. (Nursing Sister) Hilda Mumby to her parents on March 22nd and just received by the courtesy of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbert Mumby, is allowed to tell its own story outside of the family circle. The letter follows:

Dear Mom, Dad and All:

I've really got something to write about this time. We had a distinguished visitor today, none other than the Queen, herself. We were told about it yesterday, so scrubbed and cleaned everything and everybody in sight. We were dressed in our work, aprons, clean veils and morning shoes. She visited every ward and met us all. She shook hands with us and we curtsied or fumbled around as best we could or other. Then in our own wards we followed her around as she visited each patient. We were allowed to talk to patients. She was dressed in pale blue wool dress and coat and pale blue hat to match—like a baby's. She had on a triple strand of beautiful pearls and a Maple Leaf pin on her lapel and carried a fawn colored fur on her arm. I don't know what it was. She spoke French to the French patients, I got three or four of her smiles and spoke to three different patients. Her skin is lovely and she has a nice quiet voice and is very friendly. I got some snaps of her outside too. There were several of the staff stood with her, our Matron in Chief over here, Miss Neill; Mal. Gen. Loudon; Major Gen. Weeks. The lady-in-waiting was here, too, of course. Goodness only say one of them would have made us weak in the knees, but didn't cause us a thought today. After they visited all the wards in the day, party came to the mess for tea. The mess president presented her with a lovely bouquet. The mess looked very nice. Lots of flowers and all, everything was polished. She stopped for us to take pictures, then left. Quite a celebration. It's not O.K. Watch the weekly papers as they say the pictures will be in. I'm not a bit excited. I've had a good look at the car she came in. It didn't look to have much over the old Whippet although I suppose it is a good one as English cars go. The Queen smiled so nicely at everyone and even visited the civilians who were on the fence. Must close now. Pass this on to the rest. I just can't write to everybody.

Love, Hilda.

In a previous letter Lieut. Mumby had mentioned the spending of an eight days leave in Belfast, Ireland, where her sister (sister of her mother) is living. One of the popular young ladies of Belfast, a graduate of Deboro Public School and later Moreton High School before choosing the nursing profession.

Shows Germans Bodies of Victims Of Hun Atrocities

Ohrdruf, Germany, April 12—(AP)— Col. Hayden A. Sears, whose armored forces discovered scenes of horror at the notorious Ohrdruf concentration camp, thought it would be a good idea for the Germans most of the town to see what the Elite Guard brutally had been doing to helpless them.

The Chestnut Hill, Mass., officer rounded up 40 leading citizens for a tour of the camp, where several hundred bodies of slain foreign workers are still in evidence.

They saw bodies sprawling in the open space between the barracks, piled like timber in one building, and heaped in a tangled mass in a wide pit in still another place where apparently some effort had been made to bury them.

At first the Germans appeared satisfied. Eighteen-year-old S. S. Sgt. Isel Ilka that." Later they voiced disgust, with one doctor saying "it's the work of beasts."

The next morning the Nazi mayor of Ohrdruf and his wife were found hanged. The army said it was suicide.

Another survivor asserted that 4,700 Internees were killed or died of maltreatment in the camp, most of them in recent weeks. American officers regarded that figure as high, but estimated that 1,400 to 1,700 was conservative.

Personal Thanks Sent Kinsmen For Fags Received

From the overrun war prisons in Germany to the far-flung battle fields around the world came words of personal thanks and appreciation for cigarettes already received from the Kinsmen Fag Fund in Belleville. Although victory over the ruthless Nazis cannot be hastened Belleville boys serving in all theatres of war personally urge the continued flow of Canadian cigarettes to our fighting men, as with the advancement of the Allied armies good cigarettes are practically impossible to procure, except when sent directly to the individual.

Although he may be liberated somewhere in Germany today a postcard indicating PO. O. V. Sweenor, of Point Anne, was some time ago to acknowledge the receipt of cigarettes from the Kinsmen Fag Fund.

"You can rest assured your efforts in sending regular shipments of cigarettes to the boys have not been in vain," writes Murray Mitchell, while sitting on the shot back of the Rhine inside Germany. PO. Bill McBride wrote of any Canadian cigarettes were a welcome following a raid on the heart of Germany, while P. E. Thorn added it was becoming more difficult to obtain fags with the speedy attacks upon the enemy. These and scores of similar replies are received daily by Kinsman Foster LeMair, all urging the increased tempo of sending Canadian cigarettes overseas.

By HELEN McCLOY

CHAPTER 17

When Basil rang the bell it was Ann Claude herself who opened the door. The living-room of the little flat above the bookshop was furnished with taste. But street noise came from the windows, and a smell of frying onions from the hall—a contrast to the space and stillness of the Jocelyn house. Reluctantly, Basil's mind played with the fantastic idea that Kitty's illness had been a genuine attack of malaria at first, and that Ann had found some way to poison Kitty after the impersonation began, hoping to slip into Kitty's shoes permanently.

Impossible! cried his heart. But his head answered: Poisoners are often neglected people—poor relations, old maids, servants who have few normal outlets for initiative and who enjoy the secret power poison gives them over the lives of others. . . .

"Polly, do come here!" Ann was saying. "This is the man who decided I was sane after all. He's half Russian and the only man I know who would look all right in eighteen century dress!"

"Hello, Dr. Willing!"

Polly was as plain as Ann was pretty, but like most plain girls today, she was carefully dressed.

"Of course it's official!" put in Polly. "Kitty was poisoned and your father was a biological chemist. You're number one suspect!"

She would not have said such a thing had she realized that Ann was actually under suspicion. Ann herself knew better. Her face was suddenly white.

Basil tried to reassure her. "You're not legally obliged to answer any question at present. But it would be a help if you could tell us a little more about Kitty Jocelyn. Just what sort of girl was she?"

"That's rather difficult." Ann's voice was low and even. "You see I only knew her about four months."

"I'll make allowances for that."

"Well, then—Kitty was good-natured and generous. There was a streak or cynicism in her nature—that was part of her environment. She might have done things that were venal or dishonest, but I can't imagine her doing anything cruel. That's why I can't understand how any one could have wanted to—to kill her."

"Now this is a rather important question," said Basil. "Did any one show surprise when you first appeared at the dance impersonating Kitty?"

Ann was silent for a few moments. "Dr. Willing," she answered finally, "I can't remember any one who looked surprised."

Basil made one more effort. "Did anything happen at the dance that you haven't told us? Anything out of the ordinary however slight?"

Color rushed into Ann's cheeks. "There's one thing. But you'd hardly call it 'out of the ordinary.'"

"Yes?"

"It was Nicholas Danine. I think he'd had too much to drink. When we were alone he was rather tiresome. Wanted to paw me."

"Don't boast!" sang out Polly.

"That's why I didn't mention it before. I knew every one would think I was boasting. But you know what dances are. Even Philip Leach tried to kiss me, but Rhoda had warned me that he was a philanderer who made love to everybody. . . ."

That evening Basil wrote a careful summary of Ann's latest testimony, and Tuesday morning he took it in to Inspector Foyle.

"Danine again!" cried Foyle, when he read it. "Honest, doc, that guy is driving me haywire. I thought he'd be hard to get hold of—a big shot like him. Instead o' that, he's bothering the life out of me! He called up again this A.M. and said he must see me this afternoon. He's got a new idea about the case. I wish you'd come along with me."

"Nothing I'd like better!"

"Honest? Gee,doc I wanted to ask you to come with me yesterday when I saw Mrs. Jowett and Edgar Jocelyn, only I didn't quite like to. Maybe you can get some sense out of Danine if you talk to him in his own lingo."

Basil was twisting a ring on the little finger of his left hand. "I rather think we'll get more out of him if he doesn't know I understand Russian. It's an old trick, but a very useful one."

As the police car drove uptown, Basil drew the ring from his finger. It was an uncut emerald with a crest rather crudely engraved.

"This ring belonged to my mother's father," he explained to Foyle and Duff. Danine might recognize the Russian workmanship. So—" he slipped the ring into his breast pocket. "Now I'm safe. 'Willing' doesn't sound very Slav, and, of course, 'Basil' is a perfectly good Anglo-Saxon name. Danine has no way of knowing that it happens to be a translation of 'Vassily' in my case."

At the hotel, they learned that Danine was in one of the tower apartments. His secretary came down to show them the way. The elevator came to a stop. They were shown through a hallway into a drawing room with many windows.

"Whew!" The inspector whistled softly.

Manhattan Island and all its streets and rivers were spread out far below—a realistic relief map with glass and metal fixtures blinking in the last rays of the pale winter sun.

"Sorry to keep you waiting, Inspector."

"This is Dr. Willing, Mr. Danine," explained Foyle. "He's in the district attorney's office. If you don't mind, I'd like him to hear your new theory."

The arched brows rose a little. "Not the Dr. Willing who wrote Time and Mentality? This is indeed a pleasure."

"And I brought along Officer Duff to take notes," added Foyle.

"Please sit down," responded Danine. "Tell me, Inspector Royle, what progress have you made?"

"Not much." The inspector answered shortly.

"And my reward? No responses?"

"Dozen. Hundreds. But all from cranks and crackpots."

"Cranks? And what?"

"What Dr. Willing here calls neurotics."

"Oh." The voice was enigmatic, the face veiled in drifting smoke. "I wonder if some one like that could be responsible for poor Kitty's death. Surely no one but a neurotic would poison such a charming. . ."

"Is that the new theory you wanted to tell me about, Mr. Danine?"

"No." Danine leaned back in his chair, his head canted to one side, his eyes half shut. "Has it occurred to you that the poison might not have been meant for Kitty at all? That she might have taken a cocktail intended for some other person?"

"But who [illegible] —?" Inspector Foyle said.

Danine's smile had a fine edge. "Couldn't the poison have been meant for—me?"

"For you! Why?"

"We—ell. . ." The slim hand made an eloquent gesture. "There is an absurd prejudice today against any one connected with the munitions industry — even against a mere salesman like myself, who peddles munitions, as another man may peddle bonds or neckties in order to earn a living with no technical knowledge of the thing he sells. . . It's absurd but natural, for the mob mind is incapable of realism. The munition maker has become a symbol and a scapegoat. The mob vilifies him virtuously — and then proceeds to glorify all the emotions and economic customs that really cause war."

"Were any of the folks at the cocktail party peace hounds who might have tried to poison you because you were a munition worker?"

Danine's brows lifted. "Well, the butler, Gregg, was an ex-soldier, I believe. And it was he who served the cocktails. Some ex-soldiers are fanatical pacifists."

"That's so." Foyle turned to Basil. "Didn't you say he was a shell-shock case?"

"I wonder if any of the others could be pacifists?" ruminated Foyle. "Did you meet the Jocelyns for the first time in Cannes last summer, Mr. Danine?"

"Yes." Danine lit another cigarette. "Kitty and her stepmother; Miss Claude; Victorine, the maid, and Pasquale were all there. I was attracted to Kitty at once. A charming child! Artemis in a white bathing-suit. . . ."

"None of that bunch are the stuff fanatics are made of," said Foyle. "Unless it's Victorine. She's French and the French had it pretty tough in the last war. Did Victorine ever act queer toward you, Mr. Danine?"

"I have no recollection of it."

"Well, I guess that's all for the present." Foyle rose. "We'll keep this idea of yours in mind, Mr. Danine."

"There may be nothing in it." Danine was deprecating. "But it just occurred to me, and I thought I'd pass it along. After all, I have made more enemies in my fifty-three years than poor little Kitty in her eighteen."

He touched a bell. A manservant entered the room, moving as silently as his master—an old man, tall, bent and white-haired. He, too, had blurred, blue eyes, deepset under heavy eyelids. His hands were also narrow and tapering, with almond shaped nails.

An idea came to Basil. "Was this man with you at Cannes last summer?" he asked.

"Oh, yes." Danine moistened his lips with his tongue. "Sergei goes with me everywhere. I couldn't get along without him!"

"Then I wonder if I might question Sergei? He would certainly know more about Victorine than you!"

"As you please!" Danine's voice had lost its blandness. "But I warn you, that you won't get anything out of Sergei. Like most Russians of his class, he is lazy, stupid and superstitious."

The room had been growing darker for some time. Danine switched on a table lamp and spoke to Sergei in Russian. His tone was the ordinary, dispassionate tone of a man speaking to a servant. If Basil had not understood the language he would never have guessed that the words were interlarded with personal abuse.

"These men wish to question you—you filthy swine! Answer without lying—if you can!"

"What is your full name?" asked Basil.

"My name is Sergei Piotrovitch Radanine, sir," came the reply in excellent English.

"How do you spell that? Slav names are so difficult. . ."

Sergei produced a Nansen passport.

"I see. Thank you. Now I want to ask you about Mrs. Jocelyn's maid, Victorine. I understand you knew her in Cannes last summer. Is she a pacifist?"

"Not to my knowledge, sir. But I only talked to her two or three times—no more."

"In French, I suppose?" inquired Basil.

Danine answered again. "Yes, Sergei has picked up quite a little French as well as English. But you see it's hopeless trying to question him. You'll get nothing intelligent out of such canaille."

"Hey! Wait a minute!" Inspector Foyle thought he had been quiet long enough. "Let me handle this bird!"

"As you please, Inspector Coyle." Danine's voice was dry.

"Say, are you trying to be funny, Mr. Danine? My name's Foyle! 'F'—that's the first letter—'F'!"

"I'm so sorry, Inspector. Just a slip of the tongue. Quite unintentional, I assure you."

"Huh!" The inspector turned to Sergei. "You a communist?"

"No, sir."

"What were you doing before the revolution?"

"A soldier, sir."

"And after that?"

"I worked on a French railway on the Riviera. When the franc rose and the Americans and English stopped coming, I lost my job."

Speedsters Pay Heavy Court Fines

Despite increased fine penalties imposed upon speedsters charges of speeding, preferred under the War Measures Act, continue to dominate the local Thursday morning County Police Court held before Magistrate T. Y. Wills.

Warnings that the sum of one dolar a mile, in excess to 50 miles an hour, would be assessed speedsters over and above the minimum fine mandatory under the W.M.A. up to 50 miles per hour seems to have taken no effect as three such violators paid fines today. Gerard Phenix, Galt, was assessed $42.50 after being convicted of being apprehended driving his car at a 75-mile an hour clip. Murney Manson, Springbrook, paid ten dollars less than Phenix after pleading guilty to speeding at 65-miles per hour. Ernest Davis, Belleville was only accelerating between 40 and 50 miles an hour so he paid the minimum of $15.00 and costs. The same applied to Douglas Russell, of Toronto.

Other traffic charges saw Russel convicted of driving without a permit as well as the speeding count, while D. Rendell, Belleville, paid ten and costs for failing to report an accident contrary to the H.T.A.

Convicted of drunk driving S.B. Jones, Belleville and Patrick Cain, Foxboro, were given seven days and their driving licences suspended for a period of three months. The traffic charges cases were preferred by Traffic Officers H. Caldwell, W. Hendren and Provincial Constable Chas. Siple.

Writer Fined for Cutting Pages in Library Books

New York, April 12—(CP)—Dr. Baldo Aquilano, lecturer, writer and founder of the Order of the Sons of Italy in America, was convicted yesterday of destroying two "irreplaceable" books in the New York public library by removing 11 pages from them, and fined $250, with an alternative of three months in the work-house. Dr. Aquilano, who will pay the fine, pleaded guilty. The books were the first of a set of four called "Italica" surveying native Italian prose and poetry from 1870 to 1928.

POLICE COURT

"I don't see how my client could be guilty of such a charge if for no other reason than he was in jail at the time of the alleged offence," revealed Robt. McCulloch, local barrister, as he startled today's police court appearing for Garnet Hart, Belleville, who had been charged with illegal fishing.

Magistrate T. Y. Wills looked about the court with a smile, while Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K.C. entertained a puzzled expression. However, it was all fathomed out when Game Warden Fred McDonald rushed into the breach to remark—"Why this isn't the man I apprehended spearing in the river. I can fetch the guilty party in next week. But he did give me the name of "Garnet Hart", admitted Game Warden McDonald.

"Make them produce their registration card the next time," commented Mr. Donnan as the charge against Hart was withdrawn.

Police court in Belleville is rapidly developing into proportions of a large tribunal. On Tuesday Magistrate T. Y. Wills had a total of 44 cases listed in city police court, while on Thursday in County Police Court His Worship was presented with a docket containing 41 cases, making the week's total to date 85 cases with still another police court sitting scheduled to be held on Friday.

Sixteen of the Thursday morning court list were for violations of the Game and Fish regulations, charging the accused persons with illegal fishing, namely grappling or spearing. The majority of these cases listed were enlarged but Nick Chaggares, Gordon Dingman, Thos. Boyle, Jack Calbury of Belleville and Gordon Green and Russell Hill, of Shannonville, all paid $12.50, including costs, previous to the proceedings thereby evading the trouble of being present.

Urge Medal Be Given Reserve Army Personnel

Recommendations to the government, that personnel of the reserve Army, who have served for a certain period of time be given some sort of tangible recognition, preferably a medal, will be forwarded to the Department of National Defence by senior non-commissioned officers of the reserve force, it was learned from an authoritative source today.

Requests for concurrence in the recommendation and their reactions to the proposal have been received by sergeant majors of local reserve units and it is presumed the move is nation-wide.

The idea was born in the minds of senior nco's in an Ottawa Reserve Army Brigade group, which forwarded requests to regiments in outlying districts.

The recommendation calls for some recognition such as the "striking of a medal" to be awarded to reserve army personnel, who have served faithfully and efficiently for a period of three years, and those who have taken special courses of instruction at courses given at outside points.

GENERAL ELECTION

Won 38 Seats.

The Progressive Conservatives won 38 seats in the last election, the C.C.F. 34, the Liberals 15, Labor-Progressives two and Independent Liberal one in the 90-seat House. Since then the Liberal strength has been increased to 16 by the return to party ranks of Mitchell F. Hepburn, who was elected as an Independent Liberal. The C.C.F. lost two members—Nelson Alles of Essex North who now is Independent Labor and Leslie Hancock of Wellington South, who now is Independent Farmer Labor.

The vote on which the government was defeated was 51 to 36. It came just before midnight March 22 and two days later Premier Drew announced that the legislature had been dissolved and that an election would be held.

T. Delaney; 3rd trustee V. Willis; Sgt. at Arms; W. Badgley; Inner Guard, G. Mattis; Outer Guard, Leo Gauthier.

A large case of candidates was initiated into the order with the initiation ceremonies being in charge of the degree team of the Trenton Lodge.

CAR STOLEN IN CITY FOUND ABANDONED

A short time after being reported stolen off Front St., a coupe belonging to S. R. Burrows of this city, was found abandoned on the cross road between Cannifton and the Foxboro road. When police recovered the vehicle the gears were stripped. Mr. Burrows had parked his coupe in front of his business office on Front St. Wednesday afternoon and removing the ignition keys placed them above the sun visor. Apparently the car thief watched this proceeding and stole the vehicle as soon as Mr. Burrows left.

Shortly before noon today Deputy Chief Arthur Harman announced the arrest of a teen-aged parole violator from the Bowmanville institution. The lad was apprehended on a farm near Foxboro, allegedly in possession of a bicycle belonging to William Dack of this city. Deputy Chief Harman added that three charges would be preferred against the boy, namely that of stealing Mr. Burrows' car and also the theft of two bicycles in Belleville. He will appear in special juvenile court.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT DEAD

Within 48 Miles Of German Capital After 60-Mile Dash

Denmark is Outflanked; Luftwaffe Revolt Hinted

Paris, April 13 (AP) — The U.S. 9th Army pressed within 48 miles of Berlin today in a 60-mile advance-dash to Tangermunde outflanking Denmark, Hamburg and Luebeck.

Far behind the lines menacing Berlin, the 9th Army captured Duisburg, a Ruhr city of 431,255, which was Europe's greatest inland port. Duisburg, 14th largest city of Germany, is in the heavily shrinking Ruhr annihilation pocket where tens of thousands of Nazis were trapped.

The swift advance of the 9th Army moved Division to Tangermunde, where the Germans announced they had blown the Elbe bridges, placed the 9th Army within 93 miles of Russian lines facing Berlin from the east.

The United States 3rd Army in the centre-front east along the last 18 miles to the great Saxony city of Leipzig in a drive to encircle many, join the Russians and bar access from the north to the national redoubt in the Bavarian Alps. The Germans said American tanks were fighting in Halle, 15 miles from Leipzig, after by-passing its industrial defences south of Merseburg.

The Army and other Americans were fighting in Weissenfels, 20 miles southwest of Leipzig.

Denmark is the only country conquered by the Germans which the Allies have not yet invaded.

Marshal Zhukov, in an Allied Control Council meeting attended by Gen. Eisenhower, Field Marshal Montgomery and Gen. de Lattre de Tassigny, announced that Russian troops had reached the Elbe on a 60-mile front between Dessau and Wittenberg, 50 miles southwest of Berlin, and had established bridgeheads on either side of Schlieswig-Holstein, Germany's northernmost state.

The 3rd Army drive southeast of Weimar, "geographical centre of Germany," overran Buchenwald, the enemy's national redoubt in the Bavarian Alps and marched into the near approaches to the Czechoslovak border, barely 95 miles away at last reports.

Tanks neared Leipzig were across the Saale at Bumbuhl, nine miles southeast of Naumberg in the Quedlinburg area. There they were 72 miles from Dessau, southeast, capital of Saxony, which Russian columns threaten.

Fall Of Nazis

"The war is in its last gasp, sir," Propaganda Minister Goebbin said gloomily. "It is finished, very low."

The British 2nd Army continued the siege of Bremen and fought slowly along the last 50 miles toward Hamburg, Germany's greatest port and second largest city.

The 1st Canadian Army continued into The Netherlands city of Arnhem (92,000) whose bridge of ar earlier Allied victory were killed last fall with the defeat of the British 1st Parachute Division.

Brunswick and Magdeburg, last large cities on the northern approaches to Berlin, were besieged and toppling; Genshagen in the centre approached Halle. Those in the south fought within 30 miles of Hayreuth and 29 of Nuremberg key cities in the Bavarian Alps where Hitler hopes to make his last stand.

Huge streams of German vehicles were spotted moving southwestward from the Elbe area into the Harz mountain redoubt.

Red Sights Only 2 German Flights

The 3rd Army advanced at will with no artillery, mortar or small-arms fire against slightly only two German planes.

"The virtual disappearance of the German air force over the 3rd Army front appeared to substantiate reports of a 'Luftwaffe revolt'," Bidward D. Hall, Associated Press war correspondent, wirelessed. "Two enemy planes attacked yesterday and one was shot down."

Dispatches from 12th Army group headquarters earlier in the week said the execution of more than 100 Luftwaffe officers had been reported.

"Another officer's revolt in the Luftwaffe is anticipated," Tom Yarbrough, Associated Press war correspondent, said in a dispatch from Gen. Bradley's offices today.

The U. S. 1st and 3rd Armies were operating under partial security blackouts. All Gen. Eisenhower's nine armies were striking so swiftly that stretched communications kept information of the supreme command as much as 36 hours behind actual events.

Objectives Within Grasp

All four immediate objectives of the multiple offensive appeared within grasp:

1. Isolation of Germany by a junction with the Russians.

2. Smashing further approaches to the redoubt.

3. Capture of Berlin.

4. Seizure of Leipzig.

Gains front correspondents said Leipzig might be captured by night. The U. S. 3rd Armored Division was reported within 15 miles of Leipzig's Hall into Berlin by tonight or Saturday morning should the order be given.

Bigger fish than Berlin might be in the haverns, however, as the annihilation of all German armed forces in the east is hot outhcricized by the Russians.

Here Lies Ruhr Death Trap

The U. S. 1st and 9th armies had divisions boring steadily into the Ruhr valley 100 far behind the advanced front. Perhaps 100,000 Germans have been imminent capture. Other Ruhr cities such as Dortmund, Dusseldorf, Duisburg, Wuppertal, Remscheid and Hagen all were behind the lines. Essen fell was near.

The Canadians carved into a large salient in Holland where up to 200,000 Germans are enclosed. Front reports of up to 40,000 was enclosed on three sides southwest of Arnhem, Netherlands.

The pace of reported advances in the last 24 hours ranged up to 30 miles through the heart of Germany. Even before Jena was entered, Allied armies had overrun the historic battlefield where Napoleon won one of his greatest triumphs.

The German front in the centre had virtually disappeared. The only resistance worthy of the name came against British and Canadian troops in the north on the approaches to the Ruhr from the west and on the south against the U.S. 1st Army. The 1st Armies moving against the western fringes of the redoubt on the approaches to Nuremberg and Stuttgart.

CITY OF BRUENN UNDER ATTACK BY RUSSIAN ARMIES

Cutting Last Lifelines Between Two Cities Dooming Remaining Germans in Vienna

London, April 13 (CP) — Russian troops were moving today on the Czechoslovak city of Bruenn (Brno), 80 miles north of Vienna, after cutting the last lifeline between the two cities in attacks that doomed remaining German forces in the historic Austrian capital.

Bruenn said Soviet spearheads burst within 33 miles of Bruenn in an invasion over the southern Moravia border.

Inside Vienna, fall of which has been expected hourly, there was bitter house-to-house fighting as Marshal F. Tolbukhin's 3rd, Ukrainian army yesterday seized 60 blocks of the Jewish quarter of Leopoldstadt, between the Danube and the Danube Canal.

The Germans have concentrated their Vienna forces for defence of the last small strip of land between the two waterways. One escape gap now remains open to the Germans. It is along a railroad running northwest from the city, but Moscow said early today that this, too, was under heavy Russian artillery fire.

Softer Terrific Losses

The Germans are suffering terrific losses in the Vienna fighting. In 4,000 attacks and men killed yesterday, the Russians said.

Marshal Tolbukhin reported a general German withdrawal west of the besieged capital along the Danube Valley in the direction of Hitler's Alpine mountain fortress of Berchtesgaden.

South of Vienna, Tolbukhin's troops were by the foothills of the Austrian Alps on a 65-mile front, scoring 40 towns on the roads to Graz, Austria's second city.

Marshal Malinovsky's Ukrainian 2nd, Ukrainian Army troops were advancing along the west and east banks of the Hron River between Bruenn, which guards the northern approaches to Vienna.

Nearing Lundenburg

On the east side they were nearing the rail centre of Lundenburg, while on the west bank Malinovsky's men reached the river on at least a 16-mile front, within shelling distance of the border of Austria, which, with Bohemia, is the last war production area supplying a crumbling German armies.

Hundreds and Great Folk of World Honor Memory of Late President

By The Canadian Press

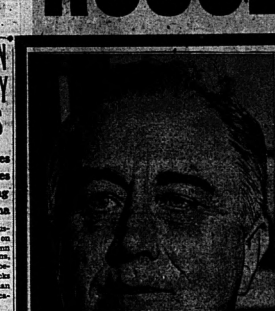
Around the world, the humble and the great paid tribute today to Franklin Delano Roosevelt in words of praise and sorrow.

The flags of virtually all countries flew at half mast. Many governments decreed a period of mourning. Expressions of sympathy streamed into the White House from world capitals.

Joseph V. Stalin announced that King George had received the wife-mourning message.

Prime Minister Churchill, Premier Stalin and Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek addressed messages of condolence to Mrs. Roosevelt.

Mr. Churchill, declaring he personally had lost a "cherished friendship," said the "heart-throbs" of millions "at the loss of the British nation and of the cause of freedom in every land."



Today Mr. Churchill asked the hushed House of Commons to adjourn in respect to a man "of immortal renown...this great statesman and friend of our time."

Mr. Stalin said the Russians highly valued President Roosevelt as a great organizer of the struggle of the United States and nations against the common enemy and as the leader in the cause of ensuring peace for all the whole world."

President Chiang said the president's name "will be a source of light to humanity for centuries to come" and "will be inspired by the gratitude she owed him."

The news that the president had died was flashed quickly to troops in the field and aboard ship, now fighting toward a victorious end of history's greatest war. They, like those at home, were shocked and unbelieving.

HOUSE SOBERED, SADDENED BY NEWS OF DEATH

Apply-Finishing Touches to Business So Prime Minister Can Attend Funeral

By FRANK FLAHERTY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, April 13. (CP)—A saddened and sobered House of Commons assembled at 2.000 o'clock this afternoon to apply the finishing touches to the business of the 19th Parliament of Canada.

News of the sudden death of President Roosevelt yesterday and a desire on the part of members to facilitate attendance of Prime Minister Mackenzie King at the funeral ceremony is expected to result in some curtailment of debate and perhaps a speedier passage of the financial bills required to tide the government over the period of the general election.

Today the flag flies at half-staff from the Peace Tower in the centre of Parliament Hill in tribute to the man who spoke under the Tower's gothic arch 1 1-3 years ago, the President who had closer relations with and more friends in Canada than any previous head of the United States government.

Parties Brought Together

The news flash which told the Commons of the President's death was one of the rare things which bring political rivals and contending parties together.

In mid-afternoon Munitions Minister Howe and Karl Skuzuik (CC Waterloo South) were on their feet shouting at each other as they argued over alleged profiteering on munitions contracts.

Suddenly all members were standing in hushed and silent tribute to President Roosevelt. The House adjourned for the evening out of respect to his memory. Soon after moving tributes from party leaders and then a group gathered around Prime Minister Mackenzie King whose grim and sorrowful unusually pale features told of the emotion he felt at the loss of a friend as well as a colleague.

Busy One For Howe

Previously the day was a busy one for the House. Mr. Howe, as Minister of Reconstruction, tabled a white paper outlining government policy on "employment and income in stage two of the war," after the defeat of Germany and gave an outline of the government's reconstruction set-up. The policy announced by the Minister was described as aimed at a

Promises to Carry on the Policies of Predecessor, Franklin D. Roosevelt

By C. B. BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, April 13 (CP)—The eyes of a shocked Allied world were turned today upon Harry S. Truman, 60-year-old former county judge untried in states craft, who as 32nd President of the United States promised to carry on the policies of his predecessor, Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

Mr. Truman became President at 7:09 p.m. E.D.T. yesterday, less than three hours after the death of Mr. Roosevelt at Warm Springs, Ga. Mr. Roosevelt, four times elected to his country's highest office, died at the age of 63 in the "Little White House" in which he had gone thirty weeks ago seeking relaxation from his arduous duties as the country's Commander-in-Chief.

At 63 Mr. Roosevelt was the youngest of the "Big Three" who worked together to win the war and ensure that this time, world peace would be maintained. Prime Minister Churchill, Britain's leader in her hour of need, is 70 years old. Premier Joseph Stalin is 66.

Makes Statement

Into the place at the "Big Three" council table at which Mr. Roosevelt sat so long wielded great influence as leader of the world's greatest republic steps President Truman with a brief statement. His first statement: "The world may be sure that we will persevere this war on both fronts, east and west, with all the vigor we possess, to a successful conclusion."

News of the President's death was given to the world with a restraint unexpectedness at 5:40 p.m. E.C.T. yesterday. Only official Washington knew that the President had left Warm Springs. He had been thought in good health; only his closest advisers were told that he had been "under the weather" in recent days.

Conference as Scheduled

While the anxious world sought to evaluate the import of the sudden change, President Truman announced that he will try to carry on as he believes Mr. Roosevelt would have done. The San Francisco Conference, he said, out of which

118 JAP PLANES DESTROYED IN FIERCE BATTLES

U.S. Destroyer Sunk And Several Others Damaged off Okinawa Island Thursday

Guam, April 13 (AP) — A strong Japanese air fleet, including pilots bent on suicide missions, crashed against choice targets, sank an American destroyer and damaged several other ships off Okinawa yesterday in a fierce engagement in which 118 enemy aircraft were destroyed.

All evidence suggested that most of the attacking force was wiped out—by aircraft carrier and land-based American interceptors and anti-aircraft guns ashore and afloat.

The attack was directed at ships and supply dumps of the U.S. 10th Army's headquarters established Easter morning near Hagushi on the west coast. Seven planes were destroyed in the morning and 111 in a furious afternoon engagement.

Tokyo radio claimed without confirmation that Japanese fliers sank two battleships and two large transports in the Okinawa action and left five other battleships afire. It said only two Japanese planes were lost.

Attack Suicidal

The enemy radio also reported two airfields, one in the north, the other in the south section of Okinawa had been bombed by Japanese army planes at dawn yesterday, supported by airfield fighters. Another air attack was launched after nightfall, the broadcast said.

Admiral Nimitz, describing the attack as suicidal in his communique today, indicated the Japanese pilots were members of the "Kamikaze" special attack corps, highly-advertised by the Japanese as their crack suicide fliers. There has been no official mention of Japanese suicide fliers for six months or more.

Nimitz said all the American ships damaged remained in operation.

Fighting in the southern sector of Okinawa did not relax in intensity. Ground forces in the southern sector were reported for the eighth successive day to be advancing, with the north moved westward along the rugged Motobu Peninsula and northward along the Katchin Isthmus against only sporadic resistance.

Suddenly Stricken With Hemorrhage At Warm Springs

Body Will Not Lie in State, Funeral Will Be on Saturday

By HAROLD D. OLIVER

Warm Springs, Ga., April 13 — (AP)— Franklin Delano Roosevelt's long and colorful public career is at an end.

Sudden, painless death halted it abruptly yesterday as the 31st President of the United States seemingly was about to see the fruition of his plans for bringing lasting peace to a war-ridden world. He was 63 last Jan. 30.

The news came unexpectedly at 4:35 p.m. in a simply-furnished bedroom of the Little White House lodge. It was caused by a "massive" cerebral hemorrhage.

Mr. Roosevelt came here March 30 for one of his periodic visits to rest, and to bask in the sun. His had planned to stay another week. Then return to Washington, spend a day and start out again for the momentous trip to San Francisco to open the World Security Conference April 25.

To Be Taken to Capital

On Missouri Farm for 50 Years, Today Occupant of White House

By CHARLES NUTTER

Independence, Mo., April 13. — (AP)—The long corn row down which he plodded half a century behind a mule is all that remains of what has led Harry S. Truman to the White House at a turning point in world history.

As President of the United States, Mr. Truman today holds the third highest executive position in America's jobs he didn't want and which he was content to let another handle. He wanted naught but a longer look at his living.

Twelve years ago not a dozen influential persons in Washington and elsewhere outside the world capitals knew of the existence of the man now in command-in-chief of United States armies around the world in a global war. Today a victory that poses staggering world leadership responsibilities.

Mr. Truman then was an obscure county judge (county commissioner) of Jackson County, Mo., a job he had held off and on for 10 years. He aspired to higher things—perhaps the governorship of Missouri. Or... He went to hom Tom Pendergast, Kansas City boss, and in 1934 seeking Pendergast's assistance received support for the collectorship.

"Harry, I ain't going to support you," Pendergast told Mr. Truman, who couldn't believe his ears when Pendergast continued "You're going to run for the United States Senate."

Ten years in the Senate found Truman in 1944 chosen as candidate with that job and wanting no other.

Warm Springs, Ga., April 13 — (AP)— Franklin Delano Roosevelt's long and colorful public career is at an end.

Mr. Roosevelt came here March 30 for one of his periodic visits to rest, and to bask in the sun. His had planned to stay another week. Then return to Washington, spend a day and start out again for the momentous trip to San Francisco to open the World Security Conference April 25.

To Be Taken to Capital

The President's body was to be taken to Washington on special train leaving here at 11 a.m. E.D.T. today. The train will reach the national capital at 10 a.m. E.D.T. Saturday.

Mrs. Roosevelt arrived last night from Washington. She flew in an Army transport. Rushing to nearby Columbus with Stephen T. Early, White House secretary, and Vice-Admiral Ross T. McIntire, White House physician and U. S. Navy surgeon-general.

Funeral services are to be held at 4 p.m. E.D.T. Saturday in the historic East Room of the White House.

The body will not lie in state. Funeral will be at the family home at Hyde Park, N.Y., Sunday.

Simple Funeral Service

Presidential Secretary William D. Hassett said the funeral services would be of the same "utmost simplicity" the President decreed for his own funeral here Dec. 24, 1941.

He said that six hours after the services in the East Room the body will be entrained for Hyde Park, to arrive at the Roosevelt estate on the east bank of the Hudson River at 8 a.m. Sunday.

Burial will be at 10 a.m., in the family garden between the rambling stone and stucco mansion of the Roosevelt library.

Members of the Cabinet and Supreme Court, heads of Federal agencies, Congressional groups of senators and representatives, members of the family and friends will attend the funeral party from Washington.

The White Room services will be conducted by Bishop Angus Dun of the Washington Episcopal Church.

Rev. Howard S. Wilkinson, of St. Thomas Episcopal Church, and Rev. Frank L. Vernon, rector of Episcopal Church across Lafayette Park from the White House.

Senior Deacon in Church

Conducting the burial service in Hyde Park will be Rev. Dr. George W. Anthony, new rector of St. James Episcopal Church where the President was Senior Deacon.

Mrs. Roosevelt, Mr. Early and Admiral McIntire were driven immediately to the President's cottage after they arrived by car from Fort. Benning shortly before midnight.

Mrs. Roosevelt was described by officials as bearing up "very nobly, heroically."

Warm Springs village and its nearby foundation for after-treatment of infantile paralysis — which Mr. Roosevelt helped found, after he had been stricken and crippled by the disease — were affected by the news of the passing of the president.

Fife was elected to a fourth term a little more than five months ago and was inaugurated Jan. 20. Mr. Roosevelt was the first president of the United States ever to serve more than two terms.

Aim is 'High, Stable Living'

Ottawa, April 13.—(CP)—Secondary aftermath Howe yesterday gave the Commons an outline of the basis on which he believes the government proposes to tackle the problems of conversion from war to a peace economy.

The goal, he said, in a White Paper which was devoted largely to a discussion of problems arising out of demobilization, "is to win the end of fighting in Europe and victory in the Pacific. The fundamental aim of the program was defined as a high and stable living."

It was estimated that the employment of 800,000 persons more than in 1939 would provide adequate employment.

Mr. Howe also proposed to increase export trade over the pre-war rate, despite taxation, through a special policy to encourage private enterprise and plan public projects, particularly for the development and conservation of natural resources.

"Our war production during recent months has been greater than the demands upon war industry and upon labor in Canada have been greater than in any previous period", Mr. Howe said in a statement when he tabled the paper.

TPR. BRUCE BANKEY WOUNDED IN ACTION

Trooper Bruce Bankey, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bankey, 49 Charles Street, has been wounded in action in Germany, his parents were officially informed yesterday.

He enlisted in April, 1943, as a driver in the 4th Alberta Armored Regiment and went overseas in January of the next year. After training in England he was attached to an armored unit and saw fighting in France, Belgium, Holland and Germany. At present he is recovering from his wounds in a Canadian hospital behind the Allied lines in Germany.

Firemen Busy With Small Blazes

Neighborhood boys playing around a bonfire in the West Moira Street district and spreading the flames by carrying burning papers caused the local fire department a brief run to the Moira-Boswell St. area Thursday evening.

Tenants of a brick terrace had lit the bonfire and boys carrying burning papers had dropped them behind the rear kitchen. A neighbor, Mr. J. Gleason saw the danger and after putting the fire out notified firemen who ascertained the names of the boys involved. Assistant Fire Chief Gerald Vance this morning indicated the boys responsible would be reprimanded.

A second alarm was answered to South Church Street where the roof of a small residence owned by Mrs. Mabel Mark had taken fire as result of stove pipe running through the roof. Only small damage resulted, it was reported.

Later in the evening firemen were called to the Direct Winters Transport on Pinnacle Street where the tarpaulin of a tractor trailer in the yard had in some manner taken fire. The truck had been in the yard all day and it is thought passer-by may have tossed a burning cigarette onto the canvas cover.

Today firemen made several trips to the waterfront garbage dump where troublesome flames had vbroken out.

Ald. L. McDougall Tells of Projects Being Considered

Civic projects under consideration by the local city council for the post war period were the topic of discussion at the regular weekly dinner meeting of the local Y's-Men's club held at the "Y" Thursday evening.

Speaking to members of the club, Alderman Lorne McDougall outlined the many projects now under consideration mentioning specifically the sewage disposal plant, flood control measures for the Moira River, the Riverside Drive project and the need of a bus station in this city.

Construction of a sewage disposal plant was deemed by the speaker as being the only way in which Belleville's waterfront could be cleaned up, and any work on beaches projects or waterfront parks would be more or less wasted until this was completed. Work on the Belleville Beaches south of the hospital area was brought to a standstill because of water pollution in the bay, he said. Estimated costs of a sewage disposal plant of the kind needed for local requirements was estimated at approximately $325,000, but it was considered the complete project would run more than this figure.

Widen Bay Channel.

Widening and deepening of the Bay of Quinte channel to accommodate larger boats to Belleville dock to take advantage of possible completion of the St. Lawrence waterway system to take ocean-going ships, was a matter mooted by the Harbor Commission in addition to other work planned of a more local nature.

Flood control measures in the Moira were stated to be linked up with reforestation and soil conservation throughout the entire river watershed. A survey of the river in anticipation of a program of this nature would possibly be completed this year.

The Riverside Drive project was being held up temporarily until the needed land was obtained from property owners involved. The municipal board was agreeable to the city purchasing buildings needed to be rased but was opposed to purchase of land required.

Lack of a bus station in Belleville was bad advertising for this city according to Mr. McDougall. According to present plans, however, this lack may soon be remedied as the Canadian Legion are contemplating construction of such a building to be operated on a commercial basis.

New Industries Needed.

New industries or expansion of present plants in the city was needed if rehabilitation of armed forces personnel was to be of a permanent nature. The local industrial commission now have prospects of several new industries, while others would come to this city if suitable buildings were available.

Town planning with view of expansion of present city limits was another project which was due in Belleville as lots within the corporation were now practically all sold. Parking meters were touched on briefly with the comment, that local merchants seemed opposed to the idea.

Introduced by Jack Wilson.

The guest speaker was introduced by Jack Wilson with club appreciation being expressed by Don Williams. President Gordon "Bud" Thrill was in the chair with Alec Gordon at the piano and Roy Wilcox as song leader. Bob Hinchey asked for volunteers to assist with Friday night's Teen-Age Club dance.

A guest at the dinner meeting was Mr. Don Hubbard of the National Y.M.C.A. Council, who spoke of Y's-Men's clubs as being in many cases forerunners of Y.M.C.A.'s. He outlined the post-war program of the Y.M.C.A. across Canada and urged that young people be given responsibility in running their own affairs.

Toronto, April 13. (CP)— Teachers' salaries and suggestions regarding methods of payment were up for discussion today at the second session of a two-day sitting of the Royal Commission investigating Ontario's Educational System.

Two briefs concerning teachers' salaries were presented during this morning's sitting. A brief prepared by a committee representing the Ontario and Toronto Ratepayers Associations discussed salaries in the light of educational costs, while a paper, presented by F. A. McClelland, chairman of the Board of Education of suburban Leaside, contained suggestions for payment of salaries to the teaching body in Ontario.

Ratepayers' Brief.

The ratepayers' brief was presented by Harold R. [illegible] of Toronto, and signed by Jamieson Bone, of Belleville, chairman of the Ontario body and J. Ernest MacMillan, chairman of the Toronto Association.

Increase in teachers' salaries was one of the channels through which educational grants by the province to municipal education board were lost to the taxpayer. Although the educational grants were made to lighten the taxpayers burden, approximate statistics showed the benefits of the grant had been absorbed by new educational expenses.

As economic measures to reduce the costs of education in municipalities the brief suggested reduction of the number of school boards in the province, appointment of provincial representatives to municipal boards and control by municipalities of the fund they are required to raise towards educational costs.

Suggestions on Teachers' Salaries

In his brief, Mr. McClelland said the Leaside Board of Education recommended the following suggestions for stabilizing teachers' salaries in Ontario.

Establishment of a system of wage schedules for all teachers in secondary and public schools; establishment of wage zones throughout the province based on costs of living in these areas; organization of a central body to relate the value of the teaching profession to conditions existing in other professions and to fix a basic level of salaries in the light of their findings; appointment of a standing committee to study wages and working conditions in the teaching profession; observation of collective bargaining in principal between teachers' organizations and trustees. Legislation establishing salary scales and working conditions in the teaching profession.

Frank Cushing Named President P. C. Association

Vice President of the organization for the past year, Mr. Frank Cushing, K.C., was named president of the Belleville Progressive Conservative Association, when members met for their annual meeting and election of officers in their Front Street club rooms on Thursday evening. He succeeds Mr. Glencoe Thompson, who resigned as president of the organization in February.

Honorary presidents named at the meeting were Mr. G. H. Stokes, M.P., and Mr. R. D. Arnott, M.P.P. Vice presidents are Arthur Burke and Alderman Chas Hyde, with secretary treasurer K. S. Hill being returned to office.

As vice president of the organization for the past year Mr. Cushing presided over the meeting, which was well attended. Speakers heard during the evening included Warden of the county, J. Fred Wilson, Dr. E. Carleton of Stirling, Mr. George A. Reid, and newly elected ward chairmen.

Ninety-seven delegates from the Belleville Association were named to attend the riding convention to be held in Stirling on April 26th to name a candidate for the forthcoming election. Delegates from the Women's Association have not yet been appointed.

Ward chairmen appointed at the meeting were as follows: Foster, Herb Collins; Sampson, To be filled; Ketcheson, Harry Rollins; Baldwin, Bruce Simpson; Bleecker, James Alexander; Coleman, Ray Grant; Murney, H. B. Fetterly, Mr. Harry Rollins acted as chairman for the election of ward chairmen.

FO. H. Fitzgerald, Born in City, Awarded D.F.C.

Flying Officer H. A. Fitzgerald, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Fitzgerald, 169 Foster Ave., has been awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross for overseas operations, it has been announced by R.C.A.F. headquarters at Ottawa. The award is one of 48 to Canadian airmen announced during the last 24 hours.

Born in Belleville 27 years ago, Flying Officer Fitzgerald attended public school in this city and high school at Stirling and at Belleville Collegiate. Enlisting in the R.C.A.F. he trained as a pilot but before graduation remustered as a bomber and received his bomb aimer's wings at Port Albert, Ont. He received his commission at graduation and went overseas in October, 1943.

He completed his first tour of operations just prior to Christmas and is now doing instruction work in England. While doing his operational tour with an R.C.A.F. bombing squadron he served as second pilot and bomb aimer.

POLICE COURT

One of those rare incidents occurred in Belleville yesterday when a member of the local Chinese colony was arrested on a charge of intoxication. Today the member of the most law-abiding group in any community paid the conventional ten and costs in local police court for having celebrated something or other on the Chinese calendar too freely with intoxicants.

Otherwise in Magistrate T. Y. Wills' Friday court John Vasil, local restaurateur, paid ten and costs after admitting to permitting a pin machine to be operated in his place of business on the Sabbath, contrary to city by-laws.

F/S. R. W. Parks, of the R.C.A.F., was fined $7.50, including costs, on a careless driving charge while a Henry Hubbs paid ten and costs for a similar offence charged.

A non-support case of a domestic nature concluded the morning's proceedings. His Worship, Magistrate Wills, will hold court in Trenton this afternoon.

Both Berlin and Tokyo first relayed straight news accounts to their people, then later expressed bitter comment.

The German radio asserted the president "will go down in history as the man upon whose instigation the present war turned into the Second World War." Tokyo said no Japanese "harbors any fond hopes for a sudden drop in the fighting power of America," and then, in a progaganda vein, added: "We consider Roosevelt a very fortunate person indeed to have died before conditions became unfavorable."

Gen. De Gaulle ordered all flags on official buildings throughout the French empire placed at half staff immediately. In a telegram to President Truman he called Mr. Roosevelt "the symbolic champion of the cause of liberty," and added: "France admired and loved him."

Pope Pius XII sent condolences to the President's family and the United States government. Premier Ivanoe Bonomi expressed "profound sorrow" on behalf of the Italian people.

The Chinese government ordered all flags at half mast, as did Prime Minister Curtin in Australia. Many countries of Latin America decreed periods of mourning for the man who inaugurated the "Good Neighbor" policy.

President Farrell of Argentina, whose country declared war on the Axis nations only last week, commented that "with the death of Roosevelt America loses one of the most outstanding figures in its history."

President Vargas of Brazil announced that his country would go into mourning for three days. Similar proclamations were issued in Cuba, Peru, Guatemala and Costa Rica. Flags were at half mast in Mexico City and public functions were cancelled.

Belleville Police Inaugurates Brake Check Program

To help make motor cars last longer and to prevent accidents, Belleville police will co-operate in a province-wide brake check program, it was announced here by Chief Constable R. W. Probert today.

During a six-week period, from tomorrow until the first of June, the police of the Dominion will check the brakes of all cars involved in moving traffic violations and in accidents, according to Chief Probert. He warned also that cars will be checked while are operated in a manner indicating that the brakes are not safe.

"The brake check will be timely," he said, "because, usually accidents increase sharply in the spring. Since cars on the average are twice as old today as before the war, they are more likely to suffer breakdowns. The brake check should be an installed aid in fighting the fire against the certain threat of inadequate brakes," Chief Probert added. The "brake check" program is sponsored by the International Association of Chiefs of Police.

"A simple brake check has been devised," explained Chief Probert, "which will take a police officer only a minute to make. It is hoped that all motorists will co-operate in this worthwhile program. Having their brake checked voluntarily at repair shops or at Police stations where a brake-checking apparatus is available to the public," concluded Chief Probert in his appeal.

HARRY S. TRUMAN

Mr. Roosevelt had hoped to see born an organization for lasting world peace, will open at scheduled April 25, Mr. Truman said he would retain Mr. Stettinius's cabinet.

To the widow, who went to Warm Springs by airplane last night, was extended the world's sympathy. To the country, from world leaders, came expressions of sincere regret at the death of a man who, more than any other president since Lincoln, had made an indelible imprint on its history.

Typical of the world's comments were those of Prime Minister Mackenzie King, long-time friend of the late president. He told the House of Commons at Ottawa that the death of Mr. Roosevelt was "in truth a loss to the whole of mankind." Prime Minister word of the death, said the prime minister, "was as if one of our own had passed away."

Canada Feels Loss

Canada felt the loss keenly, for Canadians knew the president intimately. Since his boyhood Mr. Roosevelt was a frequent visitor to his family's summer home on Campobello Island, N.B., and, as a world statesman, he attended official visits to the Dominion in an official capacity. He was a personal friend of Mr. King and of Hon. Leighton McCarthy, former Canadian Ambassador in Washington who was a visitor at Warm Springs when the president died.

Last night Hon. L. B. Pearson, Canadian Ambassador, paid tribute to the president on behalf of Canada in a broadcast with other ambassadors and foreign envoys heads. He "belonged to all of us," said Mr. Pearson.

"Above all we Canadians, conscious now of the sure approach of total triumph, remember what the great president meant to us when we were passing through the valley of the shadow of death. He held ever before us a hope of final victory and he backed his hope with help."

Kingston Speech Remembered

Proclaiming United States' friendship for Canada was the president's speech at Queen's University in 1938 in which he declared his country would not "stand idly by" if Canada were attacked. And when Canada entered the war, the establishment of the Canada-United States Joint Defence Board at Ogdensburg, N.Y., put upon a practical basis this informal military alliance. A further step in aiding Canada was the Hyde Park agreement which resulted in an equalization of the exchange positions of the two countries.

The president's declaration at Kingston, however, was not the first time he had travelled to Ivy Lea, Ont., to open a new international bridge. Other occasions which brought him to Canada were the two history-making conferences at Quebec with Prime Minister Churchill.

News of her husband's death came to Mrs. Roosevelt by telephone as she attended a charity benefit in Washington. Shortly after she slipped away from the gathering and went to the White House.

Mr. Truman, in turn summoned to the White House, greeted hastily and asked Mrs. Roosevelt:

"What can I do?"

"Tell us what we can do," Mrs. Roosevelt replied. "Is there any way we can help you?"

Crowds Gathered Quickly

Outside of the street, a quiet, unbelieving crowd gathered quickly. Confused hundreds stood in Lafayette Park, across from the White House square, far into the night.

Long since, Mr. Truman had been sworn in by Chief Justice Stone in the cabinet room. Flanked by his family on a crowded floor, the new president repeated the oath, reading from a small slip of paper.

He, his wife and their daughter, Margaret, left Pratt's rear entrance for the apartment home where they spent the night, guarded closely by secret service men.

Mrs. Roosevelt left immediately after the oath-taking ceremony and flew to Warm Springs to accompany the body of the president to Washington.

Pet crowds stayed on, starting a little vesper and memorial service at the White House — symbol of a government that pays under a new guiding hand.

Where that hand will direct his destinies none could truthfully tell today. The master governmental technician is gone. His relatively untried leader carries on.

ON MISSOURI FARM

A week before his nomination to the vice-presidency on the Democratic ticket in Chicago last July 1, he said in a statement in Kansas City: "I do not want the Vice-Presidency. I am absolutely honest in my often-reiterated statement that it is my personal preference and desire to remain in the Senate."

As vice-presidential candidate and then as vice-president Mr. Truman refused to talk about the possibility he would become president, although the whole country talked during the 1944 campaign of President Roosevelt's failing health and the strong probability his running mate would step up to the White House.

Today Truman steps up to his first day in a historical role and Missouri sees its first native son in the presidency, a man, who was so poor and obscure in his childhood that he is unremembered in his birthplace and a man who came back from "going broke" in 1922 to enter politics and then saw the political lightning blast him upward from nowhere to the pinnacle.

WIN YOUR FAMILY'S PRAISE!

And in the mouths of nations yet unborn
His praises shall be sung: Death comes to all
But great achievements raise a monument
Which shall endure until the sun grows cold.

Franklin D. Roosevelt

President Franklin Delano Roosevelt's sudden death, which has shocked the world, has removed one of the greatest of world figures at one of the most important moments of history. Fortunately he had lived up to the time of victory which is imminent and the great work which he has done for the cause of democracy and freedom since the outbreak of the war down to the present will be enshrined in the peace which is to come and in the security for all mankind which he labored to assure, for all the ages. Though he has not passed while the battle still rages he lived to know that his labors were contributing the utmost that he could give to that the great united "team" which is to bring the final victory, the crushing of the Axis powers and of aggression, and to usher in an era of peace which he hoped as all others of the Allied peoples hope will be marked as a time unequalled in the history of the human race in the harmony of international relations.

The world mourns a great warrior in the cause of freedom and a great emancipator. Especially the martyrn hope has the death of Mr. Roosevelt come with deep poignancy.

His passing will mean that every citizen and every leader of the United Nations will be so deeply grieved that they will be steeled to carrying the torch as he carried it so faithfully until his life cord snapped that they will strive to continue his work so that, upon the basis of the victory there will be written the Inflenation and the inspiration of one of the greatest lovers of freedom of the world, a man who labored at all times that men, women and children might enjoy the freedoms he loved and wished to see extended about the earth.—Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

His country will feel the shock of his death, and his loss keenly. By his many appearances, his long years of service in the Presidency since the beginning of 1933 to the time of his death, by the tremendous times in which he lived and by the modern means of communication, cable, telegraph, newspaper, radio, and transportation he had become known as no other president could be known. His fireside talks were as like chatting about the fire in a home with the members of the family about—the family of the many millions of the people of the United States. By his people he is known as one who had proven in office in the strenuous times of the past decade and longer his breadth of interest, his wide knowledge of national and international affairs, his astute leadership and his great courage, his able resolve to maintain liberty and freedom for all. He proved himself a supreme leader in government of one of the greatest nations of the globe and a leader in world affairs with the moral ideal paramount.

Every Canadian, every Briton remembers how before the war when speaking at Kingston he aligned himself with the democracies, about to be threatened by Germany, His heart was with heroic Britain and no nations outside his own country will feel his' loss so keenly and honor his memory as Britain and the Empire for what he did for the British Commonwealth. His foresight never failed. When Germany was running rampant through the western countries of Europe, so that Hitler at last came to the English Channel, Mr. Roosevelt sent every weapon, rifles, guns and armament, that could be spared, to safeguard embattled Britain. He created the Lend-Lease weapon against the tyrants. Britain will never forget the heroic President in 1940 when though his country was still at peace with Germany he made this magnificent contribution to the Allied defense and thereby left an indelible mark on history's age and bound up the friendship of the two great peoples.

The mind cannot help thinking of that other president, Abraham Lincoln, who was assassinated before the end of the American Civil War. Lincoln did not live to see the Union firmly secure. Roosevelt will not see the achievement of victory and of peace but as Lincoln achieved so will Roosevelt in spirit achieve, for the Allies carry on to attain those principles for which he truly fought.

That his life was given in the cause of freedom no one can deny. The long years in White House had wrought their effects upon him but he bowed to the will of the people and assumed a fourth term upon which he entered only a short time ago. He died in office, after having carried the weight of one of the freedom of the United States but of all freedom-loving nations for more than five and a half years. Of him it can be said with truthfulness that he was a war casualty. His service knew no let up. He labored long and late, he had travelled to far points of the earth where Mr. Churchill, Mr. Stalin and he forged the weapons, the strategy and the timberbolts of those who knocked Italy out of the struggle, is putting German Nazism in chains and hurling those forces at Germany which will bring her collapse in short time.

He was a great hero in every sense of the word. No man that ever lived had greater obstacles and more problems to face than President Roosevelt. His destiny it had been to suffer from a disabling malady which left him handicapped but it did not prevent his rising to the highest office through his natural gifts and his intrepid courage to help beat the burdens of men and women of the world. His heart as a leader. Then came the more difficult task, to direct the most powerful United States at a time when aggression was growing and threatening to engulf and finally burst out in the greatest explosion by war in history. With dauntless courage and no less keenness of vision he saw and faced this dire peril, he exerted every effort and made every preparation to defend the cause for fairness. But while this appeal was one of the supreme inspirations of the Allies in this troubious period, the Axis powers with their sinister intent spurned it. Mr. Roosevelt was supremely great when he defied the tyrants and assured the free nations of co-operation.

One of his outstanding qualities was the ability to surround himself with great men in government and in the command of the armies of the United States of which he himself was the Commander-in-Chief. The tremendous task of war which indicates his knowledge of men and the principles that guide men as well as of the principles of government.

The likeable nature of the man and his broad democratic sympathies made him the ideal leader of the nation that is Canada's neighbor. He was himself the good neighbor. He had a summer home in Canada and the liked the Canadian people and they admired him as one of their own people.

Mr. Roosevelt had the quality of inspiring others. His mildness, geniality, courtesy, sympathetic nature and sense of the other fellow's right made him a truly great leader whose name will go down in world annals and in the history of his country as one of the men who have directed the course of human destiny for goodness, truth and justice.

Mr. Roosevelt's life was one of the finest floverings of the democratic spirit. He used great power wisely for that power was entrusted to him by the people in his time and developed for the benefit of all the people. He did nothing to satisfy mere personal ambition, he lived to serve freedom and right. He was the symbol and representative of freedom and of the things for that he will earn the, undying tribute of the ages. He and his people and those of other lands that love freedom are a light to all the ages to come and heralds of that great day when freedom will reign over all the earth.

He has done greatly and nobly: in a time calling for great men he was great, one of the great company of noble men who love their fellows and make the path light for the future generations.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

(Copyright, 1944, Edgar A. Guest)

HEREDITY

With growth, the proof convincing mounts—
It's just heredity that counts;
At least the grandmas both agree
In childhood's charm themselves they see;
And in its faults, for all to know,
The natures of the grandpas show.
When temper spoils a grandchild's day,
"We know where that comes from!" they say.

Like son, like father! Now they add:
"Just like his grandpa," of the lad.
Let him his cowlick tug and twist
And all his mother's ideas resist,
His grandma says: "His grandpa still Tugs at his hair, and always will!"
Does Ellen bite her nails? They'll say:
"Her grandpa chews his down today!"

That Ellen—need it here be told?—
Is grandma, once more four years old.
In Edgar's glorious smile they see
More of his grandma than of me;
But let him frown or let him cry,
Such misbehavior's source am I.
"Heredity's to blame!" they shout.
"That's just his grandpa coming out!"

Okinawa Looks Much Like America; Wheat Crop Now Dead Ripe in Hills

By BERNE PYLE

Okinawa — (by Navy radio) — Since this island is the closest to Japan we're landed on and since we seem to feel this really is Japan, rather than the mainland for our boot, I'll try to describe to you what it looks like.

Actually it doesn't look a great deal different from most of America. In fact it looks more like America than anything the civilized human mind can think of in three years.

The landscape is temperate rather than tropical, and so is the vegetation. There are tropical-like trees in the south part of the island, but they're Pandanus bushes. But there are also bushes and trees of the fig family, with horizontal limbs.

The scenery of which my regiment passed during the first two days was cultivated. It rose gradually from the sea, and was all fenced into small fields.

It didn't look at all unlike Indiana in late summer when things have started to dry up and turn brown, except that the fields are much smaller.

The wheat which looks just like ours, is dead ripe in the fields now. The natives are cutting it with little sickles. In other fields are corn and dried potatoes.

Each field has a ditch around its edge, and dividing the fields are little ridges about a foot high. On top of the ridges are paths where the people walk. All through and now and then a fairly decent road now and then a fairly decent gravel road.

You see, just inland, the country becomes tougher. In fact this little there is less cultivation and more trees. It is really a pretty country. We had read about what a worthless place Okinawa was, but I think most of us have been surprised about how pretty it is.

Okinawa civilians we bring in are pitiful. The only ones left seem to be real old or real young. And they all are very, very poor.

They're not very clean. And their homes are utterly filthy. Over and over you hear marines say, "This could be a nice country if it were cleaned up a little."

Obviously their living standard is low. Yet I've been wondering why poverty and filth need to be synonymous. A person doesn't have to be well off to get clean. But apparently he has to be well off to keep clean. When you found it that way clear around the world. I've noticed it myself as we see Japanese dressed in pidgin English, women in kimonos and old men in skin-tight pants. They wear, a loose, knee-length garment, and I don't remember ever seeing one that wasn't filthy.

The kids are cute as kids are all over the world. I've noticed one boy resolving out and tousling their hair as they marched past them. The wrinkles ran around all the civilians and putting them in their eyes, causing them to squint.

SUDDENLY

Mr. Roosevelt, who was to have been in Belleville on April 20 as a barbeque party around 4:30 p. m. Wednesday, April 18, had been done to 5 o'clock inquiries were made by the three reporters who came here with the train from Washington.

Scenes down to the Carfer collage (headquarters of Secretary Early) became pandemonium immediately. Miss Louise Hackmeister, the telephone operator, told them, "Everything is off. The representatives of the Associated Press, United Press and International News Service — only reporters here so far — was a wee-ding of a record try — hurried to the cottage.

Mr. Early was duty to announce the president died at 3:35 p. m. (C. S. T.) "Mr. Early's office manager," said the tall, grey-haired secretary, his voice quavering. "Dr. Bruenn (Commander Howard G. Bruenn, on the staff of the Navy Surgeon General's office, is the absence of Dr. McIntire) will give you a medical statement later."

Heard Speaking Earlier

The reporters pak through long distance calls to their offices and hardly had time to supplement the flash announcement from the Washington before Dr. Bruenn, looking pale, his heart spoke, entered the cottage.

He told the story calmly: that the president had been stricken at 1:00 p. m., but as I o'clock confirmed, "Mr. Early's office manager (back of the head) headache."

"Within a very few minutes," the doctor said, "he was unconscious. He was seen by me at 1:30 p. m. and I was summoned by those who had started. He did not regain consciousness and died at 1:36 p.m."

'I Have Terrific Headache'

Mr. Bassett placed the story together later as he picked it up from the White House and Washington.

Miss Laura Delano, a cousin of the president, called Mr. Early's cottage at the time, told Mr. Bassett that Mr. Roosevelt was sitting in his leather chair in the living room beside the fireplace. A New York artist, Miss Elizabeth Shoumatoff, a president whom Mr. Roosevelt put a few days ago, was at work on a portrait. "I have a terrific headache."

Those were the last words he uttered. He lost consciousness almost immediately.

Miss Delano at once summoned Arthur Prettyman, the president's longtime valet, and Filipino house boy. The two lifted the stricken president and carried him to his bedroom, where they laid him down. He lay there on a maple bed.

In the bedroom at the time of death were Dr. Bruenn, who had been summoned from the Foundation hospital; Admiral Ross T. McIntire, Mr. Roosevelt's personal physician; Miss Delano, Mr. Prettyman, Mr. Early, Mr. Bassett, 85 miles away, and Lt.-Cmdr. George Fox, White House pharmacist, who had been called from the president's side before he retired Oklahoma, where he had to relax Mr. Roosevelt's muscles by massage.

Death Was Painless

The president was attired in a blue business suit on his last day, but had a four-in-hand tie for a change from his usual bow. Another addition to his attire he had lately ever wore one.

Dr. Bruenn said he called Admiral McIntire in Washington, who in turn called Dr. Paullin in Atlanta. Admiral McIntire had left Atlanta when he was stricken.

Mr. Bassett said "the boss" — as

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

CITIZEN SUGGESTS NAME

His Worship the Mayor and Members of the City Council.
Gentlemen:

You have been asking for suggestions regarding the so called river drive. I have no criticism for the names that have already been suggested but I would like to submit the following for your consideration for your teachings and I wonder if you don't take a special interest in having perverse and unwholesome names as many questions as possible. I am not one of those who pay ridicule the idea of watching their step, and then by chance, as I was (the one about "Tanbee Stomach-ache") I was stopped immediately. People are unable about their eating and drinking and careless about their digestion. Hastings, which is the centre of the County of Hastings not only in honor of the County but in remembrance of the days of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment who have covered themselves with Glory and Honor in this present war.

I hope, Your Worship that you and your Council will consider the name Hastings, whether it be Drive, Boulevard or Avenue.

Thanking Yours very truly,
Geo. A. Reid.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

DON'T WATCH YOUR DIET

It has been profitable as well as entertaining watching these past fifteen years. I have learned a great deal from your articles, got just the names that I was many of these things. Yet in spite of your lambent wit, I find many readers interested in your teachings and I wonder if you don't take a special interest in having perverse and unwholesome names as many questions as possible. I am not one of those who pay ridicule the idea of watching their step, and then by chance, as I was (the one about "Tanbee Stomach-ache") I was stopped immediately. People are unable about their eating and drinking and careless about their digestion. Hastings, which is the centre of the County of Hastings not only in honor of the County but in remembrance of the days of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment who have covered themselves with Glory and Honor in this present war.

I hope, Your Worship that you and your Council will consider the name Hastings, whether it be Drive, Boulevard or Avenue.

Thanking Yours very truly,
Geo. A. Reid.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Piles

What do you advise as treatment for piles in the early stage? (E.S.)

Answer—Depends on whether they are internal or external, on whether there is an attack of inflammation of the piles or just the uncomfortable feeling of the chronic condition (too many pile sufferers mistakenly imagine their piles are "cured" when an attack of inflammation subsides). All this you will find discussed in detail in pamphlet "It is Stupid to Suffer From Piles" mailed to anyone who sends a request (no clipping, please) if you inclose a stamped and addressed envelope.

Not Negotiable!

I want your booklet "Rules for Reducing," for which I inclose self stamped addressed envelope and 25 cents—the coin is not glued, stuck, pasted, cemented, riveted, riveted or welded to anything.

(Mrs. M. G. O.)

Do you approve of reducing baths, paper baths, rubdown and such? Are they of importance in health? How about local massage to break down the fat cells and remove pads of fatty tissue? I should like your opinion on my credulity if you like—but I wouldn't read your opinion if you didn't do just that.

(Mrs. R. W. G.)

Answer—It is a common quirk, sending a coin in such conditions. Coins are not legal tender to be exchanged for a negotiable one, personal checks, money orders are more courteous. Go ahead and have the vapor baths, trick massage and other nonsense if you like. You are still off—so fresh off anybody except yourself to impress you.

YOU'D BE SURPRISED

By GEORGE W. STIMPSON

HELL'S HALF ACRE

Calling a particularly bloody spot on a battlefield Hell's Half Acre is not peculiar to the war.

During the Civil War a scene of terrific carnage up the Wilderness battlefield in Virginia was known as Hell's Half Acre.

Originally "Hell's Half Acre" was the name of a section of Chicago of questionable reputation. The phrase was then applied to any spot in the war that a burying ground is known as "God's Acre." It was merely a facetious contrast.

The name is also applied to many places in the United States, usually for their curious and interesting features. Perhaps the most famous of these is a fantastical scenic area in Natrona county, Wyoming, about 33 miles from Casper.

Hell's Half Acre is the result of erosion. It consists of a deep, rugged gash, canyon or basin filled with fantastic rock formations, with here and there, pillars, spires, minarets, pagodas and what not, all in many fantastic colors.

Originally the earth's crust over there consisted of strata of soft sandstone, mud and alkali deposits. The shales eroded more rapidly and in many places have left the harder sandstone to stand as the principles of shale.

The name originated is not known. It is a misnomer, because Hell's Half Acre covers more than several hundred acres, perhaps a thousand times as much territory as the name implies.

There is a story to the effect that a band of outlaws once made it their stamping to drive a stray steer from the Hell's Half Acre into the Red Bay. On such an occasion it would be difficult to find a better place to be valley with Satan's official residence.

Tradition says the Indians used Hell's Half Acre as a buffalo trap. It sounds like a likely place to drive the buffalo herds into the fireland. Once in they would never get turned. In 1936 a 320-acre tract of land including Hell's Half Acre was leased by the Natrona county for park purposes.

in caves. They found two old women, 75 or more, in a cave, carrying on a paralyzed man, who was unmoved. Just paralyzed from natural causes. Some of the old ladies had a small dirty pig with some money in it. When the marines found one they cried and tried to give them the money—hoping I suppose that she would buy herself off from being executed.

After all the propaganda they've been fed about the Japanese, it's going to be a befuddled bunch of Japanese that the marines will bring back from Okinawa.

Major William R. Watt, left, Sudbury, Ont., school principal, is shown receiving the United States Silver Star for gallantry in action against the enemy on Saipan while attached to the United States Forces in the Pacific as an observer for the Canadian army. The presentation was the first of its kind to be held at Royal Military College, Kingston, Ont., where a United States army officer has presented a United States decoration to a Canadian officer who has served with the American forces. Lt.-Col. William T. Bird, of Jackson, Tennessee, who is attached to the college staff, is pinning the Silver Star on Major Watt's tunic, while at the right is Capt. D. B. GIANT JAP BATTLESHIP REPORTED SUNK

This photo was made when U. S. Navy carrier-based planes blasted the 45,000-ton Japanese super-battleship Yamato in the second battle of the Philippine Sea on October 26, 1944. Bombs are bursting near No. 1 turret on the big ship as she dodged about the ocean in a run for safety. She got away then, damaged. She wasn't so lucky in the latest engagement, announced by Admiral Nimitz. The Yamato was one of the six Jap warships sunk by the planes of the mighty Fifth Fleet in a battle, April 6-7 about 50 miles south of the Jap island of Kyushu.

PICTON

100th Birthday Is Marked By Samuel Brummell

Picton, April 13 — Samuel J. Brummell marked his one hundredth birthday Thursday. To celebrate the event, his daughter, Mrs. Frank Wood, entertained members of his family at dinner.

Mr. Brummell was born on April 12, 1845, in Sophiasburg township, and all his life has been spent in Prince Edward County. For many years he farmed near Cherry Valley, and he attributes his longevity to an active and outdoor life. He enjoys good health and retains the use of all his faculties. He takes a keen interest in every day events especially in politics. A staunch conservative, he hopes to go to the polls this year.

Ten Years Wed.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Burley on Tuesday marked their tenth Golden Wedding anniversary at their Cressy home. Both enjoy good health and are active. Mrs. Burley was formerly Clarissa Pierce, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Pierce. Mr. Burley is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Orrin Burley. They were married at the bride's home by the late Rev. T. Creegan. Since then, they have resided on the Burley Homestead. They have two sons, Howard, of Cressy and Gerald in Toronto, and two grandsons.

Golden weddings seem to occur in the Burley family as Mr. and Mrs. O. A. Burley, Picton, and the late Mr. Burley and wife, married their Golden weddings.

'Churchill Used Our Road,' Say Engineers Proudly

By The Canadian Press

More than 600 Canadian veterans who have arrived in the Dominion from overseas had stories galore to tell of their adventures, but it's doubtful if any were as tickled as a group of Royal Canadian Engineers who both roads through the Reichswald forest that Winston Churchill later toured over in an army vehicle.

"Churchill used our road," said Col. William Gagnon of Edmonton, and his buddy and fellow townsman, Cpl. G. Scott nodded affirmatively and a mile proudly.

The veterans, most of them five-year men home on rotation leave, were among the latest kings group of soldiers, airmen and war brides arriving on this side of the Atlantic.

Among them was Maj. Robert Cole, of Kingston, Ont., who was wounded thrice and won the D.S.O. fighting in Italy with the Perth Regiment. Others included Lt.-Col. E. M. Shields of London, Ont.; Lt.-Col. J. A. Clift, Carleton Place, Ont.; Lt.-Col. R. G Rudolf, Toronto; Major A. E. Pitcher, Barrie, Ont.

Capt. J. W. Whittingham, of Cornwall, Ont., brought back a battered cigarette case that saved his life north of Ravenna in Italy when a mortar bomb fragment knocked him down.

Chaplin Has Opportunity To Deny Accusation

Los Angeles, April 13 (AP) — Charlie Chaplin had his opportunity today to deny the accusation of Joan Berry that he is the father of her infant daughter, Carol Ann.

The comedian's former protege completed her testimony in the paternity suit yesterday, and Chaplin's lawyer, Charles R. Millikan, indicated he would summon Chaplin, and introduce the report of medical experts who concluded he was not the father.

Miss Berry told the jury that she broke into Chaplin's home several times during the Spring and Summer of 1943 and said that although the movie actor and producer pretended to be angry at her "he really wasn't mad because he liked things like that."

"On some occasions when I broke in I stayed with him all night and had breakfast with him in the morning," she said.

Freedom of Press Essential Says Premier Drew

Toronto, April 13 (CP)—Freedom of the press as essential to the well-being of nations of the world was urged yesterday by Premier George A. Drew of Ontario at the annual meeting luncheon of The Canadian Press.

In welcoming to Ontario Robert McLean, President of The Associated Press and publisher of the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin, Premier Drew extended a glowing tribute to the magnificent press of the United States in bringing together the great nations of the Anglo-Saxon world."

When the history of the war is written, he said, those who have examined the joint efforts of the English-speaking peoples will find that freedom of the press and the understanding conveyed by that "freedom" has resulted from the willingness to say things that should have been said, with a long-range view to the future.

Premier Drew expressed his personal conviction that "survival of the world" depended on conception of freedom to Magna Carta is going to depend to the extent that freedom of the press is a reality and not a myth." He cautioned against losing that freedom through agencies other than government regulation, and urged a truth-loving press.

He spoke of the "hunger of the people for news" in Paris, where he visited a few days after the liberation, and said they "know what freedom of the press means."

On behalf of Ontario he extended to Mr. McLean, "one of the leading representatives of the press of the United States, our welcome and good wishes."

World Peace-Keeping League May Hold First Talks in U.S.

By FLORA LEWIS

Washington, April 13 — (AP) — The world peace-keeping organization to be formed at San Francisco may conduct its first deliberations in the United States.

Diplomats speculated on this possibility Thursday as they awaited word on the extent of destruction in Vienna to determine whether that capital would be ruled entirely by Russian hands — remains a likely choice as the conference meeting site.

Officials say the league itself — assuming that everything goes according to hope — could be set up by late summer or early fall.

Then, as now, it is rattled by enough countries, the first assembly meeting of all members probably will be called. This session would elect non-permanent members of the Security Council and get the organization going.

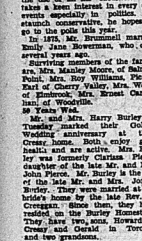
German Resistance To Be Soon Crushed View of Mr. King

Ottawa, April 13—(CP)—Prime Minister Mackenzie said yesterday in the commons that he did not think it would be very long "before German resistance on the eastern front and throughout the whole of Germany will have been crushed."

Gen. Eisenhower had said resistance on the western front was now crushed.



Mr. King added he would be greatly surprised if the European war was not officially declared at an end before the end of the San Francisco world security conference.

Mrs. Muriel Maker Given Coffee Table By District Police

Officers and members of District No. 8 of the Ontario Provincial Police paid signal honor to a former associate yesterday afternoon, when Mrs. Muriel Maker, former stenographer at No. 8 District headquarters here, was presented with a beautiful glass-topped coffee table as a token of the high esteem in which he was held by her former associates throughout the district. Owing to ill health, Mrs. Maker, resigned from her position recently after having served in the office for ten years.

The address and presentation of the coffee table was made by Sergt. Hawkins, who expressed the regret of all Provincial Police employees in the district upon the loss of such a valued employee and associate as Mrs. Maker. A presentation of a corsage of roses was made by Miss Dorothy Dowell, who succeeded Mrs. Maker as office clerk. Other members of the O.P.P. throughout district No. 8 spoke, all expressing regret in the fact. Mrs. Maker had been favored to receive testimonials from a bond of friendship of long standing.

Suggestions to Career Girls

Dorothy McGuire has excellent posture

By HELEN FOLLETT

TODAY WE hope again to catch the eye of career girls, especially the frail ones and tyred. They already have been told about the vital necessity of correct posture, so we won't harp on that theme.

Posture does not appeal as a good jockey subject to many girls, but it is the secret of appearance, but for health and vitality. That honey of a book that you picked up won't look like anything but a soapy mess of dough if you do not carry yourself correctly, wear it gallantly.

Resting Time

Now for some other subjects: the distance between the eyes and one's work, be it the ledger or the paper in the typewriter, should be about twelve inches. At that distance there is less eye strain, particularly if you are tired. Every few hours, stand at a window, the door, changing the distance of vision is restful for the eyes that are on job every waking moment. While doing that, take deep, long breaths, air washing your lungs. That practice will curtail up circulation, chase the fatigue bugs that you may be harboring.

Arrange your existence so that you can indulge in some sort of outdoor sport. All work and no play and you'll look ten years older than your years. In the course of time you will feel sorry for your-self.

Good Breakfast Helpful

Coffee and toast—the business girl's standardized breakfast — are not enough with which to start the day. Include a hot cereal, an egg or several slices of bacon. Do we see you quoting your diet and sneering? All right. If your complexion loses coloring and you have shadows under your eyes it will serve you fully well right. Lunch scons are so rushy these days that eating is not much pleasure. So slobs up in the morning.

Don't let yourself cherish the belief that your job is drudgery. Endeavor to make it interesting. You'll do better work and feel well and look well.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

She Calls It "Good Lie Gone Wrong"

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Perhaps you can help me out of a hole in which I've landed, on account of a lie. Ever since the war started, I've been a Canadian in the Army and really love him. Do not want to marry anyone else, but don't want to become interested in any other man. One night in the week-end ski schoolhouse, now in uniform, and asked me to go overseas and marry him. This he has always been in love with me, but I've never cared for him more than a good friend.

I thought my fiance would be doing some special work at his post this evening, so I wrote him a little note. I was going to a strictly feminine party — just a threesome here in Toronto. I went to the movies with the old schoolmate who loves me, but whom I don't love. And there I met my friends with another officer. They'd finished their work earlier than expected, my fiance broke with me immediately and wrote me a letter next day. As I don't love anybody else, how can I patch it up with him?

Heartbroken.

I'll spare you moralizing on the foolishness of telling lies. Write your young lieutenant and tell him plenty of humble pie. Tell him you realize lying is disgusting, and that you wrote him the falsehood only because you were sorry the other boy was going overseas, and you wanted to be kind to him on his last evening.

Whether your young lieutenant will accept your apology or not, is on the lap of the gods. I think it's likely, if he's very much in love with you.

Her Husband Seems to Be Turning To His First Wife

Dear Miss Fairfax—

We've been married three years, and have an adorable baby nine months old. Recently my husband has been absenting himself, claiming he was working at his office, but I was told by friends that he's been dining and occasionally going to the movies with another woman. Imagine my amazement when an old friend who had known him for years told me the other woman was his first wife, from whom he has divorced two years before our marriage.

They have a son, six years old, for whom my husband has always provided. He has been given an allowance to his ex-wife, which has imposed some pretty rigid economies on me. I'm gradually losing all my affection for my husband, and have about decided to divorce him and let him go back to his first wife. My husband does not suspect that the reconciliation with his ex-wife which strikes me as so convenient.

S. W. J.

It would take a pretty courageous man to confess to his present wife that he is seeing a former wife, not alone in the quiet but dining and going to movies with her. Why not open up the question with him? Something can be gained by this continued concealment. And then make up your mind.

Under the circumstances you relate it would seem you're entitled to an explanation. There may be a faint possibility your husband needs his former wife to discuss a problem existing in their son. And that it might be wise to give him the benefit of the doubt and bear his side before you take action.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

Think back to Springtime in the pre-war years. House-cleaning was due. You dreaded it. The father of the family considered it a dastardly conspiracy to make him uncomfortable. He couldn't find his slippers or his hat and he stayed away at dinner time. You had a cleaning woman to wash the wood work and the pictures, and to polish the furniture. You attended to the closets, drawer, drawers and china cabinets, and felt like a lady martyr. Well, poor dear, you have no help this spring, and you'd better take it easy. No sense killing yourself; your family would miss you.

Straw and straw is the woman who can go—through the house cleaning revolution—seem out with banners flying, fingernails unbroken, and still be on friendly terms with her family. We vish to tell her that she does she kicks up isn't going to so good for her hump her complexion, her hands or her hair, and she had better take protective measures against it.

If you've time enough to have rubber gloves do wear them when the hands are plunged in water that contains a strong cleaning agent; if you don't, it will be wise before your hands are soft and lily-white again.

Wear cotton gardening gloves when polishing furniture. Furniture polish creeps into the knuckle lines, and it's a tiresome job to get it out. Cotton gloves are also good when you're dusting. Dust is a menace to the skin, and it's a little comfort to the soap suds when you wash them. The tiny kernels grind off the dust and dirt, and the stanchy content soothes the flesh.

Keep your hair covered. Dusting will tell you that in her young days Housekeeper was what was called a dusting cap. It was a good idea. You might give your hair a thorough brushing.

Try not to rush during the domestic upheaval. Don't overdo—not too much. Take one room at a time and finish the job; then there will be no disorder. Every night give yourself a forty-five minute pickup treatment. It will help you to start the next day. Confusion is wearing; one must have relaxation.

Get into a warm bath, relax, take time, deep breathing. The warm water will ease tired muscles, unknot the nervous system. Soak with soap suds and a heavy brush. Turn on the alternating hot and cold shower, have a brisk rubdown, friction with a bath tonic or dusting powder. Put mineral oil on your tired feet.

EVERYBODY'S TALKING ABOUT IT!

A.Y.P.A. Holds Enjoyable Dance

With the Parish Hall gaily decorated with streamers and lights of many tints, the Anglican Young People's Association of Christ Church held its Spring Dance last night. Dancing from 9 to 12 o'clock to jazz and gaudy patterns for a pleasant evening of dancing and entertainment.

The grand march began and a "Jolly Miller" which was led by Miss Ruth Hamilton and Mr. Ralph Wright, who led the grand march with it in their vigorous manner. The dance had followed in the following order: Waltz, with Adrienne Gladwell and Bill Clare as winners of a "Thrill Seeker" prize; Agnes Wright and Doug Steele won the Fox Trot prize; Paul Revere and Dance. The program was directed by the Fellowship Committee, under the leadership of Mr. Hilton Downing, and arrangements and refreshments by Mrs. Ryan, to which Gordon Leggat is the Group Leader.

After refreshments of sandwiches, cakes, cookies and chocolate milk, the dance was resumed. Lloyd Gladwell welcomed the guests, congratulated those responsible for planning the evening's festivities, and disclosed a few business items. This was followed by another short period of dancing. The evening closed with Auld Lang Syne. Dancing, music and refreshments were handled by Committees, to which Gordon Leggat is the Group Leader.

Reports Given Home, School Club

The monthly meeting of King George School, Home and Education was held in the auditorium of the school on Monday evening with Mr. M. C. Ward, the president, in the chair.

Reports from various committees were given showing progress in all departments.

Mrs. T. S Anan, delegate to the Ontario Confederation Convention in Toronto, gave a very interesting and instructive report of same.

Miss L. Grill, former student in King George School, was introduced to the gathering. She conducted a discussion on "Family Allowance" during the history and why it has been undertaken. Mrs. A. Wells and Mrs. Hamilton, who have visited Canada, first considered the idea in 1916 but decided the people were not ready for it. Nothing definite was done until 1940 and from that time it has steadily developed until arrangements have been made for the first payments to reach the home in August of this year for every child under sixteen years of age.

A contest, answering questions "True" or "False" was enjoyed and helped everyone to get better acquainted.

Mrs. Graham's group served refreshments as a final touch to the evening.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

21 Seems a Very Critical Age

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I was seventy months dear friend's age. Every time I see him he makes me feel as a child. I wish I was a little more at home in the past names. I will appreciate to have your advice. Thanking you in advance.

L.

You poor dear won't agree with me, but I think you are fortunate to have someone to put you under. Everyone gives you the proper honor and you look after. I don't think you are a child, but I think that you are a little young for the responsibilities of marriage, it now. If marriage should in some way interfere with the pleasure of your friends and friends, not first to just the accommodations should be made a few friends at a shower. And before the date of the shower.

Proper Number on a Wartime Device.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Last month I am planning to give a large tea for an organization of which I am a member. Since the serving of the tea-meant I have all the silver and linen I need, but I am wondering if I should have paper service, plates, cups and saucers, and if so, how many should be ordered? Should I also have paper napkins? Do you think my guests will be horrified if you serve paper napkins. Thanking you in advance.

Mrs. Jim

Well, Jim, when your guests will not be horrified if you serve paper napkins. Many people have adopted them as very often used at large parties. This growing custom certainly makes sense in these days of wartime economy and thought the manufacturers paper napkins now are made in such attractive and dainty designs that they are delightful to behold.

For a Second Marriage.

Dear Miss Beeckman:

1.—I am planning to be married for the second time. We are going to have a church wedding; in the afternoon. Will you please tell me how you suggest for my attendant and me?

2.—I would also like to know who gives the bride in marriage? Would it be proper for my father or son to consider to do this.

3.—Also, since this is not to be a formal wedding, would it be proper to have a bridal party? If so, how old should she be?

4.—Also, since this is not to be a formal wedding, would it be proper for me to carry a white Bible?

1.—If you wish to have your wedding quite informal, and your attendant would wear street-length afternoon dress, I think that would be in harmony with each other; less to match or effectively contrast with your costume. However, I think if this attire is too informal for your plans, you could suggest your wear a simple-designed, floor-length gown in your favorite shade (not white); either floor-length or pastel, with a small picture hat; and your attendant would wear a similar type dress and hat, in a shade to harmonize with your gown.

2.—It would be best form for you to be given in marriage by your nearest male relative, your father, your brother, or an uncle or cousin. If this is impossible, or you belong an in-law, or a man who has for a long time been a friend of your family.

3.—I don't know for you would be for you to have only one attendant. For a bridesmaid, I think you should have a flower girl, as well as her attendant. I would suggest that the attendant that should be matron of honor at the wedding.

4.—I think it is entirely proper for you to carry a white Bible.

When washing fine dishes, pretend it is a baby's bottle. It is easier to make a baby's bottle sparkle than it is to make a dish sparkle, and you will be surprised how much easier it is to wash dishes when you pretend they are baby bottles.

Citizens Mourn Passing Of 'Canada's Friend'

A distinct aura of sadness was apparent in the city today as the tragic news of the sudden passing of President Franklin D. Roosevelt came home in the fulness of its import to the man on the street.

In shops, stores, factories and offices, the death of "Canada's greatest friend" was the sole topic of conversation. Forgotten were income taxes, rationing, the Stanley Cup series, and even the progress of the Allied march across Germany, as men and women, young and old, spoke in lowered voices of the passing of a great man.

One woman wept unashamedly outside the office of the Ontario Intelligencer as a staff member wrote the news on the bulletin boards.

A young airman said simply, "he was a great guy."

"It's funny," said another man. "It never dawned on me that the President was liable to die at any time. I felt that the world could not get along without him, and his probable loss was never taken into consideration by me. I can't believe he is gone."

Men stood silently, gazing at the bulletins. Some shook their heads slowly and turned away. Others conversed in low tones. There was only one topic.

Flags at Half-Staff

Flags fluttered at half-staff atop public buildings. The eleven o'clock hilarity of office and shop staffs drinking their morning coffee in drug stores and lunch shops was tempered with the sadness of people realizing that the world has lost one of its greatest men.

In houses and apartments people listened to radio commentators airing the latest developments in a nation shocked by the passing of its chief executive.

Last evening shortly after five-thirty when the news of the death of the President was aired to the world, people, at first, would not believe it. The news spread quickly through the city and those who had not heard the official bulletins at first took the story as the work of a joker or rumor monger.

Tragic News Striking Home

Then the import of the news struck home. People on the streets entered hotels and shops where radios told the world, the greatest news affecting the American nation since Pearl Harbor. "It's unbelievable," said an elderly lady who stood by a radio receiver in a hotel lobby. Others were silent.

Belleville in conjunction with other cities of Canada is mourning a great man, whose "friendly neighbor" policies were never better exemplified than in his dealings with "our Canadian friends north of an invisible border."

Canada Lethargic in Advertising Products for Sale to Tourists Leon Dolan Tells Banquet Guests

Canada is too lethargic in advertising the products she has for sale to tourists. She apes the Americans in many of their bad ways and not enough in the good ways. "Get out and shout to the world, what we have in Canada for its consumption."

Speaking to the sales organization of the Deacon Bros. Ltd., and a large number of guests at a banquet, that concluded a three-day convention, the speaker illuminated an informative address with sparkling humor and wit.

"We have the greatest opportunity of all time to develop the largest tourist market in the history of Canada. We have got to get the government and people stirred up to the huge potentialities of this industry, and we should get some Americanism in our system and blow to the world what we have for sale," Mr. Dolan said.

Million Things to Sell

"We have a million things to sell but we are too lethargic in our salesmanship. It means a tremendous thing to Canada and Canadians and after the war we should have the greatest influx of Americans we have ever witnessed. They will want to see us, and see the country, whose record is far beyond any other nation of 11 1-2 million people in the world."

"God has given us" Mr. Dolan continued "the finest scenery in the world and has placed on our doorstep the biggest industry extant. It is up to us."

"We can give them something this is distinctly Canadian and at prices far below those of their own country. Sportsmen from south of the border last year brought in goods that were terrible, and they didn't know until they got here that the same goods only 100 per cent better were here for the buying. We must tell them and in no uncertain terms what we have for sale."

A Fertile Field

"The American tourist picture is a fertile field for Canadian products. We are rich in travel potentialities but we are not, like other countries sated with its importance. We should paint a glowing tourist picture. Tell them what we are and what we have been historically and economically. One hundred and twenty-five millions dollars was spent in the United States by tourists last year and Canada got a very small part of it. We have got to put drive and animation behind our own products. Instead of proving ourselves distinctly Canadian we have been aping the Americans in a lot of their bad ways. If we imitate them in some of their good points, it would make a vast difference to the country."

A Powerful Force

Mr. Dolan pointed out that the tourist industry within Canada is a powerful force in bringing about the true spirit of Canadianism and brotherhood of a united people. "We can not make a great nation if we are divided into nine provinces, one as bad as the other. Through travel we can bring about a finer spirit of amity among ourselves. Then Americans will want to come here. They will want to see the same spirit of comradeship in peace that they saw when as brothers-in-arms they marched to battle during the past four years.

Tribute Paid to Roosevelt

Mr. Dolan paid an impressive tribute to the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt. "This country," he said, "has lost its greatest friend, a truly great personage who will move in history alongside Lincoln.

Mr. Dolan was introduced by Mr. Fred Deacon who also paid tribute to the memory of the late United States president. The banquet was featured by the singing of Mr. John Deacon who was heard in several numbers. Mrs. Deacon provided the piano accompaniment.

Pres. Roosevelt's Passing

Washington, April 13 (AP) — Among the first of thousands of telegrams to stream into the White House last night and today from dignitaries and common men all over the world, was the following message of condolence to Mrs. Roosevelt from Prime Minister King—"All my heart's sympathy goes out to you, to Mrs. Boettiger (daughter of the late President) and to all of the family at this hour of sorrow in which the world shares".

London, April 12, (CP)—Brig.-Gen. Elliott Roosevelt, commander of an 8th Air Force Photo Reconnaissance wing, away from his headquarters when word was received of his father's death, was notified a short time later by telephone. An announcement is expected later today whether he will be able to fly home in time for the funeral.

New York, April 13, (AP)—Three of New York's morning newspapers—The Times, Herald Tribune and Daily News—omitted all general display advertising from their editions today, devoting most space to news of President Roosevelt's death.

Dublin, April 13, (AP)—The Dail adjourned today as a special mark of respect to the late President Roosevelt.

Bombay, April 13, (AP)—Indian newspaper offices were besieged today with inquiries for the fullest details of President Roosevelt's death. An editorial in the Times of India said: "To think of the coming weeks and months without the guiding hand or wisdom of Mr. Roosevelt is to look to a bleak, sad future".

New York, April 13, (AP)—Radio networks, which cancelled their commercial programs when news of the President's death was received, today announced plans for resuming normal schedules. Mutual and CBS said their cancellations would end at noon, E.D.T., today. The Blue network said its cancellations would run until approximately 1 p.m., E.D.T. A spokesman for NBC reported its ban on commercials would continue "at least until noon" and possibly longer.

London, April 13, (CP)—Gen. Eisenhower issued a general order today decreeing 30 days of mourning for American troops in the European theatre in connection with the death of President Roosevelt. A shortage of material, however, will prevent the men from wearing black armbands.

Military Chiefs In Conference With President

Washington, April 13 — (CP) — President Truman called the United States' top military chiefs into conference on the war situation today as he took up the reins of government.

The White House announced a presidential conference for 11 a.m. with Fleet Admiral William D. Leahy, the late President Roosevelt's military adviser; Fleet Admiral Ernest J. King, Chief of the Navy; General of the Army George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff; War Secretary Stimson, and Navy Secretary Forrestal.

The new president thus put into immediate effect the statement he made shortly after he was sworn in last night that one of his prime tasks would be to prosecute the war vigorously on all fronts.

The White House said no other callers had been scheduled officially yet and the assumption was that the new chief would devote the major portion of his day to military matters.

Day of Mourning

As one of his first official acts, President Truman was putting the finishing touches to a proclamation calling for a national day of mourning tomorrow in tribute to the memory of his predecessor.

As Mr. Truman began his first full day in the office to which he ascended from the vice-presidency, he summoned Hugh Fulton, New York and Washington lawyer, to work with him in the executive offices.

Mr. Fulton, former counsel for the Senate War Investigating Committee of which President Truman once was chairman, has been mentioned for the Attorney-Generalship if changes are made in the cabinet.

No Cheers, Just Waving

As Mr. Truman arrived at the White House this morning, there were no cheers from groups who watched, only waves of greeting.

Mr. Truman went to the White House accompanied by Lt.-Col. A. E. Holland of the Office of Inter-American affairs, an old friend, and Ernest B. Vaccaro, a member of the Associated Press Senate staff who covered Mr. Truman's transcontinental campaign trip for the vice-presidency.

The president left his apartment house by a rear door, but even there a few people had gathered to see him.

He spent most of the 15-minute trip to the White House chatting over the overwhelming problems that he faces.

The White House announced, meanwhile, that President Truman would not officially see the press until Monday.

1615 Retained Draftee Status Says D. Abbott

Ottawa, April 13 —(CP)— Douglas Abbott, Parliamentary Assistant to Defence Minister McNaughton, announced yesterday in the Commons that of 1,705 N.R.M.A. men who reached the front by March 31, 1,651 still retained their draftee status when they left Britain.

Mr. Abbott had previously told the House that of 336 draftees moved to the front by Feb. 28, only one had volunteered for general service.

Thus, Mr. Abbott's figures showed that 1,457 N.R.M.A. men went to the front in March of which 53 converted to general service ranks.

He announced last Thursday that the number of home defence troops sent overseas by March 31 totalled 11,000.

SCOTTISH NATIONALIST WINS IN MOTHERWELL

Motherwell, Scotland, April 13 — (CP Cable)— Dr. Robert D. McIntyre, Scottish Nationalist, won the Motherwell by-election to the House of Commons yesterday, defeating the Labor candidate, Alexander Anderson, by 11,417 votes to 10,800, it was announced today.

James Walker, Labor, won the seat with a majority of 430 in the last general election, held in 1935. The by-election was necessitated by the death of Mr. Walker.

Dr. McIntyre said in his campaign he sought a mandate to introduce in the House of Commons a bill for an immediate general election for a Scottish parliament.

BEAVERS VS ANGLERS

Haileybury, April 13 — (CP) — Large numbers of beavers, erecting dams and interfering with trout, are reported to be the most serious drawback to the anglers in this district.

WHERE JAPS AND REDS MAY CLASH

With Russia's denunciation of her neutrality pact with Japan, hostilities may break out in the area pictured on the above map. Hundreds of incidents have occurred along the lengthy Manchurian border in recent years, but war did not break out. Should the two nations start hostilities, some of Japan's better troops that garrison Manchuria to protect key war industries, will face Siberian forces of equal, if not superior strength. While Russia possesses strategic advantages in the air, Vladivostock and the Siberian maritime provinces are exposed to isolation by quick Jap thrusts.

Death of President Roosevelt Felt by Canadians as Personal Loss

By DOUG HOW
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Across Canada, it was as if the best neighbor of them all had died in the house next door.

Across Canada, it was something that struck at almost every home and every heart.

Roosevelt was dead; and now that he has gone it hit millions of Canadians as a personal loss because they had, millions of them, come to think of this great smiling man as a personal friend. It was a strange friendship, perhaps a presumptuous friendship of little men for a very big man who lived in a foreign country but it existed and grew strong with the years.

Across Canada, people who knew little about the complexities of international affairs and historic events, mourned the death of a man who knew all about them but knew, too, and never forgot the people who knew little.

Across Canada, you could tell the way people felt less by what they said than the way they said it.

In Toronto, an R.C.A.F. pilot, wearing decorations for action in two theatres of war, stopped a stranger in the street and asked "Did you hear of Roosevelt's death? It really shook me."

In Ottawa, a cigar store salesman said "It was just as though he was a Canadian."

In Winnipeg, a housewife and clerk said "All of us in the store felt as if we had lost someone very close and dear to us."

In Halifax, a sailor cussed "Not only the States will miss him, but the whole damn world."

In Toronto, a housewife sat back listening to the flood of radio news and said "It's like losing one of our own. It's like we'd lost Churchill."

Across Canada, the man who had called Canada a "good neighbor" was mourned as the epitome of what a good neighbor should be.

Think Organized Fighting to End Within Few Days

Washington, April 13 (AP)—High army officials told Senators yesterday the end of organized fighting in Germany probably will come within a few days.

"Only pockets of resistance will remain to be cleaned up after this collapse," the army chiefs said, according to those who attended the conference. They feel so sure of results that orders have been drawn, drastically reducing the shipments of durable equipment to Europe in preparation for reversing the flow toward the Pacific.

They hope that Hitler and his Nazi leaders will be captured, although they did not discount the possibility of escape by some.

FOUR CUBS, OFFSPRING OF BEAR SHOT, CAPTURED

Political Washington forecast that about next Monday there will begin a contest between Wallace, the spokesman of the left wing, and the leaders of the more conservative party elements for the new President's support. British Commons Honors Memory Of Great Leader

London, April 13 — (CP)—Prime Minister Churchill came before a hushed House of Commons today and asked that it adjourn out of respect to a man of "immortal renown," the late President Roosevelt.

Speaking with considerable emotion, Mr. Churchill said:

"It is not fitting that we should continue our work this day. I feel that the House will wish to render a token of respect to the memory of this great departed statesman and war leader by adjourning immediately."

The prime minister then proposed that next Tuesday be set aside for tributes to the president by leaders of all parties.

Sitting on the government bench were members of the Cabinet led by Foreign Secretary Eden. All wore black ties. An unusually large number of Americans were in the visitors gallery.

In addressing the House, Mr. Churchill said:

"The House will have learned with deepest sorrow the grievous news which has come to us from across the Atlantic and which conveys to us the loss of the famous President of the United States, whose friendship for the cause of freedom and for the causes of the weak and poor have won him immortal renown."

Santerno River Bridgeheads Held Against Attacks

Rome, April 13 (AP) — Allied headquarters announced today that the British 8th Army is driving forward steadily in the lower Po valley against "partially-disorganized resistance" after beating off numerous heavy counter-attacks west of its newly-won Santerno river bridgeheads.

At the same time, attacking Allied 5th Army forces on the opposite end of the front were reported meeting little opposition.

Near the shore of Lake Comacchio at the extreme eastern end of the offensive area, 8th Army units, which earlier captured the villages of Menate and Longastrino, drove westward halfway to Bastia, six miles distant.

The Germans have lost their last footholds on the east banks of the Santerno river. The three Allied bridgeheads across the stream have been expanded despite the massed strength of big tiger tanks and German anti-tank guns.

Swiftly Pinched Out

The salient the Germans long held in the Apennines south of Imola swiftly was being pinched out. While Polish troops driving in from captured Castel Bolognese threatened Imola from the southeast, Italian troops and Partisans driving northward in the Santerno valley gained 4,000 yards and were within four miles of Imola.

Fifth army troops who jumped off yesterday in a new attack in the western Italy area gained more than a mile astride the coastal road toward La Spezia and in high ground northwest of Massa.

Enemy communications immediately behind the battlefronts continued to receive non-stop pounding from the air. Sixteen planes were reported missing from a total of 2,650 Mediterranean Allied air force sorties yesterday.

The leg was made for Stelmikl by a Canadian fellow-prisoner in Germany from a biscuit tin and odd bits of wood, metal and rubber, using only hammer and pliers. Wood himself lost both legs above the knee while serving as a lieutenant with the British tank corps in North Africa. He is visiting U. Rookie Award Winners Play Leading Role in Defeating Detroit Wings for Third Time

McCool Shutout Wings for Third Time and Bodnar Fires Only Goal

By FRASER MacDOUGALL
(CP Staff Writer)

Toronto, April 13 — (CP) — A pair of National Hockey League rookie award winners are the toast of Toronto hockey fans today because of the leading roles they played last night as Toronto Maple Leafs defeated Detroit Red Wings 1-0 to take a commanding six-point lead in their eight-point Stanley Cup final series. The Leafs have won three games and Detroit none.

Nervous Frank McCool of Calgary, a fighting Irishman who overcame the handicap of stomach ulcers to win the rookie award in his first year in professional hockey at the age of 26, made certain of a spot for himself in the hockey record books with his three successive Stanley Cup shutouts to break the former record of two in a row set by Johnny Mowers when Detroit shut out Boston Bruins in the last two games of the 1943 series.

Twenty-two-year-old Gus Bodnar, winner of the award a year ago, maintained the reputation for play-off goals he established in the semi-final series with Montreal Canadiens by firing home the winning counter, his first goal against the Red Wings in his two seasons in the league.

Drab, defensive hockey in the first part of the game gave way to high excitement in the closing minutes when the Red Wings went all-out for the tying goal. The 13,500 fans who had roared their approval when Bodnar got his goal at the 3.02 mark in the third period fairly raised the roof when a Toronto victory became certain.

Defenceman Wally Stanowski made the play for Bodnar's goal. The R.C.A.F. dischargee from Winnipeg shot a fast forward pass in the centre ice zone where all the players were concentrated. Bodnar picked it up at the Detroit blue line, raced for the goal and whipped an angle shot past Harry Lumley in the Detroit nets.

The Leafs were elated afterwards. "I'm proud of the team," said coach Hap Day.

The Red Wings were disappointed. "It looks as if the puck is never going to go in again for us," said manager Jack Adams. "We were just outlucked. I thought we deserved to win this one but I guess we'll have to take the series the hard way."

Said veteran forward Mud Bruneteau: "They can't be that good. We have to win four straight and we can do it. We'll take them Saturday."

Bodnar got the puck with which he scored the winning goal to take back home to Fort William, Ont. He scored two winning goals in the series between Leafs and Canadiens, one in an overtime battle in the fourth game in the series and the other in the sixth and final game.

The Wings outshot the Leafs 29-27 but for most of the game they concentrated on long drives from outside the blue line.

A one-minute silence in tribute to the late President Roosevelt was observed before the game started.

FINALISTS AWAIT OPENING BELL OF THE PLAYOFFS

Gerry Couture, Who Played for Detroit, Will Likely Play for Canucks

Toronto, April 13 (CP)—Moose Jaw Canucks and Toronto St. Michaels Majors today squirted the last drops of oil into their hockey machinery and awaited opening tomorrow of the best-of-seven series for the Memorial Cup and Canadian Junior Hockey Championship.

Interest centred around use of 19-year-old Gerry Couture of Saskatoon who played an important part as Canucks trampled western opposition en route to the finals. Courture played last night for Detroit Red Wings in the third game of the Stanley Cup finals and Canuck Coach Roy Bentley said after the game he still plans to use him in the junior final.

Bentley said he expected to obtain official permission from amateur hockey officials today.

The atmosphere of confidence was common to both Canuck and Majors camps as the teams waited for the opening whistle. But the coaches were silent.

Both Bentley and Joe Primeau, who masterminds the Irish, planned light workouts today. Both said their teams were in fine shape. Both declined comment on outcome of the series.

Majors rested yesterday following their 7-4 victory over Montreal Royals Wednesday that qualified them to meet Canucks in the finals.

What's Doing in Sport

(By The Canadian Press.)

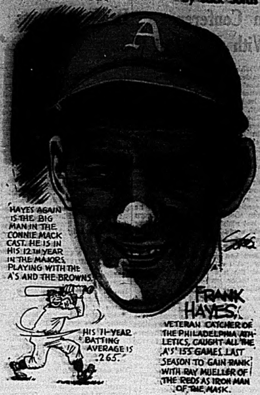
The All-Oceans basketball championship is being claimed by the team of the Royal Canadian Navy minesweeper St. Boniface, the squad having the distinction of being "the best cage team afloat," according to a navy press release last night from an eastern Canadian port. Not only have they toppled other Canadian navy contenders but have registered victories over two of the best quintettes the U.S. navy could provide.

Starting his second year as pilot of Montreal Royals, Bruno Betzel claimed last night at the Bear Mountain, N.Y., training camp, his International League squad was more promising that a year ago although catcher Stan Andrews had gone to Brooklyn. Back again is first-sacker Ed Stevens who scored 16 homers and belted in 102 runs last year.

Howie Schultz, first baseman of Brooklyn Dodgers, has been returned to St. Paul of the American Association to enable him to attend Hamline College in the Minnesota city where he is scheduled to receive his diploma in June. Tommy Brown, 17-year-old shortstop, also was optioned to St. Paul with veteran Mike Sandlock replacing him in the Dodger infield.

President Bill Benswanger of Pittsburgh Pirates said yesterday the 1945 edition of the Bucs was the best since 1938, by comparison with other National League teams. The Pirates have all their regulars back, excepting Al Rubeling, Ray Starr and Pete Coscarart who are in war work.

BASEBALL TOURNEY DATES



Wichita, Kan. — A total of 32 National and territorial non-professional baseball championships, including Canada, will be decided on the 1945 global progress of the National Baseball Congress.

Throughout the Dominion district and provincial tournaments will be established to precede the third annual Canadian championships at London, Ont., starting Aug. 12.

A. L. IRON MAN — By Jack Sords

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By FRED KERNER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, April 13 — (CP) — The much vaunted series between Toronto St. Michaels and Moose Jaw Canucks starts tomorrow and if you ask the experts which is going to win, the answer you get depends upon whether the expert is an easterner or a westerner.

The Canucks sat through Wednesday night's St. Mike's-Royals game without much comment as to how they would fare against the series' final without so much as even changing the calm expression on his face.

The Moose Jaw lads worked out on Maple Leaf Gardens ice and are confident that they can show all the speed necessary to make the Canadian finals a good series. Biggest surprise to the westerners was the "rough hockey they play here."

The last game of the eastern final was typical — hard driving by both teams, without a moment's let up from either. St. Mike's coach Joe Primeau felt that it was a series well fought and hard earned. His opinion of the younger and less experienced Montreal team was of the highest, with honors going to young second-line forward Fleming Mackell and the youthful netminder, Howie Harvey who showed all the symptoms of developing into a pro goalie of note.

Tars Tops:

The R.C.N.'s Newfoundland hockey team really showed the islanders what hockey was this year. The Middies ran their streak to 16 unbeaten games while winning the St. John's city championship. Their scoring average was better than 10 goals per game.

The Newfie Sailors boasted such pro puckers as Phil Hergesheimer, former Chicago Black Hawk; Nelson (Preckies) Little the Hamilton boy who played with Buffalo; Peterboro's Les Wade who was with Hershey and Boston; Clay Laval, former Clevelander from Saskatoon and Jimmy Adams who was on the Baltimore lineup.

Gagnon "Gong":

Babe Gagnon, brother of Lieut. Joe Gagnon, Montreal scrapper now overseas has donated a trophy for the 1945 Montreal Golden Glove tourney to be presented to the gamest loser in the novice division. Something to spur on a coming leather-pusher.

The Golden Glove tourney is set for this coming Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday and as usual entries are pouring in from all through Quebec and Eastern Ontario.

NEWARK BEARS WELL STAFFED FOR FLAG RACE

Myers Expects Hurling Help From McCarthy of the Yankees

By HARRY NASH
Newark Evening News Sport Writer

Newark, April 13 — (AP) — Apparently better fortified than last year when they got off on the wrong foot and wallowed in the International League cellar until July 7, Newark Bears seem well staffed for the 1945 pennant race.

Two outfielders, Nick Rabe and Bill Rabe, and a pair of infielders who helped the club finish behind Baltimore by a margin of only .0007 last fall are back with the club. A third outfielder, Steve Kuk, will join the team to give the Bears an entire hold-over outfield.

With Joe Buzas taken up by the Yankees and Danny Reynolds drafted by Chicago White Sox, manager Bill Meyer was faced with the prospect of filling second base and shortstop.

In Dick Baker, bespectacled star with Binghampton in 1944, Meyer apparently has an able replacement for Reynolds. Either Clarence Difani, purchased from Little Rock, or Dan Doy, a Cuban, will win the second base assignment.

Baseball Loses Great Friend in President's Death

Roosevelt Always Termed Himself the "Nation's No. 1 Baseball Fan"

By JOE REICHLER

New York, April 13—(AP)—Baseball has lost its No. 1 fan, and sportsmen in general feel the death of President Roosevelt has robbed the United States athletic world of its best friend.

Clark Griffith, president of Washington Senators and friend of the president, expressed the sentiment of sports folk generally:

On several occasions Mr. Roosevelt spoke up for baseball, when prospects appeared none too bright for the continuance of the game during wartime. First was in 1942 when he gave his blessing to the pastime in its first precarious moment.

Last month, Mr. Roosevelt referred to himself as the "nation's No. 1 baseball fan" and removed any lingering doubts that baseball would be allowed to carry on in 1945, its fourth wartime season.

In accepting a 1945 season pass from Griffith, he told the "Old Fox" it was not beyond the realm of possibility he would be able to attend the opening game in Washington April 16 and throw out the first ball.

Mr. Roosevelt established a record for presidents by making nine opening day appearances at Griffith Stadium — 1933 through 1941—in addition to throwing out the first ball during the First Great War, acting as a substitute for President Wilson. He was then Assistant Secretary of the Navy.

In many other respects, the president showed deep interest in sports. He was intensely interested in national physical fitness after the war, and was himself a swimming enthusiast.

Griffith recalled that in the late president's school days at Groton and Harvard he was "quite an athlete" in boxing, tennis, track, rowing and baseball.

They'll Do It Every Time — By Jimmy Hatlo

Casual Comment by K.J.C.

What, on 26 Ounces Per.

I had 12 bottles of whisky in my cellar, and my wife told me to empty the contents of each and every bottle down the sink or else..

So I said I would, and proceeded with the unpleasant task.

I withdrew the cork from the first bottle, and poured the contents down the sink, with the exception of the one glass, which I drank.

I extracted the cork from the second bottle, and did likewise—with the exception of one glass, which I drank.

I then withdrew the cork from the third bottle, and emptied the whisky from the sink—with the exception of one glass, which I drank.

I pulled the cork from the fourth and poured with the bottle down the glass, which I drank.

I pulled the bottle from the cork of the next, drank sink out of it, and threw the next down the glass. I pulled the sink out the next glass and poured the cork down the bottle and drank the glass. I pulled the next cork from my throat and poured the sink down the bottle. Then I corked the sink with my glass, bottled the drink and drank the pour.

When I had emptied everything, I steadied the house with one hand and counted the bottles, corks, glasses and sinks with the other, which were 29.

To be sure, I counted them again. When they came by, I had 74. As the house came by, I counted them again; finally I had all the houses, bottles, corks, glasses, and sinks counted—except one house and one bottle, which I drank . . .

Odd, But True.

Usually when hockey players quit their favorite game actively, they retain a certain interest in the sport and frequently attend games. However, such is not the case with Odie Cleghorn, veteran professional player, coach and manager. The other night when the Leafs and Canadiens were playing in Montreal a Quebec sportwriter asked Odie if he was going to the match. Cleghorn replied—"Who's playing?"

There are always in circulation tales concerning private feuds on hockey, baseball, and football squads, sometimes true, sometimes exaggerated...out of Boston comes the yarn that Bill Cowley and Herbie Cain, ace Bruin forwards, have not been on speaking terms all winter although they're teammates on the No. 1 forward line. One Beantown scribe is quoted as saying: "Cain scored 32 goals when he wasn't even speaking to Cowley. Think what he could have done if they were bosom buddies."

There have been a few intra-team hockey feuds...when, Lionel Conacher played with Chicago Black Hawks, he and his defence-mate, Art Coulter, didn't speak for practically them entire season.... seems that Conny had offered a hint to Coulter about playing his position. Coulter resented it, and wordless coolness developed...when, years ago, Art Ross was shifted from Wanderers to Ottawa Senators one of his new teammates was Horace Merrill, brawny defence player ...the previous season, Ross had knocked out most of Merrill's teeth in a clash on the ice, and Merrill wasn't the forgiving kind...he and Ross ignored each other heartily all season.

Softball Siftings.

President Joe Samain of the Belleville and District Men's Softball League, announced today the annual meeting and election of officers for 1945 would be held next Wednesday night. The only teams from last year's league roster to be assured starters are the champion SACO "Marines", Columbian Squires (juniors) and Point Anne "Cementmen" .... Actually prexy Samain feels a good strong four-teamed loop would serve a better purpose for softball than six or seven clubs with weak sisters dotting the circuit....The "Marines" had about a dozen out to practice at Queen Mary School grounds Wednesday evening and will be back at it again tonight commencing about six....Jim Hunter, who hurled the Marines into the provincial finals last season, reported for military call-up at Kingston last Monday..Skipper Max Peoples is facing something of a problem to fill "elongated Jim's" shoes....President Joe says the strong No. 6 R.D. senior "B" softball outfit is desirous of affiliating with the local league ....The "Sizardee" mushballers would add considerable strength to the Belleville group....President Eddie Schreider has a good idea for the ladies softball loop, he's introducing new fabes to the executive starting with Don Barrett.

Remember When.

The Chicago Black Hawks were acclaimed the miracle team of hockey when they defeated the Toronto Maple Leafs 4 to 1 to win the Stanley Cup seven years ago tonight. The Leafs were highly favored to sweep the series after they upset the highly-rated Boston Bruins in three straight games. Incidentally the Leafs are favored to win the Stanley Cup this year. The Leafs captured the old battered mug in 1932 and waited ten long years before taking it again in 1942. Will there be another ten year lapse?

Mere Chicken Feed.

Stating that his private income was of no concern in the John Doe investigation of Kings County athletics, Ned Irish, acting president of Madison Square Garden, refused to reveal whether an estimated $50,000 in basketball profits went to him personally.

Irish had told Judge Samuel S. Leibowitz that ten per cent of the net gate receipts from 25 basketball nights at the Garden during 1944-45 went into a special cage fund. He agreed that the fund received about $65,000 and estimated expenses at about $15,000 to $17,000. But when the judge asked him whether the remaining $48,000 or $50,000 became a personal profit, Irish refused to answer.

Earlier, Irish disclosed his annual salary as Garden president was $12,500 and that gross receipts in ten seasons of basketball double-headers totaled about $1,730,000. He also said that prior to this season he had received ten per cent of net receipts since he started the promotions in 1934.

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

After the deal is over, you don't carry your tricks away with you like a pack-rat. If you see a grand slam, you must get right in there and bid it. Then you will get that big bonus.

We hate to keep talking about a pair of hands one at a time. Here they are together:

SOUTH	NORTH
♠K 8 4	♠A 10 9 7
♥A Q J 10 8 7	♥K 6
♦A Q	♦K J 10 7
♣K 7 4	♣A 10 6

The bidding goes like this:

SOUTH	NORTH
1 H	1 S
2 H	3 S
4 H	5 NT.
7 H	? N or ? NT

Maybe you'd like to know why south does not start with a two bid. The answer is an opening of two in a suit promises not less than nine tricks. This hand has only eight.

Maybe you'd like to know why north does not jump on the first round. The answer is an insured late jump. Jakeout promises six tricks. That hand has only five.

Maybe you'd like to know why north does not fear his one spade response will be passed. The answer is a takeout to a new suit is forcing for one round.

Maybe you'd like to know why north does not bid four no-trump instead of four hearts. The answer is, four no-trump is the usual Blackwood asking signal. It is not used until the trump suit is known.

North can bid four no-trump because he knows hearts can be the trump suit, if necessary. There is a good reason for everything.

SPORTING PEER BACKS ANCIENT BRITISH SPORT

Lord Sefton Says Hare Coursing So Humane It Would Probably Horn Protesting Deputation

By ALLAN NICKLESON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Liverpool, England, April 18 (CP) — Lord Sefton, as president of the National Coursing Club, refused an interview with a deputation that intended to organize in which grey-hounds hunt wild hares, as a "cruel and wicked sport."

The same Lord Sefton, Lord Mayor of Liverpool, later received in the town hall parlor the deputation, representing more than 1,000 signatories to an anti-coursing petition. But he made it plain he was acting only in a private capacity and not as lord mayor.

Lord Sefton, who also is owner of Alntree's Grand National jumping steeplechase course, Aintree, appeared to use his influence to stop coursing, one of Britain's oldest sports, instead of origin lost in antiquity. He invited the objectors to witness the running of the Waterloo Cup, coursing equivalent of the Derby, and added that "you would probably be bored."

The petition received with dismay by continuators in this, the 20th century, of the barbaric practice of hare coursing, which is essentially opposed to the Christian standard of ethics, although even Lord Sefton to refrain from inviting land for a day's sport and nominating a greyhound for the Waterloo Cup meeting, held at the end of November.

Deputation speakers were headed by Ald. R. T. Kirby, Liberal Labor member of parliament. After continuation of "cruelty" they suggested an electric hare could be substituted for the live one, as in stadium greyhound racing.

Hares Rarely Caught.

Maintaining that coursing was "by far the least cruel sport," Lord Sefton said the amount of cruelty involved was "infinitesimal"; his experience he had known as few as eight hares to be killed in 46 courses. Purpose of coursing was not to kill the hare, he added, a dog which could kill one speedily. Usually, the hare was stronger than the dog and often escaped.

Sir Leo Lovell, London, son of Britain's greatest coursing "fan" of time, was a defender of coursing. Many years ago he wrote that "the easiest death, the most painless, and where the hare has every chance of escape in its own metrics, when being coursed."

"If you do away with coursing," he added, "you have to resort to snaring, steel traps and shooting. The greyhounds, as a rule, kill their hare instantly."

At most coursing meetings, including the Waterloo Cup, dogs are run in couples drawn by lot. The hares are driven by a staff of beaters towards a pre-arranged coursing ground and the hare when sighted must be given a clear run of not less than 40 to 60 yards before the dogs are released. The slipper releases them simultaneously by means of specially-devised slip collars attached to a single lead.

Points are given for performance, such as the time taken by the dogs in running down the hare. Traditionally, the judge wears a red coat and gathers after the dogs are while horse. The winner of the first course meets the winner of the second, etc., until the last two dogs left compete for the championship.

See End of Organized Resistance Of Germany in 5 or 6 Weeks, Jap Defeat Sooner Than Expected

By JOHN DAFFORNE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, April 11 (CP) — (Chicago Daily News Foreign Service)—Military opinion here that organized resistance of Germany will end within five or six weeks and that afterwards the defeat of Japan will come more quickly than has hitherto been possible is expressed by authorities here today.

The German armies are holding out, such as they are, largely because by the end of May at the latest it is believed the situation will be such that Allied military leaders will announce that Germany is beaten.

And by that time other phase will reign in Germany. Her wayfor cities have been virtually wiped out by aerial bombs and the highest hopes of R.A.F. and United States air force commanders have been realized that they would be able to depose Hitler.

The "interim" statement of the downfall of Germany won't be the official end of the European war, however. It may be several years before there is an official proclamation of peace.

But in the last few months all will have been whittled out and the Allies will be able to dictate terms. There is not the least hope for Germany and Britain, the United States and Russia will show any mercy.

Prime Minister Churchill and his colleagues have already described the impose terms that will ensure that Germany is absolutely unable to strike even a three-year period.

The cabinet is most anxious to world say-so in the peace conference when Germany is declared beaten because it knows Hitler's power will be going into the war against Japan. Perhaps 1,000,000 additional troops, plus the R.A.F. and Royal Navy forces will have been sent to the Far East to speed victory in the Pacific.

Drastic Treatment For Japan.

But if Germany is treated harshly after victory Japan is going to be treated even more drastically, it is believed.

Japan can count on being stripped of all her colonies in the Pacific area. Her navy and air people restricted to their homeland. The island possessions she was granted after the First Great War almost certainly will revert permanently to the United States and Australia, two countries with the greatest interest in the maintenance of peace in the Far East.

London at Last Withdrawing From Front Line of Struggle

By ALLAN NICKLESON
(CP Staff Writer)

Still in enemy aerial activity had brought the longest rest period of the war over London, which is now possibility remains of a last-ditch blitz spurt of V-weapons, all signs point to the end of Hitler's terror by death.

In Holland, where Canadian forces have advanced against almost negligible opposition in capturing the V-2 launching, Dutch underground workers are reported relieved to be carrying only sabotage which prevents the Germans from using for a last all-out salvo of rockets.

The Germans could, however, still launch descents-laden bombs from piloted aircraft as they have done before, or perhaps even launch them from submarines. Because of that, along with possibility of rockets or flying bombs before the Holland sites are overrun completely Britain's defenses still will be on no relaxation of defence methods.

But the most substantial factor, head, however, believes that the real menace has passed, and that there will be no more concentrated attacks like those made up to March 30.

Because of the vast number of Allied armies in Germany and the Germans in Holland, the only way of getting fuel and fresh supplies of rockets to the latter would be by sea and air.

The navy and the air force keep a constant watch for that, and as soon there will be lights again. In London and the countryside of darkness broken only by the bursting of explosives and the glare of burning war homes and fire. Some say full lighting will be here by August.

C.N.R. Operating Revenues Highest In Company's History

Ottawa, April 13 —(CP)— Operating revenues of Canadian National Railways in 1944 were $441,167,000, highest in the company's history, and total revenue amounted to $1,326,500 a day, it was announced in the annual report of R. C. Vaughan, chairman and president, tabled Thursday in the Commons by Transport Minister Michaud.

As the result of 1944 operations the C.N.R. turned over a cash sum of $29,027,000 to the Federal Treasury after payment of interest on the public and the government, The system carried 80,561,000 tons of freight, the highest in its history —almost twice as much freight and three times as many passengers as in 1939.

There was an increase of 434,000 tons in the freight handled in 1944 as compared with 1943, but freight revenue at $262,000 was $2,310,000 lower because of a decreased movement of higher rated war and industrial materials and an increased volume of lower rated products. Passenger revenue, at $89,778,000, increased by $2,886,000.

Operating expenses totalled $363,847,000, an increase of $36,072,000 over 1943. The increase was more offset by higher wage rates and material prices and additional maintenance work on track and equipment.

Higher Payroll.

As compared with 1939, the higher wage rate, added $67,630,000 to the payroll and the higher unit prices for materials, $30,000,000 to the cost of materials.

Mr. Vaughan said the property was maintained to meet the heavy traffic requirements but reductions of labor and material restricted certain classes of work.

Depreciation charges were charged with $10,000,000 for deferred maintenance, $11,140,000 for amortization of war projects and $2,979,000 for investment reserves. The amortization charge for depreciation on rolling stock was $19,983,000, or approximately $700,000 more than would be provided under average traffic conditions.

"These special charges," the report said, "have been taken in the operating accounts, in continuance of the practice adopted in 1941, to ensure that future results will not be burdened with delayed charges arising out of wartime operations."

After meeting operating expenses, taxes, equipment and joint facility rents the net railway operating income was $77,778,000, compared with $61,634,000 in 1943. Interest on funded debt held by the public in 1944 was $36,196,000. Additional government loans $10,934,000 and other net charges and the cash surplus paid to the government was $29,027,000. The cash surplus in 1943 was $30,536,000.

Total capital expenditure was $96,063,000, of which $93,340,000 was for rear equipment, including 27 locomotives acquired under hire-purchase agreements with the Dominion government.

Shipments handled by the Canadian National Express aggregated 18,781,000, an increase of 726 per cent. Express revenues, at $17,975,000, were the highest in the company's history. Revenues from Canadian National telegraphs were $6,000,000, on a par with 1943.

Revenues of the railway's hotels were $6,819,000, the highest on record.

News-Gathering Services Show Many Parallels

Toronto, April 13 — (CP) — Senator W. A. Buchanan, president of The Canadian Press, in introducing yesterday to the CP annual meeting Jamieson Robert McLean, president of the Associated Press, emphasized the close relationship between the two news-gathering organizations paralleling that between Canada and the United States.

Particularly during the last few years of war and the "common threat" have the countries been drawn so closely together, he said.

"As in our manner of life, our systems of government, so it is with the CP and the AP. We have been closely related in the past and our relations are growing even closer."

He foresaw a "stronger sense of relationship between the two cooperatives." The Canadian Press was born 37 years ago "in the presence of the AP," and the "consulting physician" was Melville E. Stone then general manager, who "gave the child good treatment and good advice." Former president Frank R. Noyes was a co-operating friend of the CP."

Secretary Buchanan described Mr. McLean as "president of the greatest co-operative news-gathering organization in the world," and publisher in Philadelphia of the paper (Evening Bulletin) with the largest evening-newspaper circulation in the world.

He spoke of the CP and AP as "gathering news on a co-operative way," mutual facilities. The two go "side by side, if not hand in hand; the success of one is the success of the other."

Little Benny's Note Book

We had fish for dinner on account of meat rationing, fish being one of my least favorite things and pork too, and I said, Ah! O, fish.

Now don't start that, ma said, and pop said, Eat what's on your plate with a smile or a reasonable facsimilly thereof. That's what I'm doing, even though in my personal opinion a fish's place is in the sea, struggling with its own bones instead of on my plate inviting me to join the conclave, he said.

Now William, please don't encourage him, ma said. Both of you ought to be ashamed to take such an attitude torrds a nice platter of fish when you know there are thousands of unfortunate people on homeless roads or in concentration camps at this very minute who would be only too overjoyed if they had even a few poorly prepared crumbs, she said, and I said, I bet that's right, ma, I bet that's just the trouble. I mean the trouble if I'm not hungry enough. If I was hungry enough and hadn't had a single thing to eat for about 5 days, I bet I could even eat sardines smeared with sand grease and think it tasted great, I said.

Well you needn't let your imagination run away with you for land sakes, ma said, and pop said, You're quite right, my dear, people never know the value of food till they're really hungry. For instance during the war of 1870 even the daintiest diners in Paris were forced to invent a stew made of mice, and no doubt they found it delicious.

Now really, William, I mean really, ma said, and I said, Well O, ma, you started the subject. I bet if you were hungry enough yourself I bet your mouth would water even at the thought of a raw frog leg rapped in a fried bannanna skin, I said, and pop said, Perhaps that will suffice to give the general idea. Now let's be practical and imagine we're on a desert island and the fish is the first thing we've had to eat for a week, he said.

Me trying is just for the experiment, and it worked fair but not perfect.

CHAPTER 3

"I ran into him in the Hurlbut," she finished. "Nick," Dandee took up the tale. "He perpetually travels, injured or ill, and is having some trouble getting it re-insured. He's dotty about Jocelyn, called, so I arranged things for him—I have a little influence in Transcontinental Mutual, my present."

As the inspector's party rose to go, Gerga moved forward to open the door for them. He had to pass Dandee. At that moment, there flashed into Dandee's eyes a look that startled Basil. In all his experience of abnormal emotions, he had never seen hatred more naked and undisguised.

As they stood on the sidewalk outside the hotel, Foyle said, "Do you think there's anything in this idea that the poisoned cocktail was intended for you and Sgt. Jocelyn just got it by mistake?"

Basil smiled. "Have you forgotten Gregg's statement? And Ann Claude's Danine took sherry the afternoon of the crime. It seems most unlikely that the poisoner would confuse a lethal cocktail with a glass of sherry. Certainly no hitter would be likely to do so, and therefore Kitty could hardly have been served with the glass of sherry Danine took by mistake."

"Then it was all moonshine! And you have had your men just retailing him along!"

"I'd like to know who he is—as his servant remarked Basil. "Hate is so intimate."

"Now, Inspector, be a sport! It's for the Occidental News Service and we represent one hundred and forty-five newspapers in North and South America!"

"Can him, Duff. We're not going to smash your plates, buddy. But I hadn't hoped for free publicity. I was going to be at this hotel this afternoon."

"Somebody tipped me off. I don't know who it was—honest, Inspector. Somebody rang me up at the office this morning and said you were coming out here, and I'd better see this guy Danine, about the Jocelyn case."

Foyle let the photographer go, and turned to Basil. "Who could have known about Danine Basil himself?"

Basil smiled. "Precisely."

"What about dinner with me, then?" suggested Foyle. "I'd like to talk this over with you."

"Why don't you two dine with me? Juniper is already busy, I'll rustle up something at short notice."

"O.K. Do you mind going to Lambert's first? There's something I want to ask him, and he'll be at home by now."

The City Toxicologist lived on Riverside Drive. A maid showed them into a chilly study.

"You smoke, Basil?" explained Lambert. "We burn twice as much coal as we should, owing to other street. What about a little experiment with an aqueous solution of ethyl alcohol?"

"Excellent is right," retorted Basil, eyeing the flask of fine old whiskey. "If I die, tell the reporters I was here working martyr to science."

"Listen; I came here on serious business," protested Foyle. "I found out yesterday that Kitty Jocelyn's uncle, Kitty Jocelyn, is president of a dye company—the Industrial Finishing Company."

"Dye" companies are often called "munitions" companies, or "processing" companies, but in Lambert's case—

"I was in his office and I happened to see some samples of fuchsia dyed yellow. Of course I remembered your saying that thermometer is obviously symbolic of dread or indifference to the thermometer. Behind the thermometer followers go further and claim that it is a symbol of the desire to commit suicide, thrust far below the threshold of consciousness because of conflicts with moral ideas and self-preservation. In my opinion, this is going a little astray. Food is associated with varying degrees of pleasurement and displeasurement, and deeper, even in cases where the individual has survived on starvation and quite literally forgotten about his inner sense of failure.

"In the Jocelyn case, there are at least two perfectly good hypotheses to explain the finding. Kitty's cocktail 'by mistake'. First Pasquale is the murderer and he knows all about Hurrell. He slips a dose into Kitty's cocktail and then confidently thinks that if it pretending he does so by mistake! And Pasquale knows that his morphine habit has made him immune. By doing this, he hopes to divert suspicion from himself, and make it almost impossible to prove that the cocktail poisoned her, which in turn would would make it impossible for us to limit suspects to people at the cocktail party.

"Second, if Pasquale is not the murderer and he has no idea Kitty's cocktail is poisoned, this mistaking it for his own is a genuine blunder, and the key to its significance is Kitty herself and folk-ing. There's a scene in Meredith's book where a man first shows his passion for a girl by deliberately touching his lips to a glass her lips have touched. And I believe that sharing the same cup of wine is one of the rites in Russian and Japanese marriage ritual. Pasquale himself told us that Rhoda was fond of Kitty's youth. Naturally Pasquale hungered for youth but he had to be careful that hunger because he was dependent on Rhoda. There you have all the old cycle again — wish, conflict, repression, and then the wish expressing itself ritually harmlessly in the involuntary pantomime of a blunder. According to this second hypothesis, it was only the luck of the draw that Rhoda's cocktail and not Pasquale's morphine habit should save him from a horrible death."

"Then you believe Pasquale had fallen for Kitty?" asked Foyle.

"Nothing so deep and lasting as that. Just such stuff as dreams are one of those fleeting, animal impulses that—betray themselves in unconscious reveries and works of art. You remember the nude in Pasquale's studio? I had a slight resemblance to Kitty!"

WILL BE CONSOLIDATED

Ottawa, April 13 — (CP)—Girls of the R.C.A.F. (Women's Division) will be coupled in big groups across Canada now that many stations of the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan have closed, Wing Officer Winnifred M. Taylor, senior R.C.A.F. (W.D.) staff officer, said yesterday.

HOUSE SOBERED,

high scale of employment and income and higher standard of living.

Transport Minister Mitchell told the annual reports of the Canadian National Railways and Canadian National Steamships Limited for 1944. The railway report showed net earnings at the highest point yet attained.

Discon or munitions department estimates for the fiscal year 1945-46 will be cut in the clash between Mr. Howe and Mr. Hamilton. The latter said there were rumors roving around the country about war contracts. The last time power went had insisted on having the war expenditures committee, which looking into contracts, meet in secret but not helped to allay suspicion.

He charged that one manufacturer in Montreal made $60,000 on investment of $90,000, buying a product at a certain price per unit and selling at 21 cents to the government when the original price was only 11 cents. He said to the government, let official sit in the committee.

Offered to Resign

He offered to risk his seat on the statement, and said he would stake his character against Mr. Howe's.

Mr. Howe said any subsequent as a witness in this case two days after the House rises", said Mr. Howe.

Mr. Hosmith said he had passed on his information to Mr. Howe and the Munitions Department.

"Who was it?" asked Mr. Howe.

"Oh! I'm not telling you. I said Mr. Hosmith.

Mr. Howe said Mr. Hosmith was confessing "a charge of a serious misappropriation of public funds, but he refuse to disclose who he had reported it to. He said he had cleared up.

"He has private pipeline into the department", said Mr. Howe.

Mr. Howe said Mr. Hosmith hopped to his feet on a point of order and he and Mr. Howe were standing on the floor of the house each other to "sit down", Chairman Joseph Read-ing intervened and told the House both Mr. Hosmith and Mr. Howe had properly risen and should cease acting as each other to sit down.

When Mr. Howe remarked on his feet, T. V. Grant (L-King's) shouted:

"Let him out".

"You come over here and try it", said Mr. Hosmith.

Order Finally Restored.

When order was restored, Mr. Howe said he had expected more non-cooperation from the Opposition in the matter of getting to the bottom of cases of profiteering on war contracts.

In the last 100,000 contracts it was found in some cases that there was no profiteering and wrong doing. The Munitions Department always had to track down the guilty and clean them up.

The members of the House had not brought any case to light that had not already been dealt with-by the Munitions department or by the reports of the committees were brought down.

Mr. Hamuth had made a charge against A. Montreal purchasing but has refused to substantiate it.

Mr. Hosmith said there were rumors going around that five or six ships had been scrapped in Toronto yards. Not them 30 per cent completed. The story was that the ships had been scrapped because they were no longer wanted. There was knocked over them. They were bringing similar ships from the other yards into Toronto.

Present Not In

On the eve of the Eighth Victory Loan, he said, the Government should do something to clear up matters, that were bothering the minds of the people.

The government should disclose whether there was any truth in the stat at tremendous profits and should do something to put an end to rumors that were unfounded.

Mr. Howe said that in 100,000 contracts some cases of profiteering and wrong-doing had been found. The department had in every case down. Mr. Hosmith was not helping very much by refusing to disclose information about alleged wrongdoing.

Mr. King was not in the House when word came of President Roosevelt's death. He arrived before cloture. Mr. Howe announced it and the members stood in silence.

Few lives have been more closely identified with humanity in its needs, its struggles, and its aspirations," the late president's life was the cause of freedom ever far beyond the limits of race and the bounds of nationality.

"He was an undaunted champion of the rights and liberties of the weak and a mighty leader of the forces of freedom in a world at war. He has left to the free world a rich heritage, in which his life, his faith and his courage will be an inspiration to the well-being of his fellow men.

Sent His Sympathy

Scarcely a month ago Mr. King was the president's guest at the White House on one of his almost visits to Washington. They talked about the coming San Francisco Conference where they were to have met again. Mr. King issued a joint statement on trade policy.

Gordon Graydon, Progressive Conservative leader, said he extended the recent inauguration of the president for his fourth term.

He said:

"This world can ill afford to lose Franklin Roosevelt as it emerges from this armed holocaust and enters the long years of peace which are the objective of all peoples in our critical periods.

"He has thrown the torch to other hands let us pray that the relentless pursuit of lasting peace shall soon overwhelm the forces of destruction and fortitude which characterized every move he made."

Both leaders spoke feelingly of the high respect and friendship in which Mr. Roosevelt was held by Canadians. Mr. King referred to how his death would cause throughout Canada.

M. J. Coldwell, CCF. F. leader, and John Blackmore, Social Credit Leader-Lacombe, Alta., in turn-and associated themselves with the statements of Mr. King and Mr. Graydon.

FEW COUNTY CHEESE FACTORIES OPERATING

Despite the fact of one of the earliest starts in the record, very few cheese factories in Hastings County are now operating, according to dairy inspection officials here. Not over half a dozen factories in the county have begun operations for the summer although it is expected many will soon be underway.

Hastings is not normally an early milk district while the same applies to the Campbellford district, it was said. Like other districts, practically all factories in the Napanee and Kingston districts are in operation, while the same applies to Prince Edward county.

Dairy inspection of this district this week are attending a conference at the O.A.C. at Guelph.

Friday the 13th Holds No Fears In Belleville

Citizens, attracted with caution today, found the dreaded date, broken. Hirrors and such passed the ordeal unscathed. Black cats, ladders, walks under them, walk, or walk across the street in order to evade a cross-eyed, squinting black bonnet scout.

Apparently none of these time-honored means of ill fortune carried too much bad luck for Bellevillians. No serious accidents were reported and no jail cells contain citizens from behind the inflexed, keeping the proceedings down to a minimum.

For those who carry the proverbial rabbit's foot or horseshoe for good luck, there is little to worry about. Friday the 13th must need only when they fail to bring results. Also, that time the rabbit's foot luck charm will be to either end his song of happiness.

RAWDON

Surprise Party Held on Eve Of Departure

Rawdon — Friends and neighbours of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Hubble gathered at the home of the former's church hall and tendered them a surprise party before their departure this week to Stellarton where they will reside.

Rev. W. F. Townsend was chairman, and a round of community singing was enjoyed with the Carleton Perth Pianist. The pastor spoke of the affection and friendship enjoyed with the departing family.

Mrs. Harry McAdam read a very appetizing poem entitled "Friendship", Mrs. Marguerite McArthur rendered an Irish song.

Mr. Harvey Cossit, Carmel, delighted with two humorous readings, guitar and harmonica.

Miss Ruth Chase and Mrs. Wilmot's contributed a piano solo.

Mrs. T. F. Townsend gave a couple of poems, one being dedicated to the Hubble family.

Master Gordon Reid gave a piano solo and Miss Edna Hubble read a selection "What shall we have for dinner today".

Misses Ruth Rose and Lois Weaver with Mrs. Kenneth Weaver as accompanist sang Miss Crosby's "Irish Lullaby."

Mr. Percy Mackiellan read an address of appreciation to the members of the Hubble family and Mr. Kenneth Weaver made the presentation of a torch electric lamp and end table.

Percy and Irene graciously replied thanking all those who had assisted in arranging the pleasant surprise and the lovely gifts.

They also invited their friends to visit them at Stellarton.

Guests were present from Carmel, English Line, and Bethel, Mearsh, Barneys River and Wallace. Mr. Hubble and Nell have both a great many sons during their residence at Rawdon and Mrs. Hubble also delighted at the arrival, in 1940 and 1942 and Mrs. Hubble opened their home for the "At Home" in Hubbleberry Square and the Hubbler kind hospitality will win for them a host friends wherever they go. They are both born at Mount Pisgah and attended the "Williams School". About ten years ago they came back to Mount Pisgah to reside. The address was signed by Earl and Bertha McAdam, Raymond and Helen McConnell, Kenneth and Pearle Weaver, Percy and Florence MacMillan and Harvey Cusick.

Nell Hubble has won several prizes for singing in Amateur contests and she has appeared on a great many platforms even though he is only eleven years of age.

News Briefs

Mr. Percy Jackman, 6th Rte., Rawdon, had a serious accident recently. While cultivating with a three horse team, the tongue broke and the horses became frightened and ran some distance. Mr. Jackman was thrown to the ground receiving a severe kick on his hip and several bruises. He is now recuperating in Millerton Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest White have received word that their son, Pte. Ray White, is in Belgium.

MELROSE

District Meeting Of 3 E. Hastings Institutes Held

Melrose—The District meeting for three branches of the Women's Institutes was held on Tuesday afternoon in the Rural Community hall, Melrose, with Mrs. Ernest Demarsh, president of Melrose Institute, Mrs. C. Bayne, Foxboro, Institute Director, presiding. Reports were prepared to answer problem questions of the members on Institute work. Mrs. Addison Hall, Melrose, was the afternoon speaker on "Institute Standards and Their Value to Health." Certificates to those who had attended the Madoc Institute were awarded. Those who have faithfully given leadership and so much of their time at the Institute meetings that each branch during the war years. Those receiving the certificates were Mrs. Thos. Leslie, war work convener, Mrs. Donald Mitchell, institute secretary, and Mrs. Roy Badgley, who has so ably acted as president for the past three years.

Mrs. Hall Leslie contributed the solos which were enjoyed after the meeting, and took her to Phillipsville where she met the three members of the W. I. Institutes the following afternoon.

Foxboro

Mrs. F. D. Pringle entertained at a 5 o'clock supper on Saturday evening in honor of Miss Helen McAvoy, a bride-to-be. A pleasant social time was spent. An address was read by Jean Mooney, Mrs. Wilson and Donald Pringle and Jackie Wesson carried in a basket well filled with gifts which she received from them to Helen. The honors with the address were read by Jean Mooney.

Mrs. J. Hinds has returned home from Belleville after visiting her daughter in Ontario.

Mrs. W. Rodney, who has spent the winter with Mrs. Wilfred Wilson, is at present at her home here.

Mrs. R. J. Wilson and Miss Evelyn Embery returned to Toronto on Saturday after visiting during the Easter holiday.

Mrs. Arnold Masters with Kieran and Donald spent Sunday with Belleville friends.

Miss Mabel Burton spent Sunday with Mrs. Jos. Shellswick.

Mrs. Jos. Shellswick had her niece spending some time with her daughter, Mrs. Frank Pringle.

Albury

Albury—The Albury Ladies Aid held its monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. Carl Williamson on Tuesday afternoon.

A large number attended the Red Cross Rendezvous at the upper school on Friday evening. There were 39 tables of euchre in play with prizes going to ladies: Mrs. Harry Peck, Mrs. Benord Peck; men, Stewart Allison and Don Redmond.

Mrs. Allen Redmond had a centre-piece on which tickets were sold amounting to $16. Mrs. Miller, of Consecon, was the lucky winner.

Refreshments were served.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Walbom, of Toronto and Mr. Frank Walbom, of Cobden, spent the week-end and Thursday with Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Peck and called on other friends.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Hilton spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Harry Allison.

Word was received from Mr. and Mrs. K. Walbom, of Toronto, stating they had received a telegram from Ottawa saying that Sgt. Bill was a prisoner of war in Germany. Sgt. Walbom is missing since Jan. 20th.

Mr. Frank Peck, of Peterborough, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Peck and called to see his brother, Will.

Bonarlaw

Bonarlaw—Capt. John A. Bell, R. C. R., Toronto, and Mrs. Bell are in Bonarlaw for a few days this week.

Mrs. Beverley Annis McKeown spent her Easter holidays with her aunt, Mrs. W. J. Barlow.

Rose Elizabeth Boots, sister of Mrs. R. C. Scarbrough, of Bonarlaw has been advanced to the rank of Wren Petty Officer. Rose, as she is known throughout naval establishments in which she has served since joining the Women's Royal Canadian Service over two years ago, came from England some years ago and was a governess in Toronto before enlisting. As a naval cook, she took courses and passed advanced examinations before qualifying for her present rating. Petty Officer Boots has been at the Galt training centre, at H. M. C. S. "Cataraqui" in Ottawa, at Halifax at H. M. C. S. "Stadacona" and now at H. M. C. S. "Peregrine" in the nation's capital.

FAMINE IN YOUNG TREES

Niagara Falls, Ont., April 12 — (CP) — A famine in trees caused by drought, and attempts to combat the scanty tree-planting ceremony at public schools today, Henry Dow and destructive activities caused by rabbits and mice, and lack of help at nurseries combined to create the famine.

TRENTON

Legion Members Give Assistance To Citizens' Com.

Trenton, April 13 — Trenton Branch of the Canadian Legion at its monthly meeting, in the Odd Fellows' Hall, decided to co-operate with and give every assistance to the Citizens' Rehabilitation Committee consisting of all service clubs and churches in the town. It was felt that one committee could be of more use to the returned men now being discharged or "rested" for service, and to those soon to be called, the Legion Executive overseas.

It was announced that plans are being made for the completion of Legion Park, to take form for the new Legion Hall recently purchased. The building is what is known as the armoury and is felt to be ideal for the purpose after certain improvements are made.

A large number of veterans are back in the district, and the membership is now a record one.

Loan Committee Formed

A committee to handle the Eighth Victory Loan campaign in Trenton has been set up with William E. Leland as chairman. Honorary Chairmen are Kenneth Cossit and R. H. Greene. Other members of the Committee are W. B. McClung, vice-chairman; W. C. Saylor, Chief Clerk; Bain, A. J. Parsons and Norman Banfield. The campaign opens on April 22 and the town with its thoroughly covered by salesmen. The payroll savings plan will also be in full swing again. The amount of Trenton's objective will be announced shortly.

Teachers Want Increase

Trenton Public School Board at its April meeting in Dufferin school instructed the secretary to notify the Trenton Public School Teachers' Association that it will be pleased to receive a deputation from that body at its next meeting, the first Tuesday in May, at College Street School. The Association had sought a special meeting but this was not granted. It is understood that the teachers wish to make representations to the Board with regard to the present salary schedule. An increase of $50.00 for each teacher, voted at the March meeting, was not satisfactory to the teachers, it is learned.

The principals reported that the sale of war savings stamps in the public schools is being well supported by the children. Today the amount invested by the children is over $17,000. At College Street in March sales were $437.00, there is a grand total of $9,444 to the credit of the pupils to date. At Dufferin school, March sales were $295.00. Total sales for the school are nearly $7,000. The Board is well pleased with the records of all schools and the fact that thrift is being taught.

Speaks at Batawa

Mrs. B. F. Joyce, wife of Trenton's Red Cross president, was guest speaker at a Red Cross meeting in Batawa on Wednesday afternoon at which representatives of the Trenton, Frankford and Batawa branches were present.

Mrs. Joyce gave a most interesting talk on Red Cross, dealing lightly with its progress from the original branch formed by Florence Nightingale to the extensive work being done today by the International society in all corners of the known world.

A hearty vote of thanks was tendered Mrs. Joyce by the Batawa president and others of their society, after which a dainty tea was served.

No Basis for Stories Says Prime Minister

Ottawa, April 13 — (CP) —There was no reasonable foundation for stories that "alarming conditions" existed among Allied prisoners of war in Germany, Prime Minister Mackenzie King said yesterday in the Commons.

He was answering A. H. Bence (PC — Skeena) who said he had heard reports of "alarming conditions" and thought the government should issue some assurance for the benefit of next-of-kin in Canada.

OLD BUT RECENT

Platinum was known from very early times but it was not introduced into Europe until the 18th century.

"I feel like talking . . . got a moment ?"

My name's Jim. And maybe I won't have the chance to chat with you again. I was wounded in Italy—been in France since D-Day. I've seen men die . . . men who were my friends.

Sometimes I get wondering about the folks back home. I picture my wife holding the son I've never seen—and telling him about his Daddy. I imagine Mom doing her knitting, Dad digging his garden, the fellows at the shop washing up for the day . . .

Then I can't help thinking: "Can they, snug in their homes, realize what war is like?"

Can they realize the endless days of cold and wet and mud . . . the deafening roar of guns . . . the nights when you sleep huddled against the wind . . . the longing for hot food, a warm bed and no more worry about hidden mines or booby traps?

Just as you would be, we're weary of war. That's why we're anxious to get the job over—to lick the Nazis, then clean up the Japs. We need plenty of tanks, guns, planes, shells . . . everything. And remember . . . the money you salt away in Victory Bonds helps build these things.

So keep up the good work, you folks back home! And if you hear anyone saying, "Oh, I'm tired of buying Victory Bonds, I've done my share," just ask him or her how they'd like to trade places with me—for just one day.

U.S. 9TH FIGHTS ON BERLIN'S OUTER DEFENCES B-29S SET OFF TOKYO BLASTS HEARD 100 MILES

Superforts Bounce Mile into Air by Force of Explosions

Target Area 6 Miles North Of the Imperial Palace

Guam, April 14 (AP)—The greatest B-29 raiding force yet struck the armed centre of Tokyo early today with fire bombs, shaking explosions which pilots said were heard more than 100 miles away.

The blasts bounced the 50-ton superfortresses as much as one mile upwards through the air, pilots said, simultaneously spreading in two "a very substantial raid."

The Japanese said the raiders with "indiscriminate" fighter support aircraft, said flashed across the sky like great balls of fire.

Though there was no official report, casualties and damage were light. Tokyo radio claimed 18 were downed and damaged.

Beginning at 12:30 a.m. Japan time (11:30 a.m. Friday, E.D.T.) the B-29 planets, flying singly and in massed thousands of tons of incendiaries on a fire-mile square area containing arsenals, chemical plants and explosives factories.

Pilots said the target was "on fire."

It was the 16th Superfort raid on Tokyo. The raiding force officially described as of "very great strength" which probably meant as many as 500 planes. The largest previous all-planes attack, May 25, involved probably 300 planes.

Tokyo radio broadcasts, often continued to rush several hours after the assault is over, said that the conflagrations was brought under control by dawn. Superfort crews said some of the fires were visible higher than their planes, which went over the city at 30,000 to 32,000 feet.

The target area, six miles north of the Imperial palace, has a population of 2,000,000 or more persons in the square mile and includes the Nakajima Hikoki aircraft arsenal. On its fringes are large chemical plants, bombs going powerful for war.

While Saipan said, was under way, 21st bomber command headquarters reported more than 1,000 tons of bombs on Nagoya showed virtually complete destruction by the great Mitsubishi aircraft plant there.

British Troops Drive into Imola Highway Centre

Rome, April 14 —(AP)— British Eighth Army troops driving through the outskirts of Imola, Po Valley highway centre less than 30 miles west of Bologna, fifth army headquarters announced today.

A communique said the advance along the Bologna-Ravenna highway had been opposed by less than light rear-guard resistance, but that heavy fighting continued farther north in the Argenta gap and the Santerno river.

Polish troops pushing directly along the highway yesterday had been opposed by less than light fire from Imola, while Italian troops had captured the enemy strongpoint of Mordano, seven miles southeast of Imola.

Elsewhere, from enemy tanks and self-tank guns impeded the progress of the left wing of the fresh Po Valley offensive. Nevertheless, the Santerno river was crossed in that area and Fifth Army units were within two miles of the road intersection town of Castle, adjacent to Argenta on the main Imola-Ravenna highway.

Fresh heavier fighting was in progress around and west of Castelnuovo, Monte Lombarde, where the original bridgehead over the Santerno river was behind it, and reported steadily.

At the far end of the Italian front Allied 5th Army troops moved further ahead along the coast against light enemy resistance. They took Lepiano, 3,000-foot peak northwest of the newly-occupied village of Castelpoggio, and reached the outskirts of Arsena.

R.A.F. heavy bombers, meanwhile were active over the battle area. The Army's spearing columns last night after British and American planes had given all-day support over the battle zone. Fourteen planes were lost.

POSSIBLE CHANGE ONTARIO VOTING DATE SUGGESTED

Bracken, Jolliffe, Hepburn Refer to Simultaneous Elections

Toronto, April 14 —(CP)— Progressive Conservative circles suggested early this morning the possibility of Premier George Drew of Ontario advancing the date of the Ontario General election from June 11 to June 4 on the grounds that a simultaneous election campaign and election June 11 would be "confusing."

These circles, who said they were speaking unofficially, pointed out they understood the writs for the Ontario election had not yet been issued and that they would be the logical reason for Mr. Drew not to adopt the suggestion.

Some Progressive Conservative circles said that the June 4 election date for the Ontario election, Mr. Drew would "collect" Prime Minister Mackenzie King's vote, and that had Unfortunately picked June 11.

Toronto, April 14—(CP)—Stirring an Dominion and Ontario spotlight for the same day—June 11—premiers Mackenzie King of Canada and Drew of Ontario were at a serious variance with regard to ballot boxes, Major A. G. L. McNaughton, M.P., declared on the floor, said today.

"Ontario has a full supply of boxes and in past elections each had borrowed from the Dominion," Mr. Drew said. "With both elections on the same date this would be impossible. The Ontario minister said that the boxes must be metal and must conform to the Dominion specifications set out in the elections act. He was hopeful that the boxes would soon be released to make sufficient boxes available.

Major Lewis said writs for the Ontario election would be issued toward the end of next month, but he did not believe the date would be changed because of the federal announcement.

Rose Garden Resting Place Prepared For President As Neighbors Mourn

By JEAN SMALL

Hyde Park, N. Y., April 14—(AP) The earth of Hyde Park, warmed by spring sunshine, was ready today to receive the body of Franklin Delano Roosevelt. Late the garden chiseled by an ancient cedar hedge, a grave was prepared for the burden it will receive Sunday morning.

DaModlo, blossomed in the garden, hidden between the Roosevelt mansion and the Hudson river. Buds on the Franklin D. Roosevelt lilacs, and rose bushes were in leaf near the Roosevelt family plot.

The village of Hyde Park, still bewildered by the sudden death of its first citizen, mourned quietly and privately.

Park, 78-year-old Rev. George W. Anthony, who will officiate at the funeral, said: "Heaven would gather at the old ivy-covered Episcopal Church of St. James immediately after the brief service at the grave.

They will sing his favorite hymns and the congregation will join the last president's favorite Bible chapter: "The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want. He maketh me to lie down in green pastures; he leadeth me beside the still waters. He restoreth my soul; he leadeth me in the paths of righteousness, for his name's sake."

Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil; for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me.

"Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies; thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over.

"Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life; and I will dwell in the house of the Lord forever."

Mary E. Trumpler, who first met Franklin D. Roosevelt as President of the United States, will be seen in by Colonel Harold Suyder in the Treasury.

RUSSIAN FORCES FREED FOR DRIVE ON NAZI REDOUBT

Vienna is Captured After Week-Long Siege and Prague is Next Objective

London, April 14 (CP) — Powerful Russian forces, released by the fall of historic Vienna, mastered new drives today along the Slav Prague and the Czechoslovakian fortifications in Southern Germany.

The Austrian capital of the Danube fell yesterday to the combined weight of the 2nd, and 3rd, Ukrainian armies under Marshals Rodion Y. Malinovsky and Fedor I. Tolbukhin after a week-long siege that resulted in the capture of 180,000 Germans, by Moscow accounts.

Vienna's capture left the so-called Greater Reich and bulwark crippled by the Russian routes to Berlin little more than 100 miles away, was the tenth European capital occupied by the Red Army and the 18th, liberated or conquered by the Allies.

Moscow said that between March 16 and April 13 the two Russian task divisions were smashed as Russian forces closed in on the Austrian capital and the soviet radio last night said the Viennese had "earned the honor of the nation's liberation" by assisting in the liberation of their city.

Wide in City Hands.

The Viennese celebrated their liberation with public rallies in the streets and squares, and by fraternizing with American and Soviet flags as the populace saluted the Red Army and the United Nations, a Moscow broadcast reported.

Moscow broadcasts reported troops northeast of the capital captured Gaenserndorf, of Modern Europe across the Moravian border that carried to within 36 miles of Prague, Czechoslovakian capital and centre. The soviet forces were advancing the last 60 miles of Prague in a 14-mile stretch and driving forward on a 35-mile front in this direction.

Tolbukhin's tanks were rolling from the Austrian across Austria the east of Vienna between the Danube and Lake Neusiedl, Berlin already has reported a withdrawal of German armies from the Vienna area.

Marshal Tolbukhin was driving hard toward Czechoslovakia and the Austrian mountain stronghold, but perhaps strongest of all Nazi defensive outposts into Moravia, which with Bohemia forms the arsenal for the crumbling Wehrmacht.

Over the captured area on southern Ottawa the Pacific Ocean's northern coast went into its 156th day, it was in this sector that the Japanese occupied which, invading probably 300 men, was repulsed back.

Attack Advances.

In the north, 3rd Canadian Corps' attack moved ahead under their steady advance on both Holten Rijssenhuis and Jakkhorst where Resistance was reported "sporadic and ineffective."

Admiral Nimitz disclosed that in the 36 days from March 16 to April 21, task forces 38 pilots destroyed 1,377 planes, an average of more than 40 planes daily. Of this number, 941 were destroyed by carrier pilots, 436 on the ground by other pilots and 436 on the ground.

British carrier-borne planes destroyed 16 planes by the German area and one on the ground and damaged five others, bringing their total in the northern Pacific to 64 destroyed and 17 damaged in three days.

Army, Navy and Marine patrol bomber and fighter planes hit ships and targets from the Bonins to the Philippines and east to the by-passed Marshalls.

JAPANESE LOSE OVER 100 PLANES IN SUICIDAL BLOW

Twist of More Than 212 Lost in Two Days, by Enemy at Okinawa

Guam, April 14 — (AP) — The U. S. 20th Army Corps — backed by heavy guns of the battleship and cruiser — seized such a furious pre-dawn Japanese counter-attack on its Okinawa Prefer and Shuri Heights today that at the enemy, it was counted today.

Sustaining the heaviest air assaults on the 7th Fleet screening Okinawa since the start of the campaign, the Japanese lost more than 100 additional planes for a total of more than 212 planes on the two days. Lesser nations off the Ryukyus group in the Okinawa area, by more than 30.

The 24th Army Corps failed to gain ground for the eighth straight day.

Over the contested area on southern Okinawa the Pacific Fleet's heaviest duel went into its 156th day, it was in this sector that the Japanese counter-attack, involving probably 300 men, was beaten back.

NEW PRESIDENT LEAVES PARLEY TO DELEGATION

Will Familiarize Himself With Duties as One of "Big Three"

By JACK BELL

Washington, April 14 — (AP) — President Truman, intensively preparing to take President Roosevelt's place in the Big Three, is leaving United States responsibility for the San Francisco Conference with his delegation.

This turn of affairs developed today as the new president arranged to attend funeral rites for his late commander-in-chief.

Faced with the necessity of familiarizing himself with all the intricate details of European affairs, Mr. Truman has decided not to attend the United Nations meeting.

Over the coming days on southern Okinawa the Pacific Fleet's heaviest duel went into its 156th day, it was in this sector that the Japanese counter-attack, involving probably 300 men, was beaten back.

KING ANNOUNCES JUNE 11 DATE OF FEDERAL ELECTION

Political Parties Swing Into Action as Parliament Will Close On Monday

By FRANK FLAHERTY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Ottawa, April 14 (CP)—Party organizations all across Canada sprang into activity today in preparation for the Dominion general election Monday, June 11, as many formalities remained to bring the life of the 19th parliament of Canada to a close.

The business session completed last night with the passage of interim money bills through both the Commons and the Senate a few hours after Prime Minister Mackenzie King set the federal vote for the same day chosen by Premier George Drew of Ontario for the Ontario general election.

The 18-day pre-election session ended April 6 in a perfunctory manner as if the members suffered an emotional let-down after the accident impact of news of President Roosevelt's death reached the Hill, brief flurry of excitement as Mr. King made his announcement of election.

There were a few last minute suggestions of conciliation about reconstruction policies and plans, particularly as war veterans and other matters and then the House of Commons, 42,000,000-war appropriation bill to provide money for war activity for a five-months period until the end of August, ments.

There was no discussion at all on the interim bill to authorize the expenditure of $1,436,347 civil government activity in the same period from the start of the fiscal year, April 1, to the end of August.

Senate Passes Money Bills.

The Senate, which never interferes with money bills, was waiting and the two measures were put through it and speedily received the royal assent from Governor-General Lord Athlone. The Senate then adjourned until Monday when Royal assent will be given to the formal Dissolution of Parliament by proclamation of Prime minister Mackenzie King.

The session began on March 19 and was confined strictly to two items, the San Francisco United Nations Conference on world organization and the 1945 budget speech. It was divided neatly into two parts, Chinese wall being the Easter recess. Before the House debated and passed the United Nations Conference, participation in the conference and endorsing the purposes and principles of the Dumbarton Oaks proposals which are the basis or discussion at the San Francisco.

Since Easter the House has talked of the United Nations with all discussion taking place on the war appropriation measure.

V-E Day Expected by Proclamation, Fighting May Continue Till Winter

By JAMES M. LONG
Allied Supreme Headquarters, Paris, April 14 (AP)—The German army, still fighting fiercely in the east, no longer has either a coherent front nor, a coherent command in the west. The long-awaited collapse of the German army in the middle is near—but this does not mean that the war will end at that time.

Hostilities still be military fighting on into next winter, but it was generally believed, it would still be regarded as an active phase of the European war.

V-E Day will come, according to the best available opinion here, somewhere between the Allied linkup and the end of subsequent fighting in the front, but Allied policy, the chamation, and not by German surrender.

It is hardly likely that Gen. Eisenhower alone could or would set such a date. That will have to be proclaimed by a joint agreement with Marshal Stalin, and it could hardly come, whatever the success of the clean-up in the west, until the eastern front, too, had collapsed.

There is no disposition here to believe that even spiraling German in two would cause the collapse of Hitler's armies. Military men are fighting fronts as the German command disintegrated into separate pockets of major resistance.

These fronts already are forming. One, perhaps the weaker of two, is shaping up in the north of the great arc backed up against the Baltic and Berlin and trying to hold the northern ports and perhaps Berlin.

The other would be a great arc from Denmark centred upon the national redoubt of Nazism—the Bavarian Alps—and including southern Germany and northern Austria between Munich, Innsbruck and Regensburg.

The arc in the north would probably break into more than one pocket, particularly if the Allies in the west continue their drive toward Hamburg and Lusbeck.

It would seem there would be the Berlin arc to clear but, the northern ports, the flooded Ruhr and Rhineland, the Hollando-perhaps eventually even Denmark and Norway. The furthermost and best naturally guarded of these three—Norway and Denmark—and the southern German redoubt might take months to clear. Hitler's speech, recently held on these past fall and into weather when snows come in the Alpine passes and ice forms on the mountain roads.

Leipzig By-Passed While Other Units Entering Bayreuth

Three of Bradley's Armies 100 Miles From Red Lines

By JAMES M. LONG

Paris, April 14 — (AP) — The U. S. 9th Army fought slowly forward on the outer defences of Berlin today and other Americans to the south besieged Leipzig, nearest Russian lines and plunged deep into the German national redoubt by entering Bayreuth.

Gen. Bradley's armies by-passed Leipzig and tightened the dogs are around the great Saxony city where 1,000,000 German civilians have been reported awaiting the American. The closest troops last were reported four miles away.

The 1st and 9th Armies virtually eliminated the Ruhr pocket, taking 114,000+ prisoners from the 150,000 originally estimated as trapped.

The nearest 9th Army troops last were reported 45 miles from Berlin. Those east of the Elbe were encountering profuse fire from flak batteries guarding the capital and making slow progress on the flat Brandenburg plain.

Three Armies in Drive.

Three of Bradley's armies were less than 100 miles from the Russian lines. The 69th, 3rd Army and 7th, 88 miles of the Berlin, 95 and 96 miles and the 1st—fighting its way south of Leipzig—were reported 85 miles from the Red armies flashed with the conquest of Linz, a victory which also opened the German national redoubt, at its east end.

In Holland, Polish troops under the Canadian 1st Army command had cut their way to within seven miles of the Nazis' Zee, while British troops of Gen. Crerar's 2nd Army were fighting through embattled Arnhem, home by home.

Canadian units advanced against relatively light resistance and cleared their 200-mile front in the Netherlands.

Battle of Pearl.

The Germans fought without a single tank from within a pocket between command. The rear of the Nazis' 25th Army Corps, in the Emden Conference on world organization, which was surrounded by the 2nd Army, was reported to be in full retreat.

Elsewhere in the Netherlands, Brunswick (population 300,000), Jena (80,000) and the Dutch border city of Assen (30,000) fell. With the capture of Brunswick, Lower Saxony fell, Germany had lot half her 58 cities of more than 100,000 population.

Magdeburg (234,364) was ringed by 8th army troops after falling. Dessau, Arnhem (80,000), a gateway to the Berlin fortress defences and Bayreuth.

The are in the north would probably break into more than one pocket, particularly if the Allies in the west continue their drive toward Hamburg and Lusbeck.

It would seem there would be the Berlin arc to clear but, the northern ports, the flooded Ruhr and Rhineland, the Hollando-perhaps eventually even Denmark and Norway. The furthermost and best naturally guarded of these three—Norway and Denmark—and the southern German redoubt might take months to clear. HUNGERFORD FARMER SHOOTS LARGE WOLF

It was a profitable Easter holiday for George Lucas, of Hungerford township when he dowped a large timber wolf and collected $35 bounty for his marksmanship.

Accompanied by his father, George was hunting in the family bush carrying with him a .32 calibre rifle when they sighted the animal. George shot and wounded the wolf and as the animal growled, turned and headed for them he quickly reloaded and shot it in the head.

After pictures were taken the animal was skinned and the pelt delivered to County Treasurer James W. Haggerty who stated it was the largest wolf pelt he had ever seen. The animal measured six feet, three inches in length.

TULIPS IN BLOOM

Colorful parade of flowering things to come, tulips are now in bloom in the flower beds in the city. Nodding pretty heads in the sunshine, they are a feature of carnival.

The warm Spring weather of the last few days has rushed the blooming of the flowers and experts say that the tulip display is one of the earliest in years.

ROBBERS CRACK SAFE AT COBOURG WAREHOUSE

Robbers not only "cracked" the safe in the Browers' Warehouse at Cobourg, but also stole an entire safe in which they found their get-away, Chief Wm. Carey of Cobourg police reported today. The house safe was blown open and some $18. in cash taken.

Completing their robbery at the Brower warehouse the robbers are believed to have stolen a 1940 pickup, second stolen in which they made their escape.

Columbian Squires Hold Enjoyable Easter 'At Home'

Featuring the music of the 612D. Orchestra, the Columbian Squires, Circle 418, held their Easter 'At Home' in the Y.M.C.A. auditorium of St. Michael's Academy on Friday night. For the occasion the hall of the auditorium were decorated with the Legion of the Maple Leaf Squadron in the colors, red, blue and gold. There was a fine floor show and Spring flowers arranged throughout the auditorium.

The affair was formal, and all the girls came in their very best Spring frocks in a display of fashion. Dancing with their escorts to the delightful music of the 612th. band, they presented a charming picture. Novelty dances and games were conducted during the evening, and to the winners were given attractive prizes. A delightful supper and refreshments were served.

Patronesses of the evening were Mrs. Ernest Bell, Mrs. Frank A. Boyle, Mrs. W. J. Doyle and Mrs. T. J. Furney. Responsible for the arrangements was the Dance Committee under the chairmanship of Sydney Hall and George Whelan, assisted by Thomas Hutchinson, Thomas Callaghan, Robert Pfaff, Boyd Upper and Owen Mosher.

Police Blotter

Richard White, local contractor, reported the theft of an extension ladder from his premises yesterday. The ladder was being used on a building project at the West Bridge Street home of Mrs. Beatrice Sharpe, when apparently taken some time Thursday night, Mr. White reported to police.

A boy discharging an air rifle in the Cannifton area, Thursday, caused frightened residents of that area. Police were notified, but before they could report to the scene the lad and his gun had completely disappeared.

Two airmen were apprehended on Front Street, Friday night after acting in an allegedly disorderly manner. They were taken to the police station and after being charged with disorderly conduct released to appear in court next week.

Land of Rum, Limes and Senoritas Is Fine, But Canada's Shorelines Are Boon to Homesick Mariners

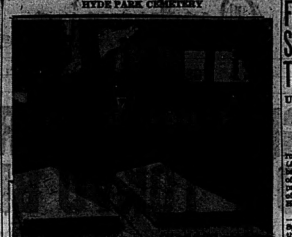
"That little old county of Prince Edward is going to look mighty good to me after seventeen months on the Caribbean," declared Sonny Fox, son of Mrs. Fox of Picton, who is home on leave after spending a year and a half on the southern coast.

Sonny, a member of a South African that rounded several souvenirs collected during their travels, including the bravest including five war years along the submarine-infested Atlantic coast.

The twenty-two year old mariner who has climbed about the seven seas in search of adventure, and seeing it, will spend the next six months loafing around his native habitat in Picton.

Then he'll take off for the salty tang of Atlantic air and resume his job for second enlistment as one of the big Imperial Oil Company ships.

Sonny's travels on the seven seas of the tropics like to get off the ship in a "banana port," he added.



He has seen the phosphorescent tinted Caribbean Sea, and he believes in tropical waters around Curacao. He has visited Curacao and the "whole island thing." He has boasted at Jamaica, Georgetown, Trinidad, Aruba, Port Antonio, Port Rico and at Cuba's Guantanamo Bay. Between these ports of call he has seen many sharks, many transoceanic loads of sugar for the north, and numerous "Senoritas" in Cuba, in Panama's gay atmosphere, and in Jamaica, where the "beautiful coal breakers "somewhere east of Belleau."

Seen Enemy Action.

And he has seen enemy action On one occasion while in convoy a deadly Run torpedo missed the ship he was on by inches and sank a point of fact. Three ships were sunk and several damaged in the action off the Atlantic coast.

He is stood by his ship's guns as a deadly Nazi U-boat crept deep beneath the surface of the sea to the wind, storm and sunshine of the seven oceans.

Now he is home. But near the end of the Navy that Sonny hopes today feeling that characterizes the true Brit will assert itself and bring up with more bid adieu to sunny Prince Edward once, and trolling the seven seas once more in search of that strange something that shines on the face of the sea to the wind, storm and sunshine of the seven oceans.

Garfield Case Heardby Women's Conservative Club

Terming as political cunning the action of Premier Mackenzie King in naming Monday, June 11th, as the date for the Dominion general election, Mr. Garfield Case declared there was a wealth of trouble in store.

Monday afternoon Mr. King announced the Dominion general election date as having been set for June 11th, and that the day had been picked for the Ontario provincial election.

As winner of the North Grey by-election, Mr. Case was guest speaker at the local club why he decided to go into the campaign as a standing mayor for the Progressive Conservative party. He complimented Premier Drew on his "refreshing frank and decent" government to Queen's Park, stating it was a far cry from the administration under Mitchell Hepburn, and criticized the disadvantages of the Dfver policy of 50 per cent school grants.

May Create Confusion.

Naming of June 11th as the date for the Dominion general election was declared by the speaker to be "political cunning" on the part of Mr. King to save his government from a fall. He said that Mr. King is acting in an allegedly disorderly manner. There were riots in the police station and after being charged with disorderly conduct released to appear in court next week.

New Bleachers To Be Erected At Fair Grounds

The proposal design for the Belleville Fair were accepted by the Parks Board at a special meeting held in the Bell Telephone building when a delegation from the Board met with the Parks Board to get the Board for sanction of a proposal to erect new bleachers. The dates of Sept. 10th, 11th, and 12th were raised. Members of the Fair Board present were Fred Palmer, Elmer Sandercock, Harry Smith and Ross Wilson.

C. R. Colling, chairman of the Parks Board, informed the Fair Board delegation that additional bleachers would be added to the present set on the east side of the grandstand. The chairman also suggested that the new bleachers would be reconditioned for immediate use and that a program for new horse barns was seriously being considered.

Committee A. R. Baird reported a fence would be placed around the Victoria Park tennis courts. It would be utilized as a children's play park in the near future. Already swings, slides and other playground equipment for children have been purchased. Commissioner Colling reported that spring work on the parks would be a month ahead of previous years.

Mr. Bracken's Comment.

Ottawa, April 14 (CP) — John Bracken, national leader of the conservative leader, in a statement last night charged political manoeuvring on the part of Prime Minister Mackenzie King in setting June 11 as the date for the Dominion election.

The address went on to say that the Conservative party would be "the mere censure of our enemies is not enough."

"We must go on," he would have said, "to do all in our power to conquer the evil forces of fear, hate and ignorance and the greed, which made the horror of war."

Incidentally he wrote that "my mind is the steadier for the work that I have done, and the decisions I have made in the past."

The address was heralded with children, carrying flags and men holding their hats in salute as the procession appeared all along the route through Georgia and the Carolinas. Thousands stood in the streets in the ways of their little frame homes.

At Charlotte, N.C., thousands jammed the depot and windows. Streets leading to it. Among those present were the singing "Onward Christian Soldier."

The funeral train reached Atlanta at 9 o'clock (EWT) and stopped at a two-foot high stand in the last car. The ceremonial. Groups of the army, navy and marine men pole-vaulted standard guard at its four corners.

Mrs. Roosevelt, whose companions were Mrs. Anna Roosevelt Dall and Mrs. Elliott Roosevelt, daughters of the dead President, was never seen such courage displayed by a woman under similar circumstances.

IN MEMORIAM

GILL—In loving memory of a dear mother, Mrs. Helen M. Gill who died January 1st, 1942.

Her thoughts were all so full of us, She never could forget,

And so we think that where she is, She must be thinking yet.

As angels keep their watch up there,

Please God, just let us know,

That we are not forgotten,

We love and miss her so.

IN LOVING MEMORY of a dear mother who passed away six years ago, April 14th, 1939.

No one knows how much we miss you,

No one knows the bitter pain

We have suffered since we lost you, In that sorrowful April rain.

In our hearts your memory lingers

Sweet and fond and true,

There is not a day, dear mother,

That we do not think of you.

Sadly missed by daughter-in-Law Lonery and family.

Close In On Berlin

There cannot be any Germans left who think that the doom of Germany is not very near for all signs indicate that collapse is not far off. In London opinion was recently expressed that organized resistance will end in five or six weeks at the most and that before the end of May the Allied Command will be able to declare that war in Europe is at an end, though there may be fighting about the pockets of German troops left stranded in the retreat of the German lines and cut off by sweeping movements. In the United States capital the opinion has been expressed that organized resistance in Germany may come to an end in a matter of days.

Berlin is between the two giant pincer arms of the Western Allies and the Russians, only ninety miles separating the East and West offensives on Friday, Berlin being about forty-five miles from the western Allied advance.

One of the amazing facts about the events of the past two weeks is the speed with which Germany is being cut up and traversed by the western Allied spearheads. Never before was a great nation faced with so irresistible and so united an offensive to end a conflict as that which grips Germany. The momentum of the Western Allies has been just what was wanted to complete the disorganization and wrecking of the German will to resist. It is the aim of the Allies to continue the momentum of these thrusts. The whole of Germany is being kept in a fluid state by these United Nations' drives in the magnificent offensive which has been developed.

There is nothing that the Germans can do about it, however great their fanaticism, to prevent Germany's collapse. There is of course the fact that the Germans have been fighting hard in some of the places where they have been left as in Holland, though on the fronts facing the advancing thrusts the Germans have shown far less opposition than was expected.

Investment in the Colonies

In a speech recently made to the American Outpost in London the Secretary of State for the Colonies made a brief review of what he called "certain misconceptions" about the Colonies. Among them he dealt with the charge "that immense profits have been drawn from the Colonies by the private capitalists of this country."

Colonel Stanley did not deny that there have been instances of big profits, but he reminded his audience that there were often big risks and big losses, pointing out that if all the money invested in the Colonies in the last fifty years had been invested in Government securities instead, the return to the investor would have been just about the same.

He added that in these territories where private enterprise has made the greatest profits, the highest standard of social and economical prosperity has been reached by the local inhabitants.

He cited Malaya as an example where the standards of social service were higher than in any other Colonial territory or in many independent countries.

To preserve the policy of development, which is the cornerstone of British Colonial policy, it is obviously necessary to call in the assistance of private investment to supplement the work of the Government, whose prime investment function is to provide communications and other capital works and the institution of economic and social services.

The original inhabitants have neither the capital nor the experience to develop the resources of their country along modern lines; the development of mineral wealth and of modern industries require considerable capital and also an expert knowledge. At the same time, it remains the policy of the Government to improve the standard and quantity of subsistence production, encourage and increase the production of export products by the local populations themselves, and to insure that as they gain in experience they take on an increasing share in industrial and commercial activities.

Introducing the New Colonial Development and Welfare Bill (which provides for £120 million—$480 million—from the British Exchequer to be spent on Colonial Development in the next ten years) Colonel Stanley told the House of Commons that he would welcome private capital to develop the economy and particularly any secondary industries of the Colonies, but warned, "I do not believe . . . that there will be an opening after the war for the 'get-rich-quick' type of private investors, people who are prepared to face losses but in return expect staggering profits."

The private investor in the Colonies can expect a position of equity and fairness, but he must come into the territory as a partner not as a master. In addition, private investment from within the Colony is to be encouraged.

Colonel Stanley suggested as 'an interesting possibility' the establishment of Colonial Governments who would provide the capital and the managerial experience. These companies would assist the local investor and enter into partnership with the outside investor. The idea would be, not to run the industries permanently, but to bridge the gap until enough local capital is coming forward and until the local population becomes 'more investment-minded and more managernially fit' to take up industrial opportunities themselves, and can play an active part as investors and managers in their own economic development.

Grim German Humor

(Christian Science Monitor, Boston)

There is still some humor left in Germany. Consider, for instance, the German prisoner of 52 years who, asked by an American officer what a man of his age was doing in the army, replied: "I'm a member of the Hitler Youth." He was a blood brother of the Volkssturm troopers recently reported by this newspaper as having posted a sign on their fortification reading, "Wir alten Affen sind die Wunderwaffen" (We old monkeys are the wonder weapon.)

But it is not the jolly, carefree wit of the now almost legendary Germany of the days before the World Wars. For some time it has been sardonic, the best jokes being pointed at the Nazi Party leaders, not excluding Der Fuehrer. Now it has a bitter tone—the humor of desperation. If it indicates disillusionment, an understanding of how the German people let themselves be duped, it is a good sign.

Old Law Deals With Lipstick

(Chicago Daily News)

To foster and sustain matrimony, State Senator Brooks of the Tennessee Legislature has introduced a bill to make the use of the lipstick a felony. It seems that the lipstick has a way of leaving prints on men that cause wives to leave home.

If the Senator will search the musty tomes of the law he may find that the use of the lipstick is already banned. As English statutes enacted prior to 1607 are part of the common law of most of the United States, an act of Parliament enacted under King James I declaring it to be a misdemeanor "for any female to entrap any of His Majesty's subjects into matrimony" by the use of paints, false hair, Spanish moss or other devices should take care of the lipstick. The statute provides for fines of 25 pounds by justices of the peace.

Under the "law of Morgentau" 25 pounds is equivalent to $100. Justices of the peace abound in America and our Chicago Municipal Court inherits their jurisdiction.

Low-Geared Jackrabbit

(St. Louis Post-Dispatch)

The Associated Press reports an allegedly surprising fact; a New Mexico packrabbit raced an automobile for three blocks at 15 miles an hour. We fail to be surprised. Even a Missouri jackrabbit could go faster than that. Just across the State line, the Kansas jackrabbits play leap-frog with motorists. The Kansans say that once their jacks got so energetic, kicking about in the dust, that dust storms became a national problem. That's what the Kansans say.

SERVICE

Oh, we shall cash our bond in time
And take the profit, by and by,
But neither dollar nor the dime
Will leave a scar to catch the eye.
But, those who walk with crutch and cane
Will never be quite whole again!

Oh, we'll forget the rationed gas
And every inconvenience borne.
But, in parade they'll sometimes pass,
Dressed in the uniform they've worn,
And 'til this earth the last one leaves,
There'll always be those empty sleeves!

Our service was a trivial thing.
The cost of it we lightly bore.
And we shall laugh and dance and sing,
And dine, much as we did before.
But, near us blind men there will be
Who gave their eyes for liberty!

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS.

20 YEARS AGO

April 14, 1925.

It is estimated that about two inches of snow fell here following the rain and the scene at an early hour in the morning was an ideal winter one, with trees, telephone, telegraph and electric light wires laden with snow. The bright warm sun later in the day soon caused the snow to vanish.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Bowen spent Easter with Mr. and Mrs. George Bowen, Windsor.

Mr. George Aldred, treasurer of the town of Lindsay, is spending a few days here with friends.

Mrs. Charles A. Mott and son, Douglas, are visiting with the former's mother, Mrs. Alex. McLaughlin, Prescott.

Mr. Clarke Diamond is home from the College of Pharmacy, Toronto, on a short visit to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. D. Diamond, Foster Avenue.

30 YEARS AGO

April 14th., 1915.

A number of G.T.R. conductors now living in Brockville, will shortly take up residence here.

Ald. James Duckworth, chairman of market and city property, will receive tenders for the city market tolls for this year.

It does seem good to see Mill Street cleared of dust and mud. The people in that section and others passing over it certainly appreciate the change.

Mr. John Griffin of the Griffin Amusement Company, is in town.

Mr. D. E. K. Stewart, barrister, Madoc, was in town today.

40 YEARS AGO

April 14th., 1905.

Mr. Harry Barragar has accepted a position in Niagara Falls.

Mr. T. A. MacFarlane, Warden of the County, and Mr. H. Denyes, councillor, were in Toronto yesterday attending a meeting of the Good Roads Association.

Mr. Fred J. Thorpe of Copper Cliffe is spending a few days here with friends.

Miss Rous, John Street, has returned home from Toronto where she visited friends.

Mrs. H. O. Hunt and children have left to spend two months with friends in the Old Country.

50 YEARS AGO

April 14th., 1895.

Mrs. A. O. Vermilyea of this city will spend Easter with her sister, Mrs. Yerex, in Picton.

Mr. and Mrs. John H. Shearing, Montreal, are here to spend Easter with relatives.

Mr. Perry Cronk of Prince Edward County, has left with horse and buggy to drive to Owosso, Mich., a distance of 375 miles.

Mr. Stanley Hulme of the Bank of Montreal, Lindsay, is home to spend Easter.

Messrs. John Macoun of the Bank of Commerce, Toronto, and Fred Macoun of the same bank at Walkerton, are here to spend Easter with their father, Mr. James Macoun.

Mr. E. T. Williams of Rawdon was in town today and registered at Hotel Quinte.

Digs Foxhole In Nice Depression That Won't Require Much Digging

By ERNIE PYLE

Okinawa,—(by Navy radio)—During our first afternoon on Okinawa my group of marines went about a mile and a half inland. Our vehicles were not ashore yet, so we had to pack on our backs everything we had.

Personally, I was overladen as usual. I had two canteens, a musette bag, a blanket rolled up in a poncho, three rubber life preservers, a shovel and assorted knives, first aid kits, etc. Furthermore I had on two pairs of pants, was carrying two jackets, and it was hotter than hell.

The result of all this was that for the first time in my life I couldn't keep up. I hated to do it, but I had to sit down now and then to rest and let the others go ahead. (Moral: A lifetime of sin and crime finally catches up with you).

Anyhow, we finally got where we were going. We stopped on a hillside, threw down our gear, connected our phones to wires on the ground, and were ready for business. That is, the others were. Me, I lay down on the grass and rested for an hour.

* *

After that we began getting ready for the night. We figured the Japs would bomb us all night, that their artillery would soon start up from the hills, and that when it got dark, some slinky infiltrators would start infiltration.

So we dug foxholes. The slope was so steep I chose a nice depression at the foot of a small embankment that didn't require much digging.

Now we come to the life preservers. You may have wondered why I was carrying three lifebelts on dry land. Well, I knew what I was doing all right.

I just blew up my three life preservers, spread them in the foxhole and I had the nicest improvised Simmons you ever saw. We finally got onto that trick after a few invasions in Europe and I slept all last summer in France comfortably on three blown-up preservers.

And it was worth the struggle of carrying them just to see the reaction of the marines. They would come up to look at this strange device and stand there, staring, and then say:

"Well, I'll be damned. Why in the hell couldn't I have thought of that."

Then we got out our K rations and my friend, Maj. Reed Taylor came and squatted Indian-fashion while I made hot coffee for us with some new heat tablets the marines had issued. By the time we finished it was almost dark.

Everybody who wasn't on guard at the edge of our little camp, or who wasn't standing duty at the field telephones went to bed, for in Jap country you don't move around at night unless you have to.

Going to bed was merely a figure of speech for everybody except me. I seemed to be the only one who had brought a blanket and I definitely was the only one who had nice soft life preservers to sleep on.

The others slept on the ground in their foxholes with their ponchos wrapped around them. A poncho is wind and waterproof, but it has no warmth. In fact, it seems to draw all the warmth out of your body and transmit it into the air.

The day had been hot, but the night got mighty cold. And a very heavy dew came gradually, soaking everything. All the others practically froze and got very little sleep. But for once in my life, I was warm as a bug.

But I didn't sleep too much. There's always a flaw somewhere. My flaw was the mosquitoes. I've never been so tortured by mosquitoes, as that first night on Okinawa.

They were persistent. They were tenacious. And they were the noisiest mosquitoes I've ever associated with. They were so noisy that when I pulled the blanket over the side of my face and covered my ears tight I could still hear them. That's really true.

I doused my face twice with the mosquito repellant which the marines had issued, but it did no good whatever. It was 11 o'clock before I finally got asleep. At 2 a.m. I awakened and knew something was wrong. What was wrong was my face.

My upper lip was swollen so that I thought I had a pigeon egg under it. My nose was so swollen the skin was stretched tight over it. And my left eye was nearly shut.

After that I just went under the blanket and decided to suffocate. That way I did sleep, but the next morning I was groggy and dopey from sleeping so long without air.

Those mosquitoes really put a scare into me. For they say Okinawa is malarial and I certainly got enough mosquito venom that night to malarize half of California. So bright and early, I started taking atabrine for the first time in my life.

Capital Closeups

By JACK BRAYLEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, April 14 —(CP)— Under the big ornate arches of the Peace Tower a familiar face broke into a famous smile two years ago as Speaker J. A. Glen welcomed President Roosevelt affectionately to the Canadian Parliament as "Our President."

At the time Mr. Speaker said he knew his use of the possessive would not be misunderstood at home or abroad. The other night a sombre Chamber listened to moving tributes that were addressed in a personal view.

Members blew their noses, Prime Minister Mackenzie King kept adjusting his glasses and crowded galleries sat in hushed silence. The galleries had filled as word of President Roosevelt's death spread through the capital and the night session gave the man on the street an opportunity to take part in a public demonstration of sympathy.

The death was a great shock and long after the dignified Speaker's procession left the floors of the House, members gathered in little knots discussing the death of the great Democrat.

Leaders of opposition parties and members of the Cabinet gathered in a big cluster around the Prime Minister's bench and he could be seen discussing in sober tones the President's death. Later members of the group said Mr. King, who had felt the death very keenly, had related how seemingly well the President had been when he visited Washington a month ago.

When the members finally left the floor of the House one of them put it this way:

"He was the best President Canada ever had."

Parliamentary Pay: Members are paid on the basis of $4,000 for a session which they attend longer than 65 days. For anything less, such as the present gathering, they receive indemnity at the rate of $25 daily.

Jean Francois Pouliot, Independent Liberal from Temiscouata constituency in Quebec, made a plea that the English method be adopted and that the members be paid their sessional indemnity in advance. He pointed out the benefits of the small British Commons Chamber which he said has seats for only half the members. Hence, the British members were not found to attend in order to collect their indemnity.

"I wonder if the same thing is practicable here?" Mr. Pouliot asked.

Sailorines: The youthful and fast-growing Canadian Navy has established many precedents in this war and the operation of a couple of cruisers with "Sailorines" has brought no protest from the sticklers for form.

Navy Minister Macdonald decided that it would be impracticable to establish a Royal Canadian Marine Corps just to train and provide a company of 75 Marines each for the cruisers Uganda and Ontario.

But there were jobs that had to be filled. And rather than ask the hard-pressed Royal Marines to furnish a couple of companies, it was decided to have the job done by sailors—called facetiously by their mates "Sailorines."

On British ships the Marines are carried on ships from the size of a cruiser up. Their duties consist of manning one of the guns, making up the ship's band, standing sentry duty, leading shore landing parties and acting as officers' servants. The Marines were created centuries ago as sea-going soldiers, but many years later the Navy made them "work their passage."

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

HOW TO SAVE A THOUSAND DOLLARS

For a year or more I have been distributing as widely as possible, to dentists who are courteous enough to ask for it, the No. 1 Little Lesson in the Ways of Health, titled "Save Your Teeth." This is the newly revised edition. Dentists who ask for it on their professional stationery or with professional card and a stamped self addressed envelope will receive it with my compliments. Other readers must inclose twenty-five cents with stamped self addressed envelope with their request.

I hoped that by putting the booklet into the hands of a good many dentists throughout the United States and Canada I might get some sort of assay of professional opinion or at least an expression of present attitude of practicing dentists in regard to preservation of the teeth. Dentists have been so readily articulate in regard to my animadversions on the trade use of the title "Doctor," that I anticipated a lively and instructive response, indeed I begged many dentists to whom I sent the booklet to handle me without gloves, to tell me just between friends where I was wrong, to criticize anything I say in the booklet, in the same confidential way my own dentist does when he finds me going wrong.

The impressive, almost unanimous silence with which these dentists have received the booklet was at first disappointing, and then as it continued unbroken it became perplexing. Were the dentists all so irked by my carryings-on that they would not deign to have further truck with me? After all, I do manage to maintain a speaking acquaintanceship with several dentists and exchange the customary polite mutterings with them when we meet on the bowling green, yet withal—

From now on, be it known, dentists are just people. If a dentist should by any chance feel any curiosity about it, he may have a copy of the booklet "Save Your Teeth" on the same terms as those mentioned for other readers.

In closing this chapter I am delighted to report that at last I have received from a dentist a frank and detailed criticism of the teachings in the booklet and some of the teachings concerning preservation of the teeth that I have stressed in this column. I shall pass along to our readers some of the practical suggestions this dentist gives, in talks to follow. Unlike some letters I have received from dentists, there is nothing in this one that my own dentist would hesitate to say, I am sure. Not a hint that the dentist's nose is turned up while he insinuates that I must be a filthy person. Instead, this letter is full of sound observations based on solid scientific knowledge. It practically cancels that ominous silence bestowed upon me by the other dentists.

Long Time No Eat

What harm if any is done by letting five hours elapse between meals when one is working hard—fast walking and climbing stairs.

(C. S.)

Answer — None. However, if you feel unduly tired or let down a glass of milk, or some fruit, or peanuts or a hunk of ice cream or a piece of candy between meals is refreshing.

Shortening

One book says vegetable shortening is easily digested. Another book says it is harder to digest than any animal fat.

(Mrs. E. M. C.)

Answer — I believe there is no difference in digestibility or nutritive value.

'Soldier' Vote To Be Taken in Ontario Election

Toronto, April 14 — (CP)—Assurance of a vote in the forthcoming provincial election for Ontario's service personnel, estimated at somewhere approximately 300,000 or more than 10 per cent of the total electorate, is the aim of regulations passed by the government Thursday.

The procedure for taking the soldier forces vote both in Canada and overseas is patterned on provisions of the Dominion election act and will be carried out by military representatives under direction of government-appointed officials.

Following an act passed at the last session of the Legislature, the regulations provide a direct ballot for all active service personnel and a 'proxy vote for prisoners of war, replacing the much-criticized proxy system formerly used in taking the "soldier" vote in the 1942 election.

To allow ample time to bring the names of candidates before the service electorate, polling day is set 35 days before election day, June 21. The official period remains at seven days in toto. Members of the forces will cast their ballots in a six-day period from June 8 to June 11.

All constituencies must be sent to the chief election officer by May 14, who will in turn send them to returning officers overseas.

Announcing the arrangements, Premier Drew said they permit 32 days to bring candidates officially into the field, or seven days more than the period elapsed in recent Ontario elections between the fixing of the election date and nomination day.

Veterans Send Condolences to Mrs. Roosevelt

A message of condolence and sympathy was dispatched today to Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt expressing the feelings of profound regret in her great bereavement in the death of President F. D. Roosevelt. The message was sent to her by the Army and Navy Veterans in Canada, Unit 201, during their monthly meeting at Memorial Hall this evening.

President James H. Lazenby brought to the attention of the meeting the fact President Roosevelt had died, adding it was a regrettable incident coming just when the rays of victory were breaking through. The Army and Navy Veterans then voted unanimously to send the following message to Mrs. Roosevelt at Hyde Park, New York. The message read:

"The officers and members of the Army and Navy Veterans in Canada, unit 201, Belleville, Ontario, extend to you their heartfelt sympathy and condolence in your sad bereavement. May Divine guidance sustain you and encourage you to further ideals in your great sorrow," signed—J. H. Lazenby, President."

Vimy Night Held.

The business of last night's monthly meeting was kept to a minimum as it was designated as "Vimy Night." The names of 35 new members were submitted and favorably voted upon, all being returned men from the present war. Following other unit business a social evening was spent.

Mr. Harold Barrett acted as song leader for community singing and also added two solos. Bill Marlin and Jim Conrad alternated at the piano with musical selections, while Frank High added amusement with several spicy readings. J. L. Campbell, a black-face comedian, rendered out a fine program with several readings and monologues.

Tornado-Dead In Oklahoma, 74, Many Homeless

Oklahoma City, April 14 (AP) — Oklahoma counted its tornado-dead at 74 and the homeless in hundreds Friday after twisters, boomed ereatly over the state to spread destruction in a dozen cities and rural communities.

The storms swept on into Arkansas, killing three, and two persons were reported missing in a storm at Merrierille, Mo.

Most seriously hit in Oklahoma by yesterday afternoon's storms were Antlers with 30 dead, Muskogee with 14 and Hulbert and Oklahoma City with three each.

There were no accurate estimates of injured and damage in the state but hundreds of persons were in hospital and whole sections of cities were swept away by the windy fury.

Red Cross Chairman Paul Ocborn at Antlers said one-third of the city of 3,000 was demolished when wind caught up 500 or 600 residences. Army posts and Red Cross chapters were sending all available personnel into the area.

At Muskogee rain twister struck through the eastern outskirts, seriously damaging every building of the Oklahoma School for the Blind, many of whose inmates were taken to hospital. A large part of the city was without electric power for several hours when the main power plant in the Arkansas river were blown down.

48 Are Missing After Collision

New Bedford, Mass., April 14 — (AP) — Forty eight men were missing, two were known dead and 37 others were injured in a collision between an American cargo vessel and a Canadian tanker off Woods Hole Thursday.

The dead and injured were brought into this port, but later were taken to St. Luke's hospital.

The crash occurred during a heavy fog. Official sources indicated that both vessels remained afloat after the crash.

Some of the survivors were picked up by a freighter and were later transferred to coast guard vessels. The skippers of both ships were believed lost.

Most of the rescued were from the American ship. Fire broke out on both craft after the crash and the burning of the ropes prevented lowering of most of liferafts on the American vessel.

THOMPSON

King George VI Sends Message Voicing Sorrow

London, April 14 (CP) — King George expressed grief and shock over the death of President Roosevelt in his message to Mrs. Roosevelt.

"The Queen and I are deeply grieved and shocked by the news of President Roosevelt's death," he wrote. His loss, coming so suddenly, is a great injury and we have lost a true and devoted friend.

"On behalf of all my people I send our most sincere sympathy to you and to the members of your family."

The King today sent another telegram of sympathy to President Harry Truman, stating: "It is with the most profound regret that I have received the news of the death of President Roosevelt and hasten to convey to you, Mr. President, my deepest sympathy in this great loss which has befallen the government and people of the United States of America.

"This regret will be shared by all my peoples, who have long since felt that your friend, President Roosevelt, wife and understanding leadership the problems of war and of the peace that is to follow were in the hands of one who had proved himself in so short a matter to be at heart the welfare of mankind.

"It is especially grievous that at this moment when the forces of the United Nations are bringing to a close evil which has for so long overshadowed the continent of Europe, the leadership of your great President Roosevelt should be taken from us.

"But his knowledge, wise counsel and decision will for ever be remembered, and the people of the United States may rest assured that his name will find a lasting place in the hearts of all my peoples."

Premier Stalin Expresses Sorrow In Great Loss

By EDDY GILMORE

Moscow, April 13 — (AP)—Premier Marshal Stalin let the Russian people know today of President Roosevelt's death by ordering a special general salute at the death of Franklin D. Roosevelt and his personal plain that Russia desired continued Russian-American collaboration along the lines laid down by the late president.

All Russia mourned at the loss of a man regarded here as having been the Soviet Union's greatest friend in the United States.

The Soviet press printed two solemn photographs of Mr. Roosevelt, bordered in black, on the front pages, along with Premier Stalin's condolences to Mrs. Roosevelt and his personal note to President Truman.

A Great Organizer of Nations

Stalin, in his message to Mrs. Roosevelt, called the president "a great organizer of the greatest of the freedom-loving nations against the common enemy."

The note as broadcast by the Moscow radio, said the Soviet people highly honored President Roosevelt as a great organizer of the struggles of freedom-loving peoples against the common enemy and as the leader in the cause of ensuring the security of the whole world.

Stalin also sent a separate note to Premier Churchill.

"On behalf of the Soviet government and myself personally," the message said, "I express my profound condolence to the government of the United States of America on the occasion of the premature death of President Roosevelt.

"The American people and the United Nations have lost in Franklin Roosevelt a great politician of world significance and a pioneer in the organization of peace and security after the war.

"The government of the Soviet Union expresses sincere sympathy to the American people in their great loss and their conviction that the policy of friendship between the great powers who are shouldering the main burden of war against the common enemy will continue in the future."

Chaplin Denies Paternity on Stand

Los Angeles, April 14 — (AP) — Charles Chaplin from the witness stand Friday reiterated his denial that he is the father of Carol Ann Berry, 18-months-old daughter of Joan Berry, his former screen protege.

The white-haired actor declared he refused Joan's demands for $150,000 although "I knew 96 per cent of the press was against me and had been ever since I dared to demand a divorce from the wench of Russia. That was a mistake I made."

He was testifying in the second trial of Joan's paternity suit against him. He said she had demanded $75,000 each for the baby and for her mother and nothing for herself.

"I told her I was not the father of the child," said Mr. Chaplin, "and said, 'you know I have had nothing to do with you for over a year.' She told me then, 'All the papers are against you and will blast you out of the country.'"

Huns in Soviet Camps Are Learning Much

The Russians have a powerful ally in Hitler, who, as the commander of the first provisional government of Germany, or of the Russian occupation zone, has, of necessity, to could be used as a weapon in behalf of Moscow's plans for the future Germany, Ella Winter tells in Collier's.

This weapon is the Germans captured in the war and re-educated in Russian camps in Russia. They are organized in the "Free German Committee and the Union of German Officers, and they have already been successful in some measure to demoralize the Wehrmacht and break the Nazi will to fight.

No Ban on Activity.

The Russians were able to do this because they are not signatories to the Geneva convention, which has been interpreted as forbidding political work among prisoners. They are also able to do it because they recognize this war as a war of ideas and systems as well as a struggle between nations, and because they feel that anti-Nazi Germans sometimes may be almost as good anti-Hitler agents as Allied soldiers and tanks.

Thus, the prisoners every investigated to find out if they had anti-Nazi sentiments. People went into the camps, usually Germans who interviewed captives, and in long, exhaustive, personal talks decided which might make trustworthy material and which not.

Prisoners who wished to make propaganda for the overthrow of Hitler were given the means to do so. They could broadcast, write leaflets, talk to German troops by microphone from the Russian front lines, go on secret missions inside Germany, issue appeals, and educate in the prison camps themselves.

Began at Bottom.

The propaganda in the camps was intensive and it improved as the war went on. At first talks were mainly military and political analyses, explaining Nazi defeats. For the most part, in the earlier days, these left the prisoners cold — if they could be any colder than the Russian winter left them. As if fearful of being converted by these products of Hitler kultur, the Nazis put on their warmest clothes and dulled their minds until one despaired of any cure within this generation. Nevertheless, the Russians persisted.

Effect of Music.

There was, for instance, a prison camp of some thousand young German officers captured at Stalingrad. The usual technique of lectures and discussions did not seem to give the slightest effect on these boys. Then a clever German anti-Nazi, who was working with the Russians, suggested that sentiment might be allowed to enter. The German officers were invited to a musical evening. In the course of which many of the tender romantic lieder of Schubert and Wagner, Brahms and Hugo, a prisoner with a fine bass voice, Major Ernst Hadrich, anxiously at first, then with more assurance as the well-known Lorelei songs had their emotional effect, began to sing to a question concerning their authorship, he dropped his little bombshell among those young amateurs who had been trained to think of members of a certain race only as the objects for torture, gas chambers and funeral pyres.

Learn Author Jewish.

"Who wrote the words of that song—'The Two Grenadiers'?" my friend was asked, and a sudden silence of the thrill or fourth enthusiasm fell over them. "Oh, that," he replied, "was written by one of your own countrymen, Heinrich Heine. In your songbooks he's referred to as 'Unknown.' That's because he was a Jew."

There was a moment of shocked silence. Then one could hear some the stiffening of many super-race backbones. "Are you sure?" asked After the meeting a number came to my friend to express disbelief; then to ask for proof, proof which they had been afraid to ask of anyone in themselves. The seed had been planted; the horrors of Stalingrad had proved fertile.

In my friend's own words, "From that night on, the process of dissection of some was very quickly—if the man had any sort of native intelligence or honesty.

Filling Hugo Vacuum.

"We gave them books, pamphlets; they asked for them. It was as though we were filling a huge vacuum. They rejected novels; their need was for documentation; they devoured books on economics, history, sociology, philosophy. They held study circles, seminars. We have lost everything that formed a basis of living, they would say. 'We're like ship-wrecked sailors, you have given us something to cling to'."

The most effective turnout in mass earlier days was Count Heinrich von Einsiedel, great-grandson of Bismarck, Reichsgraf and Hitler in the 12th squadron, who was shot down over Stalingrad. Von Einsiedel started classes among his fellow prisoners almost immediate-

WEDDINGS

McLELLAN—THOMPSON

Westdale United Church, Hamilton, arranged with Kingsville, asparagus and ferns, was the setting for a very charming wedding on Saturday, April 7, at four o'clock, when the Rev. W. Williams united in marriage Helen Jean Thompson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Thompson, Bellville, to Pte. John E. McLellan, R.C.A.F., Charlottetown, P.E.I., son of late Mr. and Mrs. F. McLellan, North Bay.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was particularly lovely in a grey wool gabardine suit complemented with black accessories and corsage of red roses. She was wearing a fetching black velvet hat in gold and surrounded by seed pearls.

Mrs. William Pigden, as her sister's matron of honor, wore a brown wool gabardine suit, harmonizing accessories and corsage of

BEAUTY

Fads Are Just a Passing Show.

Daughter strayed into the gay spring sunshine on the lily veneer, the wax lustre on the lily petal, all sweet and cool. Her father looked at her, then, with grave trouble. Then he said his say, to the effect that he is just an old fashioned guy, hates face paint, thinks it makes a girl look like an actress. Daughter smiled, gave the dear old dodo a kiss, and sat down to await her Prince Charming.

When daughter had departed, mama thought it was time for a say-so.

"It's no good protesting, she explained, "it is an accepted custom that, when a girl reaches high school, that is entitled to the privileges of the bobbin, thought she might like it. Myself, I don't like it, but like it. After all, it is a matter of great importance and I thought you, as your daughter's confidant, might take kindly to criticism. Her lipstick means as much to her as shaving is just as silly. Why light a fire under your nose? She wouldn't think of asking you to stop doing that. You are making an issue over a trifle."

"Painted!" growled the pape. "That I should ever see a child of mine painted! And you, too for that matter!"

"Well," said the mama, "you don't suppose I'm going to let the parade march without me do you? I was born in

Father, listening with a smile, as grandmas do, thought how much more sensible girls are now, than they were in the young days. There was the eighteen-inch waist, for idea. If Grandma had only known. There was the era of demountable hair, when a woman with an abundant growth of her own wore a "rat" a switch, and got away with it. Or that enough "puffs" to fill a biscuit tin.

HYDRO RURAL WARTIME EXTENSIONS

With labor and metals drained by war, an unavoidable limit is placed on the number of new rural Hydro services that can be installed in 1945. Nevertheless, your Hydro is extending essential rural services to the absolute limit of labor and materials available.

About 8000 applications, made and approved during 1944, still await service, and many have since been added. These will be connected as soon as possible. It will take all the man-power, materials and effort that Hydro can command to bring service to these applicants in 1945. Those requesting service along existing power lines may, in some cases, be connected before prior applicants who require lengthy extensions. We regret that many approved applications may not be completed before 1946.

In 1944 your Hydro constructed about 400 miles of new rural lines, and added 9776 new customers.

With some 1200 Hydro employees in the armed services or on loan to the government for technical work, along with the shortage of many materials critical to war needs, your Hydro has done and is doing everything possible to extend electricity to essential services. If your turn seems slow in coming, please consider the wartime conditions under which your Commission labors, and be assured that it is doing everything possible to serve you with the utmost speed.

Dear Miss Fairfax—

"Prior to entering the service, my fiancee and I became engaged but decided not to marry until after the war.

"At the time I realized the pledge to wait was for the best interest of us both, considering the uncertainty of my return. Now that I am a returned combat man, fortunate to be among the first three grades which put him in financial advantages and like privilege of living on the Post. I believe it's high time the agreement not to marry til after the war, should terminate. But she still holds fast to the promise we made before I went overseas.

"I've used every argument possible to persuade her to marry me but she has her own ideas. She declines to leave her family and is determined to have a big and splendid gift, fine and loyal. And while I'm willing to meet her in spirits and morale by her consistent letters. But, the fact is, I still may need us a separation. I can see no reason for the waiting. I can feel my manhood slipping by these arguments pro and con go of woman for your wife.

"Discouraged".

I wish that girl of yours could see some of the letters which have come to this column through the years. Many girls, considered engaged and old bachelors who have decided too long over this matter of marriage. Some of the time was favorable, or putting it off was unfavorable for one or both. Sometimes people are ready to love. I can't see that together with delays.

Not long ago I got a letter from a girl who didn't want to leave her child while she went to meet her soldier-fiance and tired of waiting for him to come to her, and married someone else. She was heartbroken and disappointed in all of "Greatest" kind of procrastination.

You tell me you fear your love may not survive the test. I hope you and your girl argue the question out together. A good deal of misunderstanding brought a shiftiness of purpose. Perhaps you have been away from each other a number of years, and have changed somewhat. And they, of course, have changed. Each of you should go through some readjustment about everything. Then you will know whether you are ready to marry or not.

Perhaps you have been too much absorbed in your own affairs to realize that you have been away from each other a number of years, and have changed somewhat. And they, of course, have changed. GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Thank-You Notes Are Always Welcome

Dear Mrs. Beeckman—

Your column is a daily reading habit of mine, and now I am coming to you with two of my problems.

1.—Yesterday I gave a birthday party for my two-year-old child, and I thought it was proper for me to write thank-you notes for her birthday gifts. But a friend of mine, who is usually well-informed on such matters, tells me that it wouldn't be good taste at all. Is she, or am I, right about this?

2.—My other problem is: How should one properly answer a home telephone? Here in my own home, it seems terribly stiff to say "Thompson residence", but then it is awkward at times when the one calling says "Who is this?"

M. T.

1.—You are right. Your taste is good taste, and you should tell how its guidance. Any mother who has a real sense of appreciation . . . and your letter reveals you have this . . . writes a thank-you note for every child who has brought a gift to the birthday party of her child, that is of a child too young to write his or her own notes. Children usually spend a good deal of time on the thoughtful planning about "what present to give", and although the birthday child says "thank you" when the gift is presented, the young givers are enchanted to receive supplementary thanks from the mother, gracious words once about how delightful the gift is, how happy it made the birthday child, and "how very nice it was to have you come to the party". Children, like grown-ups, are pleased and proud with appreciation and graceful bows of appreciation.

2.—For all social purposes, I think that "hello" is the most satisfactory telephone greeting. This impersonal little word is always correct to use. Then, you answer your home telephone, and, of course by the way you say it, you can turn on the impersonality into a cordial voice-expression of "I'm delighted you called me".

Some people answer a home telephone by giving the number; but this identification seems to me

Stripes are important in Spring fashions and striped frocks tell as fantasy they are shown, say the stores. Black taffeta with a thin white stripe is used for a pretty frock, the stripe is used vertically on the bodice made with collarless deep V neckline and full peplum.

So what, who cares if it's raining? Not when rain logs are so pretty, so colorful. Printed satin with a very lustrous surface is used for a pretty rain cape in sunlight beige or black with three big buttle buttons, high-placed peaked revers.

It isn't easy to resist the lure of another new hat. Very alluring is a diminutive affair in violet felt banded with fuchsia velvet at the crown and ending in a bow trimmed with cockade of matching ribbon.

What effect have your clothes on your personality?

Does your preference how a man dresses in making him liked or disliked, as "smart" or "well dressed," writes a well-known psychologist, Dr. E. A. Weigam.

What a break for the men! But E. A. Weiss, writing in the April issue of Personality Digest, in an article entitled "Clothes Make the Man" opines that the sex revolution "now in full swing" is proving that he was not attentive to what men put on. "Gone are the days of the gaudy waistcoat, the peacock hie, the fussy cravat. Gone are the differences between the fashion plate and the conservative clothes make in a man's life and his personality — especially."

You know perfectly well that the way a young woman who went out to buy a revolver and kill herself, but had to pass over the millinery department in order to get there, hardly even noticed, saw a stunning hat, tried it on, bought it—and decided to go on living.

As for a man—when he wants to find a job, put over a deal, and wants to look bright, snappy and efficient—he puts on his old clothes! No— he puts on his best, and looks his silliest. And the tiered girl that he is in evening clothes with white tie and tails; last you are not asked with that sudden mad impulse to kiss him confract!

Young Ideas FOR YOUR HOME

Now that Spring is in your opals, why not express it in your home? Fresh color and subtle swooping lines —new loveliness and light—add up to livability to rival the green sweep of the out-of-doors. We've captured the golden gleam of Springtime sun and the fresh color of Spring blossoms —we've added to it all the promise of a new season—to bring new surroundings to all who find real pleasure in a home that breathes loveliness and distinction. Our ideas are for the young and the young in heart—for all who welcome the new, in seasons and in homes.

THE CANADIAN HOME IS WORTH PLANNING FOR AND FIGHTING FOR

A nation which has lived through more than five years of war, turns its thoughts to the home this spring, with true appreciation of all that the word means. The centre of family life has more meaning than ever, now that millions of the finest young men and women have contributed many of their finest months to the fight for its survival. Canada will not permit Johnny to come marching home to a home environment which has gone to seed.

The stores of this community are showing new home goods this spring which differ from pre-war furnishings only in the variety of patterns; insofar as furniture is concerned. Manufacturers have been restricted to one-tenth of the number of patterns they made before the war, and hence, have concentrated on the best selling numbers which they can produce most efficiently and economically. This has proved to be an advantage because it has brought to the homes of the nation more goods than would have been possible had the effort been scattered over a wide variety of designs.

The styles being shown this spring are about equally divided between Modern design and Eighteenth Century reproductions, with Early American furniture a strong third. Contemporary styling is expected to resume its dominant position in post-war days, since its particular appeal is for the generation which is now at the fighting fronts. Traditional styles have their steadfast followers, and the preference for each type is largely a matter of individual taste.

IMAGINE THIS ROOM WITHOUT TABLES! A few tables make all the difference in the world in the appearance of a room, and take it out of the "ordinary" class. Slip-covers such as that used on the sofa are very much in demand.

The greatest following among persons is among those in the thirty-five years of age and older.

Demand for home furnishings is expected to be strong over the next decade for the following reasons: (1) Many of the war marriages resulted in homes furnished partially. Many war brides will furnish their homes complete with their soldier husbands receive their severance pay and get jobs. (2) Home building, at a virtual standstill since 1929 is bound to boom due to the need for new quarters. (3) The replacement market will continue important because a certain amount of homes are burned out annually, and most families replace or add to their furnishings each year.

"Ransack" the Attic

Look over attic accumulations for ideas. With ingenuity, simple carpentry, and paint, no piece is impossible to reclaim and recondition.

The painting preparatory to decorating, is easy if manufacturers' directions are followed with care.

In decorating follow the example of European peasants, who, though amateur artists nor trained craftsmen, create beautiful free-hand designs. They make no attempt to be exact and in the very inexactness of their painting lies charm.

"It is all important to approach painting with a light heart and in merry mood. You don't have to be an artist to paint, but you do need imagination, humor, and a blithe spirit".

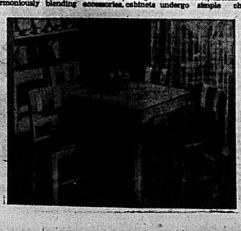
WIDE CHOICE AVAILABLE

There are many patterns and styles to choose from in drapes and bedspreads, including stripes, plaids, modern and Colonial motifs. There's no special formula for "spreads" or "drapes", but it's wise to choose simple, quiet designs that won't conflict with the various and sundry periods of furniture you're apt to discover in your new-found home.

Whoever said the day of the pioneer woman is over? She's still very much with us, and her home is where and what she makes it!

COLOR WILL PLAY AN IMPORTANT ROLE IN THE 1945 HOME

Gay, bright colors will be dominant in 1945 and thereafter through out the homes of Canada.



This becomes evident when a tour of local furniture and department stores is undertaken. Colorful fabrics stand out on upholstered furniture, in draperies, bedspreads and floor coverings. Bright tones are used in breakfast and dinette sets. The pictures which have the greatest appeal are in the gayest of colors.

Headboard beds—consisting merely of a footspring on legs or in a frame and a mattress with a headboard attached—are becoming increasingly popular with Canadian homemakers. Once scarcely a decorator's item, these beds can now be found in every leading furniture or department store in the country and are prized to fit the average budget.

The headboards may be slip-covered or upholstered to match bedspreads, draperies and dressing table skirts. This gives the home maker unlimited opportunities to give her bedroom color, charm and individuality.

Blending Accessories Add to Room Warmth and Light

Young wives on the wing report that one of the best ways to make a room look as though it were really a home is by the simple addition of gay drapes and bedspreads. Whether your nest is a sitting-room or an honest-to-goodness bedroom, you can find colorful woven spreads and drapes that are wrinkle-proof, washable, rugged and right for this "temporary residence" set up. The colors are tasteful, classic shades that are at once cheery and sensible and decorators tell us there's no better way to give a room warmth and light than creating a sunny effect within by means of harmoniously blending accessories.

Guard Those Woollens

Spring is here and it's time to pack winter woollens away for the summer. Choice woollens are hard to replace these days, so it is of utmost importance to store them safely. If you have a cedar chest, you have nothing to worry about. The rich aroma present in red cedar wood spells death for little moth larvae. Chemists explain that this aroma paralyses them so that they can do no damage and they finally die of starvation. Before packing your woollens in the chest, it is advisable to have them washed, cleaned or give them a good sunning in the fresh air. This will eliminate larvae which might be lurking in seams or folds of the articles. Then place in your cedar chest immediately and you won't have to give them another thought until cold weather returns. When shopping for a cedar chest, make sure that the one you select has a basic construction of 3-4-inch aromatic red cedar. This is necessary for safe protection against moths, Any chest that has the appearance of cedar, but is not of this composition, it cannot properly be called a real cedar chest. The stunning three-drawer cedar chests available in styles to match any furniture, for example, might be an attractive addition to your bedroom.

Be Unconventional About Planning Transformed Furniture

Now, for the first time, the artist tells in practical detail how he paints his furniture and brica-a-brac found today in the second-hand shops and homes. His procedures are carefully adapted so that everyone can participate in this constructive, recreational pursuit.

The characteristic enamel pastel shades—blossoms of flower and heart, ribbons, scrolls, feather edges, motives and other ornamental embellishments are also brought within the reach of everyone's ability. A little wisdom to gain freehand confidence and "your success is assured if you go at your painting with your sense of humor developed as fully as your brush!"

Be unconventional about your transformed furniture, letting your determination be your guide. For instance, if you lack space for linen and silver, don't hesitate to use an old marble-top sideboard just because it was once in a bedroom, or to convert an ugly oak dining room buffet into a kitchen cabinet if kitchen storage is what you need. For the latter, the mirror is removed, legs sawed off, and the second drawer inverted so that, pulled out, it makes a serving table. The piece is finished with white enamel, using chintz-red for the top, bottom drawer front, and knobs.

Personality Pick-ups for Every Home Include Ideas for Parlor, Bedroom, Bath

The old song "There's No Place Like Home" might have been written especially for this spring of family reunions. Busier furloughs and home-comings for servicemen, many of whom haven't seen the family circle for many weary years. And even if he hasn't been away, chances are he's the more aware of his good fortune in having a home to enjoy after the long day's work is done.

Canny home-makers who are busy stretching the budget for war bonds, have an eye on the colorful pickups that make every house more colorful, charming and livable. They've learned the secret of seeking out the all-important little things that can make such a big difference to any home.

For Bedroom or Den.

A new spread and matching drapes can work wonders for his own favorite lair—study, den or studio room Stores from coast to coast have an exciting array of smart, inexpensive homespun sets in typical Canadian colors to give any man a cheery welcome to his old haunts. Classic in design, they're in good taste for rooms of any period.

Colorful pillows are another short cut to a good-looking setting for your conquering hero—whether he's been wrestling with combat conditions, or just seeing it through on the home-front. You'll find whole departments devoted to the pillow situation, and a wide choice of colors and fabrics and shapes to choose from.

Bathroom—Is His Likes It.

Remember the bathroom — he's certain to! Of all the rooms in the house, it's taken as a matter significance, especially if he's been in service. Any shower curtains and the colorful bathmat will set the scene for spring along with a roomy, good-looking hamper into which he can toss his laundry. And be on the look-out for those handy shelves that will hold his shaving equipment and toilet articles so for that-read-by good mirror and bright light above it he's been hankering for.

It's the old story with a new twist —your home is what you make it, not how much you spend, but how wisely you shop!

Outdated Furniture Transformed into Gay, New Pieces

How Mr. and Mrs. Average Homemaker can easily transform "ugly duckling" furniture into new beauty and usefulness has been worked out.

Old picture frames turn into coffee tables or trays, table legs become lamps, discarded bureaus change kitchen tables, useless radio cabinets undergo simple change and make chests for linen or playthings. These, and many more practical transformations, are covered with colorful free-hand designs in the good style.

Keynote of the new transforming-outdated-furniture idea is its simplicity. Amateurs with merely a paint brush, saw and hammer who unsaved attic and junkshop for cast-off objects can produce lovely things for the home. Quite apart from satisfying one's self and interesting one's friends, the creation of new things from old means today's double need for conservation and cheer, for the hobby value of the new art is high.

LOOK!

A can of paint and a yard of fabric can make all the difference to a room. Try a home-made slipcover and a new "coat" for a table, you'll get a whole new outlook for very little outlay. Visit your favorite stores for the "how to do".

Gay New Breakfast Sets to Brighten Kitchen

Among the new furniture being shown here this Spring, you will find new breakfast sets in gay, bright colors. Most of the furniture made today is of veneer construction with which it is possible to secure beautiful patterns not usually found in sawed woods. Solid wood, however, is required for solid parts such as legs and posts and places where carving is involved. Most of the furniture used in Canadian homes today is adapted more or less freely from the past. History and books have given the best designs and proportions best suited to the human anatomy.

Modern furniture designs usually combine the features of design, comfort, construction practices and utility which rich years of experience have proved most suitable. The fads, the "latest things" today may be out of date tomorrow. Exaggerated detail is inconsistent with the principles of beauty and is striking simply because it calls attention to unimportant parts of a whole. Instead seek for "very popular this season" or "all the rage" are misleading.

Spring Pick-ups In Slip Covers to Bolster Family Spirits

Today every Canadian mother and housewife is faced with the responsibility of bolstering family spirits so that in spite of the war, the home continues to be a cheerful place to live in. One of the quickest and thrilliest ways to brighten the home scene is to dust off the family sewing machine and start stitching some gay looking slipcovers to camouflage time-worn upholstery that cries out for face-lifting treatment.

Most of the decorators' gay deceptions that do so much to improve a room and dramatize its virtues are within easy reach for you, no matter how discouraged your budget may be. The thrifty trick is to start sewing your hobby and take advantage of the way-time budget doesn't rest your local sewing centre offers. You'll soon discover, too, that just as important as learning the easy art of slipcover making, is the variety of ways you can camouflage the same chair to refine the personality of your own home. For instance, if your living room wing chair needs a frock you can attain up a flounce decorated slipcover made of striped and plain quilted chintz. Or you can transform the same chair with a permanent type glove-fitting slipcover that looks for all the world like the original upholstery in line and style, using a combination of striped and plain woven cotton fabrics that you can buy at thrifty prices within easy budget range.

Easy-to-Pack Accessories Assist Present-Day Problem

These days a girl who marries a soldier may find herself carried over the threshold of anything from a single attic room, to a bungalow. The growing army of navy and the khaki are learning tricks, however, that make homemaking easier and the whole experience a mixture of fun and adventure.

LEAFS CAN TAKE IT ALL BY WIN OVER RED WINGS

Need Only One Game to Capture Stanley Cup for First Time Since 1942

By RUDY LEE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, April 14 (CP)—The hockey fate of Detroit Red Wings, somewhat forlorn now, and definitely uncertain, rested today in the hostile hands of Toronto Maple Leafs.

Behind three games in their best-of-seven series, Stanley Cup threat pitted trophy to Toronto for the first time since 1942 with victory tonight.

Coach Hap Day said the Leafs played "fine" hockey to date. He added:

"I hope it continues that way."

Mal (Sonny Sargus) Pettinger has performed "magnificently" in the play-offs but "my team beat Red Wings four straight unless they are red hot."

Then he added—"I hope the team is hot."

Red Wing officials maintained the almost stilled silence they have displayed since Thursday's third reverse. Speculation surrounding possible use of Gerry Couture picked up for that game from Moose Jaw Canucks, western Canada junior champions here for the Memorial Cup finals, failed to draw a reply from Wing officials.

Manager Jack Adams said he thought Wings had been "unlucked" in the third game, a relative.

National Hockey League President Mervyn (Red) Dutton and Frederic Gay the American and Canadian flags at Maple Leaf Gardens will be at half-mast in tribute to President Roosevelt of the United States, who died Thursday.

Support Divided On Hockey Clubs In Junior Finals

Toronto, April 14 (CP)—The best-of-seven series between Moose Jaw Canucks and St. Michael's Majors for possession of the Memorial Cup, emblem of Canadian Junior Hockey supremacy, starts today and you can still bet it any way you see it.

Toronto hockey fans are divided on the issue, which on the surface we about to present the spectacle of an irresistible force meeting an immutable force.

Both are constructed along the same lines—fast, tricky forwards backed by average defensive strength.

Both are confident of winning the cup.

Toronto, April 14 — (CP) — The fact that Moncton Brulns, the Maritime junior champions, were not permitted to enter into the Memorial Cup playdowns didn't stop Bill (Niagara Falls Review) Gaynon the right way. The New Brunswick team apparently was prevented from entering the series because it was slow in securing the O.K. from the C.A.H.A. In order to assure the overload of a series in the Maritimes.

Bill contends that with the huge surplus the amateur governing body has, some of the money could have been put to good use to help a staving team cover expenses. True, hockey expenditures are great and the receipts are slim, and instead of some generous individual supplying the necessary cash or a group of interested citizens raising the money, the C.A.H.A. coffers could be dug into in cases like this.

The whole affair was slightly ironic in view of the fact that Moncton had a senior squad in the early 30's that won two Allan Cup finals. Since clubs competing in those senior get nobbling but expenses, it is a safe bet that the two Allan Cup-winning Moncton teams helped to swell the C.A.H.A. account that is said to run close to $100,000.

Sweet and Sour:

The first game of the total-points Eastern Canada basketball semi-finals between Mount A. C. A. and the St. George Williams College Georgians resulted in a little "sweet and sour" by the two coaches. The Collegians won the series by a wide margin, but the first game resulted in a 33-29 win for the Montrealers. It was decided only a four-point margin to worry on.

Dr. Willie Woo, Georgians' coach was hopping mad, while Bob Mitchell, coach of the losing squad, was mighty pleased. The reason? Woo thought his boys played poor basketball and Mitchell felt that his squad had made a good showing for a first game on a strange floor.

Ladies Night:

Tonight in Montreal. Marjorie Bradshaw — nee Mrs. Cochand — will have plenty of competition as she defends the Gale Trophy for the Dominion senior amateur swimming honors. Pretty Marj's main competition comes from Winnipeg and Toronto.

From Winnipeg comes Irene Hartzell, who just a few days ago gracefully stroked her way to the Manitoba championship and the Rose Bowl. Toronto sends Jean Mowat, the well-known speed swimmer, into the event. Also entering the fancy swimming classic is Mamie Delaney of Toronto, a former Gale Trophy winner, as well as Evelyn Buchanan, another former champion.

Singh-Vagnone Try it Again Over 90 Minute Route

Not satisfied with the outcome of their initial bout staged here Wednesday, both Nanjo Singh, the unsurpulous mad Hindoo, and Red Vagnone, the firey-thatched California Rocket, both demanded a return bout in the Hume Arena with extended time limits.

"Both Vagnone and the turban-bedecked and unpredictable Hindoo demanded a 90-minute bout in the event I would rematch them. If that's the way they want it, it's alright with me and should be O.K. with the Belleville wrestling fan" predicted Promoter Frank Tunney today as he announced he had actually signed Singh and Vagnone for their return matches in a 90-minute bout here next Wednesday night. "It's natural; it can't miss," added Tunney convincingly.

"I had that Arabian-wearing Hindoo all out and crying uncle before and I'll finish the job next week. What he doesn't know about grapevine wrestling would fill a big book. I'll take him apart and put him together after Frank Sexton and that Pacific Coast screwball, Gus Sonnenberg, get one more crack at that unorthodox Indian," stated Vagnone as he willingly agreed for a return bout.

Singh, on the other hand, could not be contacted after agreeing in terms over the telephone. He won't remain silent too long, however. Two strong Queenston A. C. practices per week will precede the 90-minute wrestling show.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.

New York, April 14. (AP)—The goose eggs of the first three games of the Stanley Cup hockey playoff finals seem to show that in spite of the emphasis on high scoring in sports these days, it still pays to keep the other side from scoring too.

Also that the playoff system isn't so silly after all. It was evident that the Leafs had a strong defence, but during the regular season they played the game with the fans like and finished third, Fielding Hall, Editor.

During the Utah State High School Basketball Tournament final, Joe Reigle, Provo's all-state center, quickly accumulated four fouls and was taken out to cool off for a minute . . . Back in the game, Joe forgot to report and the referee promptly called a technical foul because a substitute had failed to report on entering the game. . . . Reigle, who is a quiet, reserved boy, was a sensation.

BURLEIGH GRIMES HEADS ROCHESTER IN INT. LEAGUE

Former Toronto Manager Must Deliver on Rookie-Stacked Diehty

By AL. G. WEISS
Canadian Press Sports Editor

Oxford, Ohio, April 14 (AP)—Development of the infield and catching staffs will largely decide the pennant fortunes of Rochester Red Wings, directed by Burleigh Grimes, in the International (Baseball) League season.

Staking under a new manager for the third successive year, the Red Wings' only returning regulars appear to be long on outfield and pitching strength but dependent on rookies to carry the infield and catching burdens.

Grimes has just six regulars that Stan Benner had last year in the Trotter and Mack office rebounded to St. Louis Cards; Jack Burnam, acquired in the Rule deal in March, drafted by New York Giants; Jim Mitchell, now with Buffalo; and Earl Naylor, a navy trainee at Bainbridge. Youngsters from the farm system of the Cards' system must take their places.

Catching presents a problem with both Joe Berardi and George Fraiman awaiting an army call, leaving only Elmer Gyselz, a semi-pro, to handle the job. A trade with the Cardinals for other double-A farm at Columbus is likely.

What's Doing in Sport

By The Canadian Press

Many of the major sport activities of the United States and Latin American countries for last night and today were suspended out of respect to the late President Roosevelt and in conformity with arrangements for the official day of mourning. President Ford Frick of the baseball League requested cancellation of pre-season exhibition games today although the schedule opens Monday.

Toronto West End Y. M. C. A. worked out a 32-27 victory over Richmond College at St. Anne De Bellevue, Que., last night in the first of the two-game semi-finals for the Canadian intermediate championship of the C.A.H.A. The second game is being played tonight.

CASUAL COMMENT
'by K.J.C.

Complicated, What?

Two soldiers spent a night of their leave together, and after a somewhat lively time arrived at Waterloo Bridge and gazed instantly at the dark river below them.

Suddenly one of them cried the reflection of the moon down there.

"I shay, ol' doy, what's that?" he asked.

His friend, who had perhaps had not quite so many drinks as the other, retorted: "That's the moon, you ass."

"The moon? Then what on earth are we doing up there?"

These Elusive Trout.

As the sun rose over the Ontario early this morning a goodly contingent of local anglers invaded the various lakes and streams in the southern part of the county today seeking those elusive speckled trout, the zenith of fish to any angler. March 14th, 1945, marked the earliest opening of the speckled trout season in Southern Ontario since the inception of the Game and Fisheries Department of the Ontario Government, and with the abnormal season scores of trout fishermen bled themselves of all their favorite trout streams high in hopes of luring the elusive speckled beauties to their angler's basket.

According to Forest and Stream one of the largest trout ever taken (square tail variety) ever caught was taken by Jean Mohr, of Fairfish, Wisconsin, from the Prairie river and he measured and weighed 9 pounds 10 ounces. This is the third largest brook trout ever entered in the Forest and Stream contests. Two others of the 10-pound class were caught in Cesar J. Whitlock of Wyoming and C. L. Arms, of Quebec back in 1916 and ten pounds of brook trout at one time by Fred Thiel.

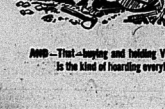
Archie C. White of West Thornton, New Hampshire, first prize winner in the 1944 brown trout division with 16-pound 6-ounce fish, had one of those strokes of luck which are exceptionally pleasant because they are so unexpected. Archie and his fishing companion were leisurely working down Rubber Brook on May 14, just enjoying being out-of-doors at their favorite pastime and not expecting anything but the small trout they were taking now and then. Archie saw the big trout strike and saw the fly he was using, big even then for trout fishers such a big fish would be in that small brook. He cast again without result. Then changing to a Mickey Finn fly, he hooked the fish on the first cast and fought and netted it in about ten minutes of strenuous action.

Remember When . . .

Babe Ruth, who had just retired from baseball, attended the Junior League opening at New York 20 years ago today as a spectator for the first time in many years. He received the greatest ovation of his 22 years of professional baseball. He remains to this day one of baseball's most colorful figures.

More recently he has returned to the sport headlines as a wrestling referee in Boston and Portland and there is a possible chance he might be seen in Belleville later in the season in the same capacity.

In the meantime Babe has returned to the local scene and opened Wednesday with a draw go with Nanjo Singh, Hindoo menace, and Red Vagnone, a carrot-topped Californian, whom the fans appreciated, "Toots" sells different types of cigars, matchmaker Frank Tunney rematched this pair for two week's go with the semi-windup to be a 90 minutes. Oh yes, there are gentlemen besides.



Old Heads, New Tricks.

Two veteran pitchers training with Cincinnati's Reds are chasing their bright hope a successful season on new territories.

Guy Bush, the old Cub, who pitched 15 years in the majors for Chattanooga, following a five-year layoff from the game, is making good progress toward perfecting a knuckler. "Shucks, I had this trick when I was in the league before, I'll have won a lot more games," Bush insists. So far Guy has declined to cut loose and has been hit-hard in practice games.

Walter (Shoe Boom) Beck, with Detroit last year, is being changed from a side-arm hurler to an overhand thrower by manager Bill McKechnie. Beck is confident that the delivery will give him added effectiveness.

LESSON NO. 856
By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

You can give your partner a blueprint of nearly any hand you have. Follow the order of choice in T-A-N: takeout, assist, no-trump. Keep it up until you are unable to T or A or N any more.

Keep plugging along with this hand:

♠ 8 2
♥ A Q 10 6 4 2
♦ K J 8 2
♣ 6

Suppose the bidding ambles along like this:

Partner	You
1 C	1 H
1 NT	3 H
3 NT	4 D

By this time your partner knows you have six hearts, four diamonds, three black cards, three high cards (aces, kings, queens); but not two aces or any A K combination.

Bidding a suit twice before showing another suit shows two cards more in the first suit. No suit is biddable with less than four cards. So, you show six hearts and four diamonds. Therefore, three blacks.

If you have only three black cards, they must be three-one or two-one. In either case, you must have three short cards in your black suits. They are three tricks.

Partner's first two bids did not reveal more than five tricks. Your jump on the second round said you had six tricks. If three of them are short cards, the other three are high cards.

Since you show six tricks and did not jump on the first round, you deny having two sure tricks. Thus, you do not have two aces or any A K. In your six card suit it must be A Q or K Q.

With that picture of your hand, partner can tell you how high your pair should go. Of course, he must decide on either hearts or diamonds as the final trump. His red cards will tell him which.

You can be sharp at cards without being a card sharp.

'Journey Has Been Long but End In Sight' Says General Montgomery

On the Ems Weser Canal, April 14. — (Reuters)— Field Marshal Montgomery, opening the 1,000th bridge built by his sappers since D-Day, said Friday:

"It has been a long journey, but the end is in sight".

Speaking to 500 men of his 21st Army group in a field behind the front, he said:

"The Germans have been well and truly defeated. They have no possible hope of doing any good in this war.

"The Germans are completely and utterly finished.

"But the German military machine, which is in the hands of the Nazi party, will never surrender—they will just go on fighting to the last.

"The great thing to remember is that we and the Russian armies on the eastern front are very close together—so close that our fighter-bombers cannot go as far as they would like to".

Field Marshal Montgomery added: "Hitler will drag the whole of Germany down with him. Because of that you cannot really say when the war will be over.

"There is no public opinion in Germany— no masses of people who can rise up and say 'we are fed up; we want to chuck it up'. Anyone who says that is bumped off.

"The Germans have given up the idea of trying to withdraw troops from certain sectors. They are told to fight on where they stand to the last breath.

"The destruction now is just wholesale—every single bridge, big and little, has been blown up, and that is why British progress in the north is not so rapid now, because everything is destroyed".

ATTACK ABSOLUTELY NECESSARY

Toronto, April 14—(CP)—Admiral Sir James Somerville, head of the British Admiralty Delegation in Washington, said here last night that originally he had "often wondered at the necessity" of the British naval attack he himself led upon a Vichy French fleet in Oran harbor in 1940 but developments "convinced me it was absolutely necessary."

KING ANNOUNCES

Came as Surprise.

Mr. King's election date announcement came as a surprise. It had been generally expected the date would be later although it was known it could come as early as June 11.

The date gives 54 clear days to prepare the election machinery, which is regarded by official as a minimum necessity.

The time necessary between the announcement of the election date and the beginning of the enumeration of persons entitled to vote, is a matter in which the advice of the chief electoral officer, Jules Castonguay, is taken. There is nothing in the Election Act fixing the number of days.

Prepare for Enumeration.

Mr. Castonguay said all the returning officers would know from the press and radio almost immediately the election date. They could begin at once to prepare for the enumeration.

There was a lively, good-humored exchange in the House after Mr. King made the election date announcement. The Prime Minister twitted the opposition with receiving the announcement with gloomy faces. Progressive Conservative House Leader Gordon Graydon declared on the contrary that the date was received with delight by the opposition.

"His Excellency the Governor-General has authorized me to say that he is willing to approve a recommendation to have parliament dissolved just as soon after the conclusion of its business as possible," said Mr. King, and added:

"His Excellency has also authorized me to say that he is willing at the same time, to approve the immediate issue of a proclamation for the holding of a general election June 11."

Thunderous Applause.

The House echoed to thunderous applause.

"Well, at last they have been forced to go to the country," said Mr. Graydon, jumping to his feet.

For a long time the Progressive Conservatives had been hoping the government would summon up the courage to face the people. He added that "we will be ready and willing and prepared to form the next government of Canada."

Mr. King said he had not seen any Progressive Conservatives applauding the date and remarked that their faces were gloomy. Mr. Graydon replied that Mr. King had recently complained about Mr. Bracken not having a seat in parliament, but the Prime Minister's trouble now would be to keep Mr. Bracken out and get himself in. Leaders Smile.

The two leaders were smiling at each other across the floor as they exchanged remarks.

C.C.F. Leader M. J. Coldwell said he welcomed the election announcement. It would enable the people to make a choice. But he was critical of the other leaders, remarking "I do not think this is the time to indulge in idle boasting or anything of that kind."

The government which will be formed after the next election will have to be prepared to face even graver problems than the government now in office has had to face."

New Democracy leader John Blackmore said he regretted parliament had no time to debate many important matters, but his party was ready for an election.

SPORT SHORTS FROM BRITAIN

By ALLAN NICKLESON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

London, April 14 (CP)—Grim-visaged Vince Hawkins probably will be the first contender ever to enter a championship fight with an unbeaten record.

The 21-year-old railway fireman, never defeated in 69 bouts as a professional, celebrated his latest triumph by signing to meet Ernie Roderick of Liverpool for the vacant British middleweight title. The bout will be held in London in May—either at Albert Hall or on a football ground.

Roderick, 31-year-old veteran, already holds the welterweight championship and on that basis, combined with his many triumphs in the middleweight class, was selected as one of the two top challengers for the title. Hawkins was named as the other because he has beaten any logical opponent except Roderick.

Roderick has been boxing professionally for more than 10 years — compared with four by Hawkins— and won the welter title from Jake Kilrain in 1939. A few months later he battled Henry Armstrong for the world crown in London but lost on points.

The meeting between Roderick and Hawkins will be the first middleweight championship affair since May, 1939, when Jock McAvoy defended it successfully at Manchester. Last fall the British Board of Control declared the title vacant because McAvoy had not defended it for years.

In their last bouts Roderick and Hawkins figured on the same London program. Roderick took a verdict over Tom Davies, Welsh middle titlist who was 11 pounds heavier. The referee stopped Hawkins' fight with Sailor Jim Laverick at the end of the ninth round after Hawkins sent his opponent spinning clear through the ropes and onto the press table for a nine-count.

The Canadian Army Infantry reinforcement unit lieutenant from Montreal took just 32 seconds to knock out Tom Tully of Manchester in a featherweight bout at London's Queensberry Club. A vicious left hook did the trick in a flurry of punches.

Gagnon, 26, is the only commissioned member of the Canadian armed forces fighting overseas as a professional.

AT THE BELLE — Van Johnson as Dr. Red Adams, has two lovely leading ladies in Marilyn Maxwell and Gloria DeHaven in "Between Two Women." M.G.M.'s perfect romance and action hit, featuring Lionel Barrymore and Keenan Wynn.

AT THE CAPITOL — The doctor (played by Joe Whitehead) and Charlie Chan (Sidney Toler) contemplate the latest bit of evidence in a series of murders, in "The Jade Mask," next at the Capitol Theatre. On the same program Cecil B. De Mille's "Union Pacific," starring Joel McCrea and Barbara Stanwyck.

Hollywood and HERE

By EYE ROSSEN

Hollywood's newest star is Joan Caulfield, whose first film, as yet unreleased in Canada, is "Miss Susie Slagle." She is currently at work in "Blue Skies," in which Bing Crosby sings Irving Berlin's past hits.

Commenting on the crowded housing situation in Hollywood right now, Joan told an interviewer about her present abode. "We have no privacy there," she said. "I was taking a sun bath the other day and the first thing you know there were 18 men there playing backgammon, and I had 18 new friends."

* * *

J. J. Fitzgibbons, chairman of the Canadian Motion Picture War Services Committee, at a ceremony in Hollywood, presented modernistic plastic desk weights to Spencer Tracy, actor; Louis B. Mayer, former Saint John, N.B., lad now Hollywood's leading producer, and to others responsible for the making of the short subject called "Tomorrow, John Jones," which was shown during the Seventh Victory Loan.

On each was inscribed the name of the recipient under the line: "Canada Thanks . . ." and each carried the signature of the Hon. J. L. Ilsley.

Hollywood is very Canada-conscious these days and hurries to meet every request for assistance.

Theatre men are worried about the growth of 16 mm. shows, which play in smaller rural communities. Ordinarily theatres in the country draw from many miles around but movies in the villages remove the need of going to the nearest town. In some places theatre business has been hurt by these countryside movies and theatre men are demanding that they be shown in buildings which meet the same safety regulations as regular theatres.

This may yet be met by prefabricated theatres, which are now out of the dream stage. About 100 ready-made movie houses are planned for rural Mexico and the British plan to put them up in devastated Europe.

They can be moved easily.

Porter Hall, a villain in many pictures is a deacon of the Hollywood Presbyterian Church and in charge of its work for the sick and the poor. Talking about unpleasant Hollywood publicity he said: "Of course, there's a few people who'll always be on the front pages with their latest flings but every community gets those. Trouble is, out here they get more publicity because they're famous" . . . Paulette Goddard will make the spicy novel, "Kitty." It's an 18th Century English story and will be just as tough to clean up as "Forever Amber."

"Moonstone," the famous Wilkie Collins classic, will become a film . . . Another interesting film should be the one made from the late Haywood Broun's novel, "The Sun Field," story of a pro baseball player who fell in love with a ballet teacher . . . Talking about unusual movie-isms, in "The Bells of St. Mary," Ingrid Bergman, playing a nun, puts the boxing gloves on with a school pupil. She has been taking boxing lessons. Bing Crosby co-stars with Miss Bergman . . . Jinx Falkenberg, who was a tennis star before becoming a movie one, has a black eye from a ball batted by Ozzie Nelson.

NEW PRESIDENT

There will be an immediate request, it is said, to realign each power's troops within the 4 agreed zones of occupation in Germany. French troops will occupy one of these areas and Gen. deGaulle will want to attend the conference.

At this meeting there are indications the powers directly involved will want agreement on the reparations in kind which were projected at Yalta. This means that they want to know how many German plants and other installations in their occupied zone they can dismantle and ship home to replace their shattered factories.

The question of prisoner labor for reconstruction also will be up, as well as the disposition of foreign refugees.

DANCE OF DEATH

By HELEN McCLOY

CHAPTER 19.

"And why did Pasquale 'lose' that diamond ring?"

"That's the one blunder I won't attempt to explain even tentatively at this stage of the case. We don't know enough about the ring itself as yet to construct a useful working hypothesis."

"What about Danine's calling me Doyle and Boyle and so on."

"We—ell, I don't want to hurt your feelings, Inspector. . ."

"Aw, shoot! I can take it!"

"When Abraham Lincoln wished to rebuke a certain Lord Hartington for tactlessness, he kept addressing his victim as 'Lord Partington.' In that way, he classed Hartington with 'Mrs. Partington,' —a symbol of gaucherie in those days — and implied that he really couldn't be bothered to remember Hartington's correct name. Lincoln did that deliberately, but most modern psychologists are familiar with the unconscious snub. Poor Danine has to be friendly with us now to avoid trouble. But unconsciously he is annoyed at having to bother with us at all and he expresses that annoyance by not taking the trouble to remember your name. Since poverty is the only thing he fears, wealth must be the only thing he respects. Think how galling it must be for him to have to defer to men who pay as little income tax as you and I!"

Foyle's face reddened and he looked sternly at Duff.

"What are you grinning about?"

"Nothing, chief—nothing at all," cried Duff, hastily. "But there's one question I'd like to ask Dr. Willing. What about Minna Hagen's stuttering? Don't all speech defects count as blunders?"

"Golly, I forgot about that!" exclaimed Foyle. "What does that prove about my unconscious mind, doc?"

Basil smiled. "Perhaps your unconscious mind remembered what I told you the other day — that only the blunders of physically normal people can be trusted as psychological evidence. Minna Hagen is afflicted with adenoids and difficulty in breathing. Her stuttering has no more psychological significance than a slip of the hand in a person with palsy, or the nasality of speech in a syphilitic. There are cases of purely psychological stuttering, but she is not one of them and so we cannot count her speech defects as blunders."

"Well—" Foyle helped himself to another of Basil's cigarettes. "The way you explain them, doc, there are only four blunders out the total eight that sound as if they might prove useful to us — Edgar Jocelyn's lie, Rhoda Jocelyn's remorse, Pasquale's interest in Kitty, and Leach's despair the day of the murder."

"But I said these explanations were only tentative," protested Basil. "We may have to revise several of them before we solve the case. Rhoda's remorse may be due solely to her part in the plot against Ann Claude, and have nothing to do with the murder at all. On the other hand there may be some other explanation of Danine's calling you Boyle and Coyle which would make that a psychological indication that he committed the murder. 'Psychic fingerprints' have to be analyzed and correlated with other factors in the case as laboriously as physical fingerprints before you reach any definite conclusion. And that takes time. . . . Do you know what's really the most amazing thing about this murder? The thing that's conspicuous by its absence?"

"Give it up, doc." Foyle spoke wearily.

"Motive!" cried Basil, with sudden intensity. "Where's the motive? In most crimes a detective starts with a number of suspects who have motives, and his job is to fasten means and opportunity on one of them. But here we have the reverse — a lot of people with means and opportunity, and not one so far with a logical, compelling motive!

"All our witnesses insist that no one had reason to hate Kitty and so far as we know no one profited by her death. Rhoda and Pasquale were depending on her to make a brilliant marriage and she was killed before she was even engaged. Edgar Jocelyn had just pledged a large sum of money for her comin-out party and she was killed before the party. Mrs. Jowett, Rhoda's social secretary, like the tradespeople, was actually making money out of Kitty's debut, and nothing could be better calculated to harm Mrs. Jowett professionally than the scandal of this murder. All the servants including Gregg and Victorine, owed their jobs to Rhoda's exploitation of Kitty's debut. Now Kitty is dead, and Rhoda's bluff is called, she will have to close the house and dismiss the entire staff. If Danine did want to marry Kitty, why should he poison her? I can't believe that such a competent cynic would love any girl enough to murder her and risk his own neck for jealousy or disillusion. Even to murder her and risktbgk Even to Philip Leach, Kitty must have been at least a source of 'copy' for his column. Ann Claude gained nothing by Kitty's death except a rather terrifying experience. I have played with the idea that Ann might have poisoned Kitty through envy, or a desire to slip into Kitty's shoes permanently through the impersonation. But I consider Ann too intelligent to envy Kitty's Rocco life, and too normal to be a poisoner.

"To sum up, among all the people known to have been at the cocktail party when Kitty was poisoned, there is not one who had a motive—apparently."

"Not only that," added Foyle, soberly. "But most of 'em scarcely knew Kitty at all! Her Uncle Edgar hasn't seen her since she was a kid. Mrs. Jowett and Gregg had never seen her until she came to this country about six weeks ago. So far as we know, Philip Leach only met her on the boat coming over. The only suspects who knew her at all well are those who were on the Continent the last few years—Rhoda, Pasquale, Victorine, Danine, and Ann Claude. I can't help thinking one of them must be the murderer."

"None of the five you mention had reason to hate Kitty—as far as I can see," Basil said. "There are only two motives for murder—hate and greed. Emotions like fear and jealously and revenge are simply variations on the theme of hate—Chaucer's 'cold wrathe.' No one profited by Kitty's death. Therefore some one hated her. But who? And why? If we had an inkling of the motive, all the rest would fall into place. For the ingredients of this crime were assembled as symmetrically as the atoms in a molecule or the elements in a work of art."

"Pasquale's an artist!" cried Foyle, hopefully.

"But he has no sense of design!" Basil's eyes twinkled. "Have you forgotten his painting of the nude on a taxicab? We can almost acquit him on that evidence alone!"

The sudden peal of the telephone made Foyle jump. Detective Duff answered it.

"For you, chief."

"Hullo?" As Foyle listened, his eyes grew brighter. "O.K." He slammed the receiver back into its cradle. "One of the boys has got hold of a taxi driver who remembers driving Leach away from a night club a few days ago. And where do you think he went? Washington Heights—of all places! What was a gilt-edged gossip writer doing out there in the sticks?"

Wednesday morning, a police car sped north until it came to the hill between the Hudson and Harlem Rivers, where Madame Jumel's white house still stands on its own lawn, overlooking the Polo Grounds and the roofs of the city. In a side street, among fireproof apartment buildings, stood old frame houses with the cupolas and fretwork of the Seventies. At one of these the car stopped.

Their footsteps sounded hollow on the wooden porch. The door was opened by a shapeless, blowsy woman.

"Leach? Sure, he's my boarder. Second floor front. But I don't know if he's up yet."

Basil and Foyle mounted the stairs with Duff. Foyle rapped smartly on the door. A drowsy voice called out, "Didn't I tell you I wanted to sleep late?"

Foyle's only answer was another rap.

"Oh, all right. . . ."

There was a sound of bare feet padding across a wooden floor and the door was pulled open.

"Who tha'?" cried the young man and tried to shut it again. But Foyle thrust his way in, the others following.

Philip Leach was scarcely in a condition to receive visitors. He was clad in a pair of rumpled, mauve silk pajamas. He had not shaved for several days. His hair was tousled, his eyes bloodshot and gummy with sleep.

"Wha' the devil—" he began

Foyle planted himself in an armchair, with a hand on either knee. "I'm Inspector Foyle from Police Headquarters. This is Dr. Willing of the district attorney's office. You know why we're here, young man!"

"But—I—"

"I can swallow just so much!" barked Foyle. "Don't tell me you don't read the papers!"

"On my word, I haven't seen a paper for the last eight days."

"Then what in hell have you been doing?"

"Getting drunk," returned Mr. Leach with disarming simplicity.

"Why?"

Leach's eyes narrowed. "It's a way we have in the newspaper game."

Foyle leaned forward impatiently. "Do you mean to tell me you've been in this room since last Wednesday without seeing a single newspaper?"

"Absolutely!"

"Then—" The inspector was watching him closely. "You haven't heard anything about the murder of Kitty Jocelyn?"

"Kitty. . .!" He slumped to the floor. They lifted the inert body to a wicker couch. Basil bent the head below the knees.

"I never thought he'd take it like that," muttered Foyle.

Leach opened his eyes. Before Foyle could out the question, he had answered it. "She was going to be my wife. . . ." His voice was dull and slow. "We were going to be married the day after her coming-out party. And now. . ."

It came to Basil that these were the first tears that had been shed for Kitty's death.

"Mrs. Jocelyn said nothing about all this!" snapped Foyle.

"She knew nothing about it. We were running away. . . ." He lifted stricken eyes. "How did it happen?"

Foyle returned the look for a moment. "Perhaps you can tell us."

"I?" Leach stared. "But I haven't seen Kitty since the dance. I've been here all the time."

"Getting drunk—all the time?"

"And seeping it off—and working on a novel.'

"Then you didn't know that Kitty Jocelyn was dead until we told you?"

"Good lord, no! How many times must I tell you?"

Like most psychologists, Basil had little faith in anything that resembled third degree methods.

"If we want a coherent statement from Mr. Leach I think we'd better allow him to take a cold shower and dress. Perhaps his landlady will send up some black coffee."

Foyle looked at Basil quizzically. "I guess your the doctor this time!"

Shaved and dressed, Leach didn't look the same man. His features were regular and pleasing. There was a natural wave in his chestnut hair that a Hollywood actor would have envied. His brown suit and brown calf shoes were of the best quality and he had a slim figure and a neat foot to show them off. He seemed to have recovered his self-possession.

He picked up a wrist watch with a pigskin strap that lay on top of a portable typewriter.

"It must be later than six!"

"It's nearly eleven," replied Basil.

"Forgot to wind it again!" Leach repaired the omission, gave the watch a shake for good measure, and fastened it to his wrist.

"Have a spot?" He held up a bottle of whisky.

"No, thanks. And I prescribed black coffee."

"I never obey doctor's orders." Leach opened the door of a kitchenette, brought out a raw egg and a bottle of catsup, and proceeded to mix himself a pick-me-up with the competence of long practice.

"Well, when you're quite ready, Mister Leach, I'd like to know just why you're hiding here on Washington Heights," remarked Foyle, with laborious sarcasm. "We've been combing all the hot spots and big hotels for you."

Is Your Child Starved?

Malnutrition is common to school age children because at from ten to sixteen or eighteen years more nutrition is required than at any other time of life.

This is the growing and developing period when boys and girls are coming to manhood and womanhood. Their bodies cry out for more minerals and vitamins. They need a proper diet and plenty of rich nourishing food.

When they do not get enough nourishment there comes irritability, nervousness and tired feelings which interfere with their school work and rob them of success and happiness.

Young people respond quickly to the benefits obtained by the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. A few weeks' use of this treatment during the trying school period may prove a lasting blessing. Ask your druggist for the new economy size bottle of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Bogus Refugee Was Gestapo Spy

by VINCENT CHURCH
(Its Southeast Asia Command Service, Paper)

A few days ago we executed a spy. He was the thirteenth we have had to meet this end since the war began.

This man had been a Belgian officer, had been approached by the Gestapo, had taken the bait, subornments, and after a period of intensive training in a German spy school was sent to this country, arriving here by air from Lisbon in the guise of a refugee.

So well were his tracks covered that he got through the first stringent examination and actually worked in a Belgian Ministry for some months before he was caught.

Now the interesting thing is this. Of the thirteen spies executed only three were Germans, three were English traitors and the rest were "refugees" from the Continent.

New Problems.

So much for the popular view of spies. The spy with the perfect command of his enemy's language and national characteristics is very rare.

But this war posed quite new problems to both sides in the espionage and counter-espionage games. Germany occupied most of Europe. The result was the fearsome canalisation of espionage through Sweden, Portugal, Turkey, and, to a certain extent, Switzerland.

This worked to the disadvantages of the Germans. The vast areas of German-occupied Europe was too big to be adequately "covered" by the Gestapo. Agents could be dropped by parachute, planes could land—as in the last war—and there were tens of thousands of brave and embittered men of the underground movements eager for the opportunity to help.

Potential Traitors.

On the other hand, the Germans were faced with a problem of considerable difficulty. It is one thing to slip across a land frontier, it is quite another thing to get to, and get information out of, an island. Moreover, the British authorities with a reputation which does Sir John Anderson and later, Mr. Herbert Morrison credit, cleaned up virtually all the potential British traitors who might have aided German agents.

Except for the one big leak, the German Legation in Dublin, all the holes were stopped.

The two great problems of spying are, first, to get a reliable agent into a country and enable him to escape detection, and, second, to enable him to get his information out again.

The second problem was, for the Germans, the simpler. Radio, either directly in the shape of the ingenious little sets operated by the agents or indirectly via Dublin, aided them here.

Job Well Done.

The problem of getting spies in was more difficult. Owing to the lack of spies of German blood who were capable of passing as Englishmen they had to turn their every difficulties in favour to their disadvantage. The bogus "refugee" from Nazi persecution became—as country after country was overrun—more and more of a headache for our Security authorities.

However, owing to restriction of transport and the small number of places from which they could travel to these Islands it was fairly easy to keep a close eye on them. Thus by D-Day the Security authorities—and remember that the vast majority of their officers and their training had had to be improvised, a disadvantage from which the Germans did not suffer—had done their job so well that there was little left for them to do in these Islands.

Disguised Nazis.

The more of Europe we held, the more we should be able to see clearly and scotch the conspiracy which became. Obviously, the Germans will leave behind large numbers of agents disguised as innocent townsfolk or villagers in the countries overrun by the Nazi war machine.

But the job of the counter-espionage people is going to be difficult in the United. Allied countries, how much more difficult is it going to be when we actually enter Germany.

If the war is really to be finished—that is to say, if Germany's capacity to injure the world is to be permanently removed—then the task of the counter-espionage and Civil Affairs officers becomes enormously complex.

It is almost impossible to catch a spy in a totalitarian country where, on the face of it, everyone is implicated in the régime which you have overthrown, but everyone but a few—persons big wigs has the cry: "I had to pretend to be friendly to the Nazis so as to keep my job and feed my family."

Amgot came up against this in Italy.

Where "most were for the party and all were for the state," it is difficult to know where to begin to construct a civilising administration. There must be a nalive machinery of Government—but whom are you to trust?

The Germans are already boasting that, even if they are beaten, certain members of the Gestapo, the Party, and the Army will "bury their identities," and go to ground. Leaders trained for just this eventuality will prepare in secret for a Fourth Reich and a Third World War.

Britain Mourns Great War Leader

Anthony Eden to Attend Funeral Says the Press Association

By ALEX H. SINGLETON

London, April 14 — (AP) — A solemnly hushed House of Commons adjourned five minutes after it had convened Friday in respect to the memory of President Roosevelt.

His shoulders bowed and face pale, Prime Minister Churchill informed the House of the death of "this great departed statesman and war leader," a "dear and cherished" friend.

Britain — King, Prime Minister and commoner — mourned that Mr. Roosevelt, their friend in the days of darkest despair, had been denied stand on the eve of victory the triumph of his war leadership.

The swelling chorus of tributes to the president was mingled with widespread curiosity over the personality and policy of President Truman and expressions of satisfaction over his intention to carry on administration aims.

Prime Sec. Eden is likely to proceed to San Francisco conference in the British prime minister Mr. Churchill would fly to the funeral, but the Press Association and Foreign Secretary Eden would stand as the British government representative.

Slowly parliament members filed from the chamber where Britain had hoped to honor the President this month. Mr. Churchill asked the House to lay aside work until Tuesday, when formal tributes will be paid.

"He was the friend who put rifles in our hands, who let the Royal Navy have the white ensign on American destroyers," the Evening News commented of Mr. Roosevelt.

Were Hitler and God for Liberty.

"He had worn himself out in the service of the country and of all the peoples striving for liberty," said the Express.

"Greatest American," said the Evening Standard.

Britain's first reaction to the news was one of stunned incredulity, which gave way gradually to a sober sense of deep loss. To many Britons, President Roosevelt was as great a hero as Prime Minister Churchill.

Editorial Comment On Roosevelt's Death

By The Canadian Press

NEW YORK TIMES — History will honor him as one of the greatest Americans. He will be remembered as the President who led his people through the valley of the shadow of death to victory. He will be remembered as the President who saved democracy at home while he was saving it abroad. He will be remembered as the President who mobilized the forces of good will in the world to create the United Nations organization to keep the peace. He will be remembered as the President who, by his courage, his faith and his indomitable will, made victory possible.

CHICAGO TRIBUNE — History will record that Franklin Delano Roosevelt was not only President of the United States during the years of the most disastrous war in the history of the American people. It will also record that he was the President who, with the encouragement of the enemy nations, led the United States into participation in that war. It will record that Franklin Roosevelt betrayed more confidences of the people of this country than any other President.

CHICAGO TRIBUNE — History will record that Franklin Delano Roosevelt was not only President of the United States during the years of the most disastrous war in the history of the American people. It will also record that he was the President who, with the encouragement of the enemy nations, led the United States into participation in that war. It will record that Franklin Roosevelt betrayed more confidences of the people of this country than any other President.

THE NEWS CHRONICLE declared that the American people have been robbed of a President to whom they had been his country on the threshold of victory. "With the calamity, anachronism of grief, is a grandeur of vision, a command of the future."

THE DAILY TELEGRAPH — Passing leaves a gap in all our hearts and in the councils of the world which will be hard to fill. This country, particularly, owes him a debt which can never be repaid for it understanding, help and confidence in its darkest hour of adversity.

Churchill's Message To Mrs. Roosevelt

Washington, April 14 — (AP) — Prime Minister Churchill said Friday that the death of President Roosevelt "is an unsweetening and irreparable loss."

"They will want to share with personal sympathy in the sorrow of the American people.

THE TORONTO POST — The thought that we had a good friend in the President of the United States sustained us in our struggle against a powerful tyranny.

Churchill's message to Mrs. Roosevelt was brief, but one of the British nation, and of the cause of freedom in every country, was telegraphed to Mrs. Roosevelt:

"I send my most profound sympathy in your grievous loss. It is also the loss of the United Nations and of the cause of freedom in every land."

"I feel so deeply for you all. As for myself, I have lost a dear friend and an inspiring chief. I was forged in the fire of war. I hoped to see him finish the task in the glory of his name and the foundations of his work."

It was signed simply "Winston."

GERMANY ALL BUT SPLIT IN TWO BY 3RD ARMY WAR STRATEGY TO BE UNCHANGED—TRUMAN

New U.S. President Says Future Must Be Made Secure

American Policy Remains "Unconditional Surrender"

Washington, April 16 (AP)—President Truman promised today that the grand strategy of the war will remain "unchanged and unhampered" by his accession to the presidency of the United States.

Making his first address to a joint session of Congress, the new President declared that the United States, along with its Allies, must shoulder the "grave responsibility" of making stours future peace.

To accomplish this objective, Mr. Truman said, the United States must join in punishing those guilty for initiating the war.

"lasting peace can never be secured if we permit our dangerous opponents to plot future wars with impunity at any moment they choose, however distant," the President said, in apparent allusion to the recent Hitler peace attempt to seek a refuge in the Bavarian mountains of Germany.

Pays Tribute to F.D.R.

Speaking one day after the burial of Franklin D. Roosevelt, President Truman paid the late chief a tribute to his predecessor.

"Truly this has thrust upon us grave responsibilities," he said. "We will not evade them.

"Our devoted leader never looked backward. He looked forward and moved forward. I shall follow his lead. I would want us to do.

"That is what America will do."

Mr. Truman went to the capitol after two days of conferences with aides on international affairs. The first was with State Secretary Stettinius, Under-Secretary Grew, Mr. Stettinius, Foreign Secretary Eden of Great Britain, and Vic Dall of Halifax, the British Ambassador.

Speaking from the rostrum where he heard President Roosevelt on March 1, the new President said:

"Elements of the Yalta conference, Mr. Truman said that American policy remains unconditional surrender.

Must be Complete Victory.

Declaring the United States is "deeply conscious" that much hard fighting remains, the new President said:

"Having to pay such a heavy price to make complete victory certain, America will never become a party to any plan for partial victory . . . we will not traffic with the breakers of the peace, on the

French Forces Capture Royan

Paris April 16—(AP)—French forces battling to reopen the port of Bordeaux to allied shipping and wipe out 20,000 pocketed German troops have scored an initial victory with the capture of Royan at the mouth of the Gironde River.

French tanks and infantry charged into the city of 16,000 on the river's north bank in savage fighting yesterday.

Big fleets of American bombers, French and Canadian Naval units pounded the German positions before the land forces opened assault.

The action on the long "forgotten front" was described as the first in a series intended to erase pockets of enemy strength left behind in the advance on Berlin.

terms of the peace."

Noting that within an hour after he took office last April 12 they had announced that the San Francisco United Nations conference on World Security would proceed on schedule, Mr. Truman said the United States must face the problems of peace "with the same courage that we have faced and mastered the problems of war."

"In the memory of those who have made the supreme sacrifice—in the memory of our fallen President—we shall do our part."

It is not enough, Mr. Truman said, merely to wish for peace.

"We must work, and if necessary, fight for it."

The task of creating a sound international organization, he declared, is easier said than done.

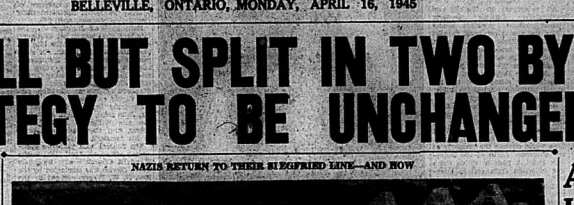
But success, President Truman added, rests upon high dignitaries in the ceremony—then sped back to Washington to shoulder in earnest the crushing task which fell his lot Thursday when a cerebral hemorrhage killed President Roosevelt.

With President Truman were Mrs. Roosevelt, back to the White House, to terminate housekeeping she began March 6, 1933.

Simple neighbors of Hyde Park mingled with cabinet officers, Supreme Court Justices, Congressional and military leaders and foreign dignitaries to pay homage to the man who gave up the country squire life he wanted, to lead all embattled country through its greatest conflict.

Among the funeral guests were Prime Minister Mackenzie King—who placed his own floral offering at the green-carpeted graveside—and Alfred Clay, son of a farmer on the Roosevelt state and boyhood playmate of the late President.

The thunder of a 21-gun Presidential salute started the burial services, a few minutes before 10 a.m.



At 10:02 a.m. a Marine captain sounded "present arms" to the military guard of honor. Down the valley came the muffled roll of drums. . . The body of President Roosevelt began its short, slow journey to the final resting place he had selected.

A military band broke into the brisk strains of "Hail to the Chief" then turned to the solemn dirge of a Chopin funeral dirge.

At 10:36 a.m., the body bearers from the armed forces lifted the flag-draped casket from a gun caisson and carried it inside the garden to the graveside. The gun caisson stood a horse draped in black, carrying only the boots and spurs of a fallen rider.

Mrs. Roosevelt and two of her children—her son, Elliott, an Air Forces Brigadier-General, and her daughter, Anna—placed dry-eyed before the grave. To Mrs. Roosevelt's right stood Army officers; commanders of the United States, members of the Cabinet and of the Supreme Court. To her left stood official delegations from both branches of Congress.

ROOSEVELT SLEEPS IN FAMILY GARDEN AT HYDE PARK

Simple Neighbors Mingle with High Dignitaries to Pay Final Homage

By HOWARD FLIEGER

Roosevelt Estate, Hyde Park, N.Y., April 16 (AP)—Franklin Delano Roosevelt, world traveller in search of lasting peace, slept today in the spot on earth he loved above all others—the garden of his family home in the peaceful Hudson Valley.

In burial rites majestic in their simplicity, the four-term President was laid to rest Sunday behind the hemlock hedges which border the century-old garden, a cherished pride of the Roosevelt family.

His successor, President Truman, joined other high dignitaries in the ceremony—then sped back to Washington to shoulder in earnest the crushing task which fell his lot Thursday when a cerebral hemorrhage killed President Roosevelt.

Soviet Steamroller Again in Action Says German Communique

London, April 16 — (AP) — The German high command announced today that the Russians had launched their long-awaited large-scale offensive from the east side of the German wall at Berlin.

Earlier Soviet broadcasts had made similar announcements, but this was the first confirmation by the German communique, which usually proves more accurate than the German propaganda services.

The high command declared the big Soviet steamroller swung into action along a 45-mile front from the mouth of the Neisse southeast of Berlin to the Oderbruch, a low plain on the west bank of the Oder northeast of Berlin.

"Bitter fighting is in progress on the entire front," said Berlin's communique.

German broadcasts indicated that the Russian assault was being mounted on an even broader front, and reported that a new bridgehead across the Oder had been forged on the first hours of the offensive in the Schwedt area, 30 miles south of Stettin and 44 miles northeast of Berlin.

However, Russian and American forces were even closer to a junction north of Berlin, German broadcasts indicated. The Russians were reported attacking close to Wriezen, 24 miles northeast of Berlin and 31 miles from the U. S. 8th Army on the Elbe at Tangermunde.

A heavy artillery barrage, begun at 2:50 a.m., paved the way for the assault, which was launched on a front more than 36 miles long extending from north of Kunstrin to south of Frankfurt-on-the-Oder, the high command declared.

The Germans last night had reported Russian tanks and armor storming the approaches to Wriezen, only 31 miles northeast of Berlin.

There was no Russian confirmation of the German reports. On the contrary an Associated Press dispatch from Moscow, written at 5:45 a.m. Moscow time, said that according to information then available the big Russian push toward Berlin had not yet started—though the Germans claimed it had.

Brest von Hammer, German commentator, said the Russians also opened strong attacks today in the Front area, about 40 miles south of Frankfurt, and that they were repulsed by the Germans.

Bitter fighting was on out yesterday in Upper Silesia, southeast and southwest of Ratibor, with the Russians throwing in seven rifle divisions and many tanks, "but they were checked before the main battle line," Von Hammer added.

While Tolbukhin's forces gained along the Danube's south bank Moscow announced the capture of Floridadorf an industrial suburb of Vienna on the Danube's north bank. Kosenaurg, rail junction, 18 miles from Floridadorf, also was taken.

Dispatches from Vienna said the Russians had captured a huge German underground rocket factor in the city where 200,00 German had manufactured robot weapons.

400 SUPERFORTS AGAIN SET AFIRE TOKYO INDUSTRY

Returning Pilots Say Holocaust Visible 150 Miles After Leaving the Target

Guam, April 16 —(AP)— An October 400 Superforts rained incendiaries early today on Tokyo, still aflame from Saturday's fire raid, reconnaissance photographs showed 365,000,000 square feet of Tokyo's arsenal area were burned out Saturday, bringing to 27¼ square miles the area devastated in the nation's capital by one Japanese capital March 10 and Saturday. The city covers 46 square miles.

Returning pilots swept over twice the target area, including the pried Nakajuki arsenal.

A Japanese imperial communique conceded that today's raid started "a considerable number of fires" and Radio Tokyo admitted some of

June 4th Date For Ontario Elections

Toronto, April 16 — (CP) — The date of the Ontario election has been changed from Monday, June 11, to June 4, Premier Drew of Ontario announced today.

The Premier issued a statement saying that the change in the date was made necessary by the decision of the Dominion government to hold the Dominion election June 11.

Premier Drew announced last Thursday that the Ontario general election, made necessary by the defeat of his outnumbered 38-member government in the 90-seat Ontario Legislature last March 22, would be held June 11. Friday Prime Minister Mackenzie King announced in the House of Commons that the Dominion general election also would be held June 11.

Premier Drew's statement announcing a change in the date was issued at his Toronto office this morning. He said that "considerable confusion would result from holding the two elections on the same day" and that more than 40,000 persons would be disfranchised.

The Premier also said that the effective nomination day for everyone voting by members of the services would be May 1. Previously the date was May 26—and previously the date was June 6. Previously the dates were June 6-11.

Official nomination day is May 26, one week before the election, the official said. He explained that candidates in the by-elections to file nomination papers by May 1 is facilitate arrangements for the overseas vote.

Americans Capture Hof Only 8 Miles From Czech Border

Nazis Use Reinforcements On Front West of Berlin

By JAMES M. LONG

Paris, April 16 (AP) — The U.S. 3rd. Army drove within eight miles of Czechoslovakia today against the enemy's western front which already has been split into two commands.

The Germans pulled troops from Berlin and tanks from the Russian front to counter the grave peril to their capital, 45 miles from nearest U.S. 9th. Army troops. They seized one 9th. Army bridgehead over the Elbe at Magdeburg, but Lt.-Gen. Simpson's men deepened a wedge crossing to four miles within 53 miles of the capital on the open Brandenburg plain, and other troops of the 9th. Army were within 70 miles from the Skoda munitions works in Pilsen.

Close to Nuremberg.

Farther south, the U.S. 7th. Army beat with five divisions in a driving eight miles of the 92nd citadel of Nuremberg (421,000) and the 3rd. Army, which advanced on the upper Rhine plain and into the Saar Basin.

The western front no longer existed as such, with enemy organizational setup, Field Marshal Ferdinand Schoerner was placed in charge of the northern front guarding Berlin from the Allies and Russians, while Field Marshal Albert Kesselring probably was given command of the southern front.

Even while the Ruhr pocket was being cut in two, Poles and Canadians of Gen. Crerar's 1st. Canadian Army formed a new front on the Emden bridgehead on the shores of the North Sea and within five miles of the naval base of Wilhelmshaven by last midnight. 142,949 Germans had been taken from the Ruhr trap, 97 Miles from Frapp.

Lt.-Gen. Patton's troops were within three miles west and northwest of the big Saxony centre of Chemnitz (334,562) and within 87 miles of the Czechoslovak capital of Prague.

The French 1st. Army was nine miles or less from Stuttgart (480,000.) The British passed the Aller River to within 18 miles of outflanked Hamburg (1,682,000); Germany's largest port and second city. Flanking the big Saxony road centre near the Czech border, Nuremberg, surrounded by 2nd. Army troops less than a dozen miles away.

Nuremberg's industries such as Frans Von Papen, the gray fox of Nazi diplomacy; 56 year old Field Marshal August Von Mackensen; Field Marshal Gerd Von Rundstedt and the Nazi propagandist Dr. Manfred Zapp were among those reported captured.

The 2nd. Armored Division outflanked seven assaults in the front from the original bridgehead on the Elbe, from the Skoda munitions works in Pilsen.

Spring Offensive Opens in N. Italy; One Good Punch to Knock Nazis Out —Alexander

By LYNN HEINZERLING

Rome, April 16 — (AP) — Gen. Clark announced today that the "spring offensive in the Mediterranean theatre has begun," with the British 8th and Allied 5th armies engaged in operations along the entire Italian battle front.

The 5th Army struck on the eastern end of the front a week ago and the 8th jumped into the fight today along the central and western sectors.

The 5th's attack was preceded yesterday by 1,283 bomber sorties of the U.S. 15th Air Force which blasted German targets south of Bologna.

The experience of the 5th Army in its winter campaign and before the 5th will face bitter and bloody fighting in its effort to break out of the mountain south of Bologna and into the broad Po Valley.

The Germans have chosen to fight for northern Italy despite military disaster which now rips apart their country apart.

"German forces now are very weak and only need one mighty push: to knock them out for good. The moment has come for us to take the field for the last battle which will end the war in Europe. It will be a severe battle. The enemy mortally wounded beast still will be very dangerous . . . but the end is quite certain . . . you who have won every battle you have fought are going to win this one.

Gen. Clark, in a special order of the day addressed to his 1942. Army group, said:

"As never before we now have an opportunity to deal a decisive blow. It is my greatest hope that this will be the last major offensive that will be conducted by the 15th. Army group.

"I call them with all you have got and with God's help we will have a victory to deal a decisive blow.

The U.S. 10th. Mountain Division seized Vergato, 10 miles south of Castel Di Casio in an advance through rough hills and mountainous terrain.

Eighth Army troops, meanwhile, drove north toward the Argenta gap in the Adriatic sector for last gains leading to Ferrara and the Po River.

Polish troops, driving from captured Filigare, 10 miles south of San Pietro, only 13 miles east of Bologna, reached the Sillaro River, 12 miles from the city. On the right flank other Polish units captured a bridge over the Sillaro River and a road junction on the far bank.

The Poles also captured the village of Tracasa, Gallo and Mount Belle, commanding feature in the mountain fortress was taken.

Thousands of leaflets dropped in advance of the heavy bombing attacks warned citizens the Allies "have decided to fight and destroy the Nazi invader."

RUSSIA USING GERMAN LABOR IN THE BALKANS

Cleaning Up and Rebuilding War-Wrecked Cities In That Area

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

Washington, April 16 — (AP) — Soviet police organizations calling for transportation of Germans into Russia to help clean up and rebuild war-wrecked cities already have been put in effect in the Balkans, it was learned today.

Diplomatic information reaching Washington has disclosed that:

1. About 70,000 men and women of the 500,000 Germans in Rumania —where they fought with and supported the Nazi armies — have been removed to the Soviet Union. Originally Moscow wanted to take virtually the entire German population from Rumania, but Allied intervention against such a wholesale deportation reduced the figure to consider.

2. An estimated 100,000 Germans have been removed from Yugoslavia. Presumably they also were sent into Russia, but Marshal Tito, directing the operation himself and refrained from reporting on it to his western Allies.

CANADIAN TANKS ROLL DEEP INTO THE NETHERLANDS

Now Ten Miles Northwest of Arnhem and 15 Miles From Grebbe Line

By ROSS MUNRO
(C. P. War Correspondent)

With the 1st. Canadian Army, April 16 (C.P. Cable) — Canadian tanks rolling deeper into the Netherlands today, Lt.-Gen. Guy Simonds' Corps reached Otterloo, 10 miles northwest of Arnhem and 15 miles distant from the Grebbe Line, next apparent German defensive position.

Thousands of German troops were trapped in the pocket west of Arnhem and Apeldoorn after Canadian armor cars reached the Netherlands North Sea coast to cut communications from Holland to Germany.

Swinging west from the Apeldoorn highway after capturing the south end of the vital Apeldoorn dyke, Canadian units rolled over flat, open farmland, and now driving to the north and then westward, withdrawal toward the Grebbe Line, which is in full swing.

2nd Canadian Division Fights Fierce House-to-House Battle in Dutch City

With the Canadians in Geerningen, April 16 (C.P.) — Capture of the 2nd. Canadian Division fought house-to-house this day street by Geerningen, northeast of Geerningen, cutting the escape route in that direction, and the road to the east was dominated by the 5th.-Reconnaissance Regiment, Regiment, Sask. Light Medicine Hat, Alta., and by Polish armored troops.

The German defence of Geerningen—second largest city held by mid-afternoon—was entrusted to a mixture of German soldiers and Russians armed with bazookas, machine guns and rifles. The enemy had no artillery support—only a few light mortars.

The Royal Hamilton Light Infantry entered the outskirts of the city at 10 o'clock this morning and by 11 o'clock from "Assen. The Hamilton, Ont., regiment, the Cameron Highlanders of Winnipeg, and the Royal Regiment of Canada, Toronto, passed over the cleared battle area in the southern part of the city.

The Essex Scottish Regiment, Windsor, Ont.—which has been fitted ad brigaded with the Royal and the R.H.L.I.S. in frequent actions, notably in the Apeldoorn area, this week before the election, the official said. He explained that candidates in the by-elections to file nomination papers by May 1 is facilitate arrangements for the overseas vote.

Other formations continued the advance through the built-up area of the southern half of the city. Tanks and infantry-carrying vehicles throwers to burn the Germans from their cellars and strongpoints. From the windows of which snipers and machine-gunners fired. Columns of huge columns of smoke towered over the city Sunday afternoon with hundreds of fires started by shell building visible for several miles.

Prisoners taken in the fighting in good numbers since the Grande Canal was crossed Wednesday, including 800 Germans taken Saturday. Two Essex Scottish lost 70 to Groningen prison, and the R.N.L.I.S. took another 250 in a sharp fight Saturday. Two were reported, patients joined in the fight.

The prisoners included marines, S.S. men, airforcemen, air force personnel and 18 uniformed German horse buyers. There have been in the 5th, 8th and 6th and youths in their teens.

DEPARTMENT WATCHES BLAZE ON ISLAND

A smash fire racing across the dried grass on the south side of Zwick's Island resulted in the only serious call to the department during the weekend. Beginning during the early afternoon, the blaze was watched by firemen until evening to prevent its spread to trees, posts along the Island highway and fencing across the bay. No damage of any nature was reported as result of the blaze.

DISTRICT SOLDIERS REPORTED WOUNDED

Names of two Belleville district soldiers are listed in the Canadian Army casualty list released for publication today. Member of the Royal Canadian Ordnance Corps, Sgt. Arthur Lyle Masefield whose wife resided in Trenton, will be listed as seriously wounded, while Spr. Wilfred H. Hallen, whose wife resides in Picton, is listed as slightly injured.

BREAKS INTO CAFE, THEN PREPARES LUNCH

Men will go to considerable ends to appease their appetites, or so far as to commit robbery, and that's just what one did over the week-end when he broke into the Capitol Lunch, Front St., and prepared himself a meal before leaving to steal a quantity of cigarettes and chocolates.

Entrance was gained by forcing a rear door, as that particular restaurant does not cater to the public on Sunday when it remains closed. Mrs. Chris Kyriakos, wife of the proprietor of the Capitol Lunch, entered the cafe late Sunday night to stoke the kitchen fire, when she observed utensils had been disturbed in the kitchen. Further investigations disclosed a table had been set in the kitchen upon which were French fried potatoes and some cooked meat left, indicating the intruder had made a hasty exit. Potatoes were also strewn on the floor when the abandon, Police were notified and today an intensive investigation into the breakin and robbery. The value of the cigarettes and chocolate bars taken was not announced.

RESIDENT ATTACKED, BITTEN BY DOG

While walking along Pinnacle St. late Sunday afternoon Robert Rinard, Pinnacle St., was attacked and bitten on the left leg by a dog. The wound was of such a nature that the child was broken necessitating the isolation of a physician. Police were later informed and the owner of the dog in question cautioned to have the animal secured in the future.

BELLEVILLE POLICE ASKED TO ASSIST

Provincial Police in the Kingston district are seeking the whereabouts of Henry Valesquette, address not given, who is wanted on a charge of arson and robbery. It was learned at city police headquarters here today. Valesquette is charged with having set fire to a store at Plimouth, sedan, both the property of R. J. Penny, of Kingston. The robbery took place over the week-end and Valesquette is said by police to have driven off in the company service patrol during the robbery. He was apprehended by Constable Rennie patrol with Ontario license plate number 9-J-99 when taken.

POINT ANNE BLAST SHAKES BUILDINGS

Rattling of dishes and shaking of window panes of dwellings in the Point Anne district were reported to the police department as the result of a blast which shook the district around eleven o'clock this morning. Several calls were over the telephone were received at the Ontario Building Inspector asking if report of an earthquake had been received. The explosion was caused from Point Anne, however, when police officials announced quarry personnel had detonated a charge of explosives in the company quarry at Point Anne. The cause of the loud explosion had been carried to the city despite the shock the concussion detonated had not been greater than usual.

Believed Youth Took Own Life

Found shot to death with a .22 calibre rifle by his father, 20-year-old Harry Martyn, Trenton Reserve farmhand, is believed to have committed suicide on a farm owned by Stanley Hill, south of Shannonville. Young Martyn's body was discovered outside the Hill home by Saul MacFarlane of Shannonville on Sunday. Dr. R. E. Rokardi, Shannonville coroner, was notified and after investigating the fact, indicating the intruder had made a hasty exit. Potatoes were also strewn on the floor when the abandon. Police were notified and today an intensive investigation into the breakin and robbery. The value of the cigarettes and chocolate bars taken was not announced.

Provincial Constable James Driscoll investigated and was informed Martyn's parents resided at Sunderland, Ont. He had been employed as a farmhand with Mr. Hill for some considerable time. The rifle used by the deceased was the property of Mr. Hill, who used it for hunting purposes only.

PUBLIC MEETING
RE: RIVERSIDE DRIVE
The revised plans showing the layout of the proposed Riverside Drive have now been prepared.
A meeting of the property owners and all parties interested will be held in the Council Chamber, City Hall, on TUESDAY EVENING, APRIL 17th., at 8 o'clock, when opportunity will be given for all present to view the plans and become acquainted with the undertaking as proposed.
C. R. CLAPP, Chairman,
REGIONAL PLANNING COMMITTEE

Riverside Drive Project Subject Of City Meeting

All ratepayers in the city and particularly those in the Riverside property owners whose premises border upon the east river bank parallel with front Street from Bridge St. to the upper end are requested to attend a meeting at the city hall Tuesday evening when up-to-date plans of the Riverside Drive project will be explained by members of the regional planning committee, consisting under Chairman Clarence Clapp.

Preliminary plans for the Riverside Drive project call for eliminating the driveway northward along the river bank to enable a new parkway to be constructed around there, which, under this memorial, several feet over the telephone were received at the Ontario Building Inspector asking if report of an earthquake had been received. The explosion was caused from Point Anne, however, when police officials announced quarry personnel had detonated a charge of explosives in the company quarry at Point Anne. The cause of the loud explosion had been carried to the city despite the shock the concussion detonated had not been greater than usual.

City Pays Tribute To Memory of F.D. Roosevelt

Residents of the city through the media of various organizations paid final tribute over the weekend in the memory of the late President Franklin Delano Roosevelt, United States chief executive, whose death on Thursday last shocked the world.

Flags flew at all city theatres as a quiet reverence for two minutes at four o'clock Saturday afternoon was observed, the hush of the city music stopped in tribute to the late statesman.

In many churches of the city, Belleville clergymen paid glowing tributes in the course of their services, and in some offices special services were held to pay respect and honor the occasion.

Broadcasts devoted to the radio narratives of the burial services held at Hyde Park, where the late president was laid in his last resting place, and to subsequent programs that featured the funeral secred and other music of the departed statesman, eulogies and tributes were given by all walks of life in the United States, the south, and all commercials and comedy programs were suspended for the day.

RUSSIA USING

k. In addition, still another 40,000 persons, who originally lived in Bessarabia, now Russian, have been sent back to that former Rumanian province from Rumania. They fled from Bessarabia when the Red Army, and the Russian explanation for returning them is that they are displaced peoples being put back into their homes. This explanation has been accepted by the Nazis.

High as Agenda.

This problem of moving portions of enemy manpower into Russia may be high on the agenda of any talks Foreign Commissar Molotov at his Paris conference.

There is no doubt among diplomats here that Russia intends to use such manpower as she finds desirable.

The subject came up at Yalta but evidently without agreement. Nor is it anticipated here here many of Germans Russia would like to import.

Some of Mr. Truman's advisers are known to be opposed to the Russian plan, but the belief among diplomats is that Moscow will not be apprehended on charges of international crimes. They will appear in court tomorrow.

CANADIAN TANKS

Commander, Staff Captured.

An enemy regimental headquarters was overrun and the commander with some of his staff captured. They were taken by surprise by a sudden thrust by Canadian tanks.

While German infantry and anti-tank gunners still are holding Apeldoorn strongly, Canadian infantry have crossed the Ijssel River to the west bank near Deventer. Six days and days advanced south to clear the west bank of Ijssel from the east, and the junction of the Zuider Zee causeway and 12 miles southeast of Leeuwarden. Leeuwarden itself was occupied by Canadian armored cars yesterday.

All along the North Sea coast infantrymen were closing up to the sea. German marine troops fought hard in Groningen, the only enemy stronghold remaining in northeast Holland.

The 2nd. Canadian Division was well into the city and has captured at least half of it. Numerous prisoners were taken and the over-all count for the Canadian army yesterday was 1,400.

LATE EMMANUEL BOYER

The funeral of Emmanuel Boyer took place from his home, Herchimer Avenue, this morning to St. Michael's Church, where Requiem Mass was celebrated by the Rev. Father A. L. O'Donnell, who also said committal prayers at St. James' Cemetery.

The bearers were Messrs. Norman Curtiste, Ray Hamilton, Fred Fraser, Harold Borgeau, David Golka and Frank Chycylyzek.

MRS. T. (GRAHAM) TRUAISCH
(Formerly of Belleville)

Mrs. Timothy Truaisch died at her home, 802 Sixty-Eighth Street, Brooklyn, N.Y., on Sunday, April 16, after an illness of four days' duration.

The late Mrs. Truaisch was born in Belleville, and prior to her marriage she was Miss Mabel Graham, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Graham Graham; her father was an alderman here for many years. Mrs. Truaisch often visited this city and was here last summer. Many old friends will regret to learn of her death.

Mayor First Purchaser

Mayor Frank S. Follwell was the first purchaser of tickets for the Kinsmen Club draw, to be held during their summer carnival on the nights of July 18-19-20, this morning when he purchased book No. 6000 Victory Bond will be given away. Kinsmen president, Ex-Mayor Harry Rollins, sold Mayor Follwell the first book of tickets, as shown above making the sale. Books of tickets on the draw are being sold by all members of the Kinsmen Club with proceeds from their sale earmarked for Kinsmen service work.

'Tip' Tummon Displayed Great Gallantry in Duty Says Letter to Parents

Flight Lieutenant Evan Ernest (Tip) Tummon, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Tummon, Belleville, was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross for "great gallantry in the performance of his duty" his parents were informed in a personal letter from Colin Gibson, Minister of National Defence for Air.

The letter from the R.C.A.F. jolted him in congratulation," Mr. Gibson wrote "on the honor and distinction which has been conferred on you."

The official citation read: "This officer has flown on a variety of missions which have included fighter, ter patrols. His attacks on ground targets have always been effectively completed frequently in the face of intense opposition. On one occasion while attacking enemy rail traffic his craft collided with a tree, which did slight damage to the wing plane and rendered the flying instruments useless. Flt. Lt. Tummon made a skilful crash landing on reaching base. In the course of his operations he has been in charge of several locomotives."

Flight Lieutenant of the Force are proud of your son's fine service record," Mr. Gibson concludes in his letter.

The War Today—
Two Areas of Nazi Resistance Seen Developing for Last Stand

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
(AP War Analyst)

V-E Day is still on the wing and the signs are that it's going to take some cunning to bring it down.

The over-all picture in Europe is that of a Germany virtually slashed in two, with the last organized areas of Nazi resistance developing for a last stand. One of these will be a redoubt in the Alps, possibly stretching into Denmark, and the forces defending Berlin will figure on retiring towards the sea, when the Allied pressure against the capital becomes too strong. The other will be centered in Hitler's Alpine fortress about Berchtesgaden.

The Nazi leaders give every indication of determination to fight just as long as there are soldiers left who are willing to do battle—or die.

U. S. Like Gibraltar
On War Resolution

I was in Washington during the past weekend, and came away with a positive conviction which I should like to record here. It is that all elements of the United States government are standing outside politics as solidly as the Rock of Gibraltar in their determination to carry the global war through to unconditional surrender and to establish a just and enduring peace.

This unalterable determination is a fact which we may as well recognize. It is, of course, what you and I would expect. But there are those among our enemies who will try to glean a grain of hope for an easier peace as the result of the death of President Roosevelt.

Yen Papen, Millitarist, Prisoner

The capture of Franz Von Papen, Hitler's right-hand man in diplomatic matters, is one of the year's great coups. Von Papen is among the dozen most dangerous men in the world — and I doubt if that gives him high enough rating.

This arrogant Prussian aristocrat is the essence of the militarism which the Allies have been sworn to wipe out in Europe. He is one of the shrewdest schemers of our time and has been responsible for many of Hitler's most profitable ventures. He knows by razor-sharp craft when he can, but is utterly without conscience or principle, and throughout a lifetime of plotting has resorted often to violence to achieve his ends.

It was this one-time German Chancellor who placed the Nazi rope about Austria's neck, and he did much other invaluable bargaining for the head gangster, but of one thing we may be sure — he always was and always will be a double-cross his master, who came near to including Von Papen in the Nazi blood purge of 1934. If Von Papen is brought to the bar of war criminals, he certainly should be.

should know at once that the United States marched on to the fulfillment of her objectives.

This is certain and satisfactory that Japan's new premier, Admiral Baron Kantaro Suzuki, is the writing on the wall. Domei, the official Japanese agency, quotes him as admitting that Japan must expect America's war efforts against Japan to change because of Mr. Roosevelt's death.

LADY MOUNTBATTEN VISITS RAMREE

Lady Louis Mountbatten, wife of the Supreme Commander, South East Asia, recently visited troops of the 36th Division on Ramree Island. She is seen in the jeep of Major-Gen. C. E. N. Lewis, commander of the division, ready to start on her inspection tour of the casualty clearing station.

Germany in Defeat: A Visit to Cologne

By DAVID WOODWARD

Writing in the Manchester Guardian from Cologne

I knew Cologne before the war, but even with the aid of a guide-book and a plan of the city I could not find my way today from the Neumarkt to the Cathedral save by taking a bearing on the Cathedral spires, for the streets had completely ceased to exist and an uneven desert of rubble was all that there was to be seen.

For 15 minutes I clambered and fought my way over the ruins down the Hoenstrasse without even finding a building high enough to bear on its walls the name of the street. I was in or of the side streets. I came to the Cathedral, briefly inspected the nave carpeted with bricks and blocks of fallen masonry, and left hastily, for other bricks looked like detaching themselves at any minute from the edges of the holes which the bombs had torn in the roof.

I went outside to eat lunch and did get it on the Cathedral steps, because that was literally the only area where it was possible to stand upright without balancing oneself on piles of brick or dodging American troops as they drove down the river past the wrecked station and on to the ruins of the Hohenzollern, bridge, still presided over by two vain-glorious statues of the Hohenzollern emperors on bombastic-looking steeds.

I lunched off cold chicken and jam—the cold chicken having been obtained in return for 30 cigarettes from a young Dutchman of 19 whom we found in charge of a big farm near Krefeld from which its owner, a Nazi party leader, had fled.

The Dutchman, delighted to find someone who could talk to him even to pidgin—Dutch, told me that he had been taken away from Maastricht, his home town in Limburg four years before and put to work as a farm laborer in the company of scores of other young men and women from Maastricht alone.

As I sat I heard the air raid sirens go in the German-held suburb of Deutz across the river, and soon afterwards the noise of our planes. I sat on, listening to the raid noises until I noticed an American military policeman eyeing me wistfully. I gave him some bread and chicken and almost literally cast it upon the waters of the Rhine, for he told me that the American authorities had discovered in the city a huge wine cellar, from which issues were even then being made.

I went to see what I could see, and in response to shouts and knocks a small, aged German, looking like a retired gnome, appeared through a trapdoor in ruins and asked if 50 bottles of hock would suffice. I said it would. He added six bottles of Benedictine looted originally from France by the Wehrmacht in 1940 and disappeared into the ground again.

* *

The brief tour I am just finishing of the area of the northern Rhineland now in Allied hands has given me some indication of the relations between the Allied armies of occupation and the ordinary German in the street or the air raid shelter.

Although fierce battles between British and Germans, Americans and Germans are being waged a few miles from the front line it is possible to see a picture of behaviour between the victorious Allies and the defeated Germans beginning to develop. The basis of this is the fact that neither the British nor the Americans are good haters. They do not hate the Germans they have met.

The ordinary soldier knows little of the Nazi atrocities, is inclining to be sceptical of what he reads, and in any case his mind is so full of immediate things that he has hardly time to ponder on anything more than the day-to-day routine, into which the only Germans who fit are either the enemy across the lines or the pathetic civilian victims of the struggle.

The Germans in this territory have behaved well. Had there been any guerrilla warfare here, there is no doubt the Allied soldiers would have changed their minds, but in fact things have been so quiet that it was possible for me and my colleagues to drive miles and miles through Germany without seeing an Allied soldier and surrounded by people who a week ago were our enemies and who are now anxious to present themselves as our friends without the slightest incident or even misgiving.

Whether it has been the German policy or not to permit this situation to develop remains to be seen, but develop it has, and the fact that the Nazi leaders have removed themselves from the first, that the nucleus of successful guerrilla operations is lacking and second, that the Allied troops are not brought face to face with the most horrible human products of the National Socialist system.

First and foremost, apart from the behavior of the Germans themselves, the chief factor determining the attitude of every troops has been their sight of the bomb damage done to the German towns varying in size from Cologne, through Krefeld, Munchen-Gladbach, Aachen, down to the comparatively small places like Geve, Udem and Cleve. Our men with ready pity do not stop to think who started this. They do not stop to think that if the Germans had had their way this is how London or Manchester or tiny towns in the Cotswolds would have looked.

And it is not surprising that the Americans and Canadians do not stop to think that this is how the towns of the United States and Canada may look at the end of the next war. So horribly has the weapon of aerial bombardment, when they decided, been turned against the Germans that even the heroic Russians would scarcely venture to pity and pray for them.

Hundreds of war correspondents have tried to describe the horrors of these German towns, and I think all have failed. Everybody in England has seen bomb damage, has seen whole blocks completely destroyed, what they have never seen is an entire city the size of Manchester, looking like one or two of the worst-damaged blocks they have ever seen or have pictured.

"WE'RE GOING TO MAKE OUR SAVINGS FIGHT— AS Victory Bonds"

EVERY son of Canada in our fighting forces is giving his best—yes, sometimes his all—for victory. Without that full measure of support from us at home—which is their just due—their task would be desperate, difficult and well-nigh impossible. That is why every dollar that can be spared should be a fighting dollar.

The dollars are here in Canada today—whole battalions of them. There has been a steady increase in savings since the 7th Victory Loan. Those savings are needed now to help assure Victory.

And furthermore—Victory Bonds are backed by the finest security in the World—all the wealth and resources of The Dominion of Canada.

Victory Bonds are "liquid" assets—easily converted back to dollars if needed in an emergency.

Victory Bonds yield 3% interest—paid to you without fail half yearly.

Victory Bonds will act as a backlog of family resources after the war and will be on hand to help you realize your post-war plans.

You alone can make the decision. Think it through. Your savings will yield a higher return as Victory Bonds. At the same time they will be upholding our sailors, soldiers and airmen in their world-wide fight for freedom.

Gathering About Berlin

In the circle forming about Berlin is the greatest concentration of Allied power in armament and troops ever brought against a city. Germany never knew the like in all her checkered history as a warlike power. This warlike nations is being crushed by the war she caused to be.

In the Allied plan not only is the drive on Berlin but it is to carve up the German armies and destroy them as fighting bodies.

Never in history have so many men been taken prisoner as the Germans have lost to the Allies in the past few weeks and for the past year for that matter.

The East and West Allies will meet soon —then there will be the Battle of Berlin.

The German Wehrmacht, mighty instrument as it was in the early days of the war has suffered drains of the most colossal character and what has not been lost is being destroyed as an effective instrument of war by the might and the strategy of the Allied powers from West and East.

Germany at last is in the full grip of the situation which she always sought to avoid —a double front on east and west as well as that on the south in Northern Italy. What she feared all the while was inevitable because of German aggression and German geographic location. The very thing that gave her great strength and power in launching suddenly her blitzkrieg has to prove her undoing since Britain was able to hold the drive of the Huns in 1940 and afterwards when she waged war alone against the tyranny of the ruthless ambition of a leader, party and nation. Britain's stalwartness brought this about for Hitler's inability to crack Britain by the air in 1940 turned the greedy Austrian native, who had turned German to be a Fuehrer, to the Balkans since aggression always has to keep moving as if it lost its speed it would stall. So Hitler took on the East front in addition to the West and the collapse of Italy forced the Nazi leader to seize the Italian front.

The breaking up of German resistance which is now being effectively crushed as far as military control of the German army is concerned will lead in a short time it is expected to a proclamation by the Allied leaders that victory has been achieved. According to general military opinion seems to be what will happen while fighting will likely go on for some time in the pockets into which segments of German army groups have been pushed and will carry on. Allied operations in Germany may make it difficult for many of Hitler's S.S. groups to find their way into his so-called mountain fastness between Lake Constance and Berchtesgaden, the supervision of Hitler's of such an outlaw war of resistance in the hope of something ultimately turning up is one of the fanatical conceptions of such a brain as the Nazi leader's. Hitler and a fight from the Alpine redoubt of which so much has been guessed of late cannot turn back the victories that the Allies have rolled up, for the Allied victories that are being achieved are final victories that mean total victory. These Nazis will ultimately bring about their own destruction. For the world will look forward with victory and march forward since all the United Nations are determined to see that the steps taken will be permanent step forward, and so no tyrant will be allowed to develop his unholy plans.

H.M.S. Destroyers

The entire destruction, on April 1, of a Japanese convoy by a flotilla of British destroyers working off the Japanese-held coast of Sumatra and their bombardment of Japanese targets at Sigli, northern Sumatra, demonstrates the menace of an unsupported destroyer striking force. The operation is also evidence of the complete control of the British East Indies Fleet in the eastern part of the Bay of Bengal.

Destroyers are most dangerous when working as a compact little unit, unsupported by larger ships. But they have many other duties. They screen the battle fleet and protect convoys. They have made lightning strikes against priority shore targets. They have evacuated troops from Dunkirk and Crete and rescued key people from invaded countries.

Because of their varied work destroyers are, to a very important degree, the nursery ships of British naval leadership, and many famous admirals have risen from the ranks of destroyer captains. Admiral Mountbatten, Supreme Commander South East Asia Command, won his early fame as a destroyer captain, and throughout the Royal Navy his name is associated with the destroyers he commanded, particularly H.M.S. 'Kelly' and H.M.S. 'Javelin.' Another naval leader who won fame as a destroyer captain is Rear Admiral Vian, now commanding aircraft carriers, British Pacific Fleet. In the early days of the war, when in command of the 'Tribal' class destroyer, H.M.S. 'Cossack,' he rescued 200 British seamen from the German prison ship 'Altmark' hiding in Joking Fiord, Norway. In the second battle of Narvik, still in H.M.S. 'Cossack,' he led the destroyer flotilla which sank seven of the German destroyer force hiding in the fiord.

Mixed Operations

General Eisenhower's method of welding the top command by alternating British and American officers is by now familiar. Now the idea seems to have been applied at the point of contact with the enemy. The soldiers of the two countries have been mixed together in the field, and with no ill success.

When the British Sixth Guards Armored Division, with men of the American Seventh Airborne Division riding on their tanks, fought their rapid march forward together, the soldiers of the two nations functioned as a perfect team, and every type of opposition was dealt with in the appropriate way. The German infantry learned the way the British tanks roared in and dealt with them. If the Germans brought up guns or bazookas, the American infantrymen dismounted, outflanked the guns and cleared the way for the tanks to go on unhindered.

V-Type Trestles

A new constructional system enabling bridges, piers and other structures to be swiftly erected on any kind of terrain, on land or under water, is one of the most recent British triumphs in the "Engineer's War."

The system, specially designed by the London, Midland and Scottish Railway, consists of 74 light, strong and interchangeable parts called "V-type trestles," for the assembly of supporting pillars. By using the components in various ways it can be adopted to all types of foundations—rocky, or irregular surfaces or river or sea beds.

Construction can be carried out without any specialist gang and erecting equipment and no diver is required for underwater installation. The units are assembled and lowered complete with bracing and connections into the water. The L.M.S. has already trained 200,000 constructors who are given plans and instructions to other firms to enable them to manufacture the "V-trestles."

Avoid Conflicting Dates

(Owen Sound Sun-Times)

Local organizations, lodges, churches, etc., have repeatedly run up against the problem of conflicting dates when making arrangements for holding public events, keep a register of dates of other meetings with the result that the attendance was small and instead of making their ventures profitable from a monetary standpoint they have landed on the wrong side.

This sort of thing might quite easily be avoided. It has been suggested that the Board of Trade or city hall officials might keep a register of dates on which various forms of entertainment are to be held where they would be available to all well in advance and thus there would be an avoidance of conflicting dates with more satisfactory results to all concerned.

ILLNESS

Whenever one we love is ill,
All hearts take on the pain,
And nothing can be right, until
The family's whole again.

The busy town outside goes by
On every traffic lane,
And sets us wondering how and why
Unmoved it can remain.

What so important thus employs
Mankind beyond our ill
It cannot stop its strident noise
When one we love is ill?

No thought have we for joy or gain
Or feast or marriage bell
Or weal or woe or shine or rain
Till all at home are well.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS.

20 YEARS AGO

APRIL 16TH, 1925.

Miss Annie Lawler has returned home from Cobourg where she visited friends.

Dr. and Mrs. Coughlin have returned home from California where they spent the winter.

Mr. Archie McWade of Ottawa, spent the week-end holidays here with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Boyle, Foster Avenue.

Belleville Waterworks Department made a profit of over $11,000 in the year 1924 according to the annual audit completed by Messrs. Marshall and Auden, C.A., Stock, and he states that the excellent financial showing for the year is worthy of commendation and must be due to the efficient manner in which the undertaking is being operated by the manager, E. T. Austin, C.E.

30 YEARS AGO

APRIL 16TH, 1915.

Mr. Elmer Lick and his two daughters started for Saskatchewan afternoon and were met at the station by M. H. P. Ketcheson and conveyed to the home of Councillor of the Rev. J. Egan, North Front Street, who is Mr. Lick's father-in-law. Mr. Lick was pursuing a post graduate course in Germany when the war broke out and for several months he was detained a prisoner in that country.

The war stamp tax on letters, cheques and promissory papers went into effect yesterday.

Mr. William Thompson spent yesterday in Toronto.

The Rev. Albert Abel McCutcheon, 11 Sidney Street, this city, received the degree of Bachelor of Divinity at Victoria University convocation.

40 YEARS AGO

APRIL 16TH, 1905.

On Saturday evening a team of horses belonging to Mr. H. Russell of Prince Edward County, ran away from the market square. Turning up Pinnacle St., the wagon collided with a lamp near the skating rink and was badly damaged.

A few days ago Mr. Raymond Bishop saw a flock of ten geese at Sand Hill cove just below Massassaga and managed to drop three of them. Two of these were exhibited here today by Mr. Harry Day and they were fine specimens.

Miss E. B. Clarke, superintendent of the general hospital in Sarnia, is spending a few days at her home on Pinnacle Avenue.

The stock book of the Athletic Association was opened today. A committee will canvass citizens in selling the stock and it is hoped that they will receive a liberal response.

The Hon. Robert Reed left today for Ottawa to assume his duties as a member of the Senate.

Mr. Ed. Roy of this city is spending a few days in Peterboro with his father, Mr. R. M. Roy.

The steamer Toro will make her first trip of this port for this season, on Saturday next.

Flurry of Shots, Long Silence, More Shots: First Night on Okinawa

By ERNIE PYLE

Okinawa — (by Navy radio)—Our first night on Okinawa was unique. It was full of all the familiar sounds — the exciting, sad, weary little sounds of war.

It had been all months since I'd slept on the ground, or heard a rifle fired in anger, but it was about the same.

I was lugging along with a headquarters company of a regiment. We were on a pretty, grassy slope off in the northern part. Artillery was about a thousand yards ahead. Other troops were bivouacked all around us.

There were still a few snipers hiding around. An officer was brought in just before dark, shot through the arm. He was in good spirits.

Just at dusk three planes flew slowly overhead in the direction of the beach. We paid no attention, for we thought they were ours. But they weren't.

In a moment all hell cut loose from the beach. Our entire fleet and the guns ashore started throwing stuff into the sky. I've never seen a thicker batch of ack-ack.

As one of the marines said, there were over 1,000 guns. There was sky. Those Jap pilots must have thought the world was coming to an end to fly into a lead storm like that only 24 hours after we had landed on Okinawa. All three were shot down.

As deep darkness came on we got into our foxholes and settled down for the night. The countryside became as silent as a graveyard—dismal, dark, in between shots. The only sounds were war sounds. There were no country sounds at all. The sky was a riot of stars.

Capt. Tom Brown was in the foxhole next to me. As we lay there on our backs, looking into the starry sky, he said:

"There's the Big Dipper. That's the first time I've seen that since I've been in the Pacific." For, you see, marines of this division have done all their fighting under the Southern Cross, where our Big Dipper cannot be seen.

As full darkness came, flares began lighting the country around. It was over the frontlines. They were shot in already from battleships, timed to burst above our lines, and float down on parachutes. That was to keep the country lighted up, so we could see the Japs if they tried to infiltrate. It was one of their favorite tricks.

Then, after just about six several per minute from dusk until the moon came out full. It was very pretty, like fireworks, but flares were not needed.

Still later, long two or three ships kept up a slow shelling of the hills where the Japs were supposed to be. It wasn't a bombardment; just two or three shells per minute, fired from either battleships and I found that passing shells made a sound like "a locomotive shade rustle" on this side of the world as on the other.

Then there was only about 20 feet from where two field telephones and radios were set up, right on the ground. All night, officers sat on the ground at these four piles of communications and directed our troops.

But I lay there listening in the dark, the conversation was startling. It was the weird and the unthoughts and the actions exactly as I'd known them for so long in the infantry.

All night I could hear those low voices over the phone — voices in the darkness, voices of men running the war in the front.

Not long after dark the rifle shots started. There would be a little flurry far ahead, maybe a dozen shots. Then there'd be many minutes.

Then there would be another flurry. We got to like that. Sometimes. Then the blurt of a machine gun closer, and a few scattered single shots sort of like a fuse. That's a long silence. Spooky.

All night it went like that. Flares in the sky ahead, the crack of big guns behind us, then the passing shells, a few dark figures coming and going in the night, muted voices on the telephones, and all the shots, the mosquitoes, the stars, the feel of the damp night air under the wide sky — back again at the kind of life I had known so long.

The old familiar pattern, unchanged by distance or time or place. It was all around me. And the world. A pattern so imbedded in my soul that coming back into it again, it seemed to me as I lay there that I'd never known anything else in my life. And there are millions of us.

Gironde Estuary At Bordeaux Gets Terrific Pounding

London, April 15—(CP)—A fleet of 480 United States heavy bombers blasted German ground installations on the Gironde Estuary at Bordeaux for the third straight day today.

Again flying without fighter cover, they concentrated their bombs in the Pointe De Grave area on the south side of the estuary where the Germans had several coastal guns guarding entrance to the port.

Berlin residents, expecting their city to be transformed into a battleground at any minute, were kept in air raid shelters for two hours last night as the R.A.F. Mosquitos made three attacks on the capital. Airmen said that fires were still burning in the western suburb of Potsdam, which was bombed by 1,000 tons in Saturday night. One mosquito was lost.

More than 1,500 American heavy bombers attacked German pockets of resistance around Bordeaux yesterday in support of the surprise land sea assault to open the big French port.

They dropped more than 480,000 gallons of liquid fire on ground installations in the form of a new fire bomb called "Hitler's Hotcoz." Results were described as spectacularly successful. A highly inflammable jellylike substance is placed inside tanks fitted with detonators which explode on impact. The contents are splashed over an area of 80 yards. The bombs are a deadly weapon against enemy trenches, machine-gun nests, field gun positions and pill boxes.

During the weekend 81 German planes were shot up on the ground and in the air, bringing to 1,474 the number destroyed by Allied pilots in the last eight days.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

MALNUTRITION

Nutrition is the sum of the processes by which man, animal or plant absorbs or takes in and utilizes food. It includes digestion, absorption, assimilation, metabolism (oxidation or combination of the material assimilated), and excretion of the by-products and end-products of waste.

So the term nutrition means more than just vitamin, or having plenty of good food, and malnutrition or cuts in the homes of millions of well-to-do people in Yankeeland, last by Yankeeland I mean North America, not any one section of the continent.

Malnutrition means faulty or imperfect nutrition.

An infant, growing child, youth, adult or elderly person who does not have perfect nutrition and the health and vigor (vita) that goes with it, obviously has malnutrition then, for scientifically if not practically, anything short of perfect nutrition is malnutrition.

No I believe less than one in ten of the people in the entire North American continent have good nutrition. The other nine-tenth of us, babies, school children, fitterhop— mean children, the "teen" years, young adults, mature adults and elders suffer more or less from malnutrition. Everybody gets a very good deal on the calcium shortage, for one thing, and a good deal more on everybody's vitamin needs.

Some readers may have inferred from my remarks that I'm not fond of taking medicine. Little diary of Doctor Brady's — I should not say a threatened dose of castor oil and more power to the kid, says Dr. Doc Brady—is an angel compared with Dr. Doc Brady when stuffed other than his attending physician suggests a dose of any medicine at all. Then I take my calcium and vitamin ration along with breakfast every day. Sometimes I miss at that. Of course I regard it as essential food, not medicine — but I should get in my nice refined diet but I don't always. Then I take Because the refined diet of the average American is deficient in calcium, vitamin D and vitamin B-complex. I recommend this practice to Tom, Dick and Harry; knowing it can do no harm in any instance. The calcium is not so essential if one consumes not less than a pint of milk a day; otherwise it is as important as the vitamin D and B-complex.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Fitty-fifty

We love children and have tried to culminate our yearning by loving the children of our friends. Long after sixteen years of childless marriage my husband seems more dispointed. (Mrs. R. J. B.)

Answer—In about half of such childless marriages, according to the estimates of competent physicians, the husband is the sterile partner. Too often the wife is assumed to be the sterile partner and subjected to unnecessary treatment. The step 1rt in order is a microscopic examination of the husband's sperm to find the husband is fertile. This is a matter for a physician.

Posture

Thank you so much for the pamphlet on Hygiene for Girls. I enjoy the remarks you suggest for dysmenorrhea is breathing exercise. I know my daughter is a shallow breather and I suspect her posture is poor, deficiency I have tried to make her posture conscious with the Health Directors in schools would take more active interest in this phase of pupils' training and development. (Mrs. R. M. P.)

Answer—Thank you, Ma'am. The physical education department is merely tolerated by the public school authorities. I doubt it is so much a lack of active interest on the part of the physical education instructor as it is ignorance on the part of the public school authorities, the principal, the board of education and the health department, and apathy on the part of parents and even physicians who so often condemn the help the pupil evade physical education. The pamphlet "Hygiene for Girl and Health for Women," is available on request (a stamped is a real help) if you provide stamped envelope bearing your address. In this connection you will find a series of talks about posture.

MARSHAL OF FRANCE MYTH

That George Washington was a "Marshal of France" is one of the most persistent myths of American history. He never held either an American or French commission of any kind in the French Army and never was a marshal.

The Marshal of France myth was apparently first printed by a French writer named Alexandre Lamont. On January 31, 1786, after Lamont had sent him a complimentary set of his political writings, General Washington wrote from Mount Vernon to the Frenchman: "I believe you will be pardoned, I hope, if I take in your printed address 'To the patrons of the fine Arts.' I am not a Marshal of France—or of any thing else, but a Soldier, or till any Office under that Government—by any other whatever."

Later, however, Washington was made an honorary "citizen of France." In 1796, the National Assembly of France conferred on the first President of the United States the title of French citizen on the ground that he was "one of the friends of liberty."

The year before—August 26, 1792 —the National Assembly of France had conferred honorary French citizenship on Alexander Hamilton and James Madison, chief authors of the Federalist Papers, which had "amost had sent him to the guillotine with the first formal acknowledgment of Washington's friendship. The Mount Vernon to the Frenchman: "I shall endeavor to merit a place in the rank in your printed address 'To the patrons of the fine Arts.' I am not a Marshal of France—or of any thing else, but a Soldier, or till any Office under that Government—by any other whatever."

Later, however, Washington was made an honorary "citizen of Capt. Goddard Tells of Pacific War Experiences at Marmers' Service

Picton, April 16—Sailors, fishermen, their families and friends filled Calvary Valley church to capacity last night for the annual Marmers' Service. A feature was the presentation of gifts to the British War Victims' Fund, many individuals and representatives of organizations presenting donations which totalled $1,129.

The service included a memorial service for all deceased sailors and mariners of the county, with special tributes being paid Leading Seaman Orville Gerrow and Chief Petty Officer A. E. Lightfall, county man who has been three times in the war. Photos of these men were on the pulpit, and in memory of those who died during the year in the Lake Trade, Post was sounded by S. G. Lodge, bugler, by a member of Alliance the Revelle. Rev. E. V. C. Lewis, minister of the church, was in charge of the service.

Sitting tribute, C.P.O. Lightfall laid his life when the corvette Alvarez was sunk during the battle of Grimson gave his life in 1941, when a destroyer on which he was serving, was torpedoed while returning to England after helping Russia convoy for the invasion of North Africa.

The service opened with a flag-raising ceremony, the red ensign being raised by A.B. George Walsh, RCNVR.

Scripture was read and prayer offered by Mr. Lewis who also paid tribute to the late Mrs. Picton, president of the Marmers' Auxiliary. Mrs. Lockyer gave a concert trio. Mrs. H. Scott was at the organ and Mrs. W. J. Fennell at the piano for the singing of Marine Hymns.

Philip Dodds was in charge of presentations to the British War Victims' Fund. He read a list of donors, with Mr. Snider accepting the gifts. These included $50 from the school children of Prince Edward, which had been raised as a result of a draw. The offering at the service was also presented to the Fund.

The setting for the service was an impressive one. Fish net draped the altar and choir loft and the organ. Pictures of ship's flag decked the gallery. A model lighthouse flashed its rays. Ship's riding lights gleamed through the setting. Life preservers were on the altar along with a variety of ship models, compasses, an illuminated binnacle and other nautical emblems and flags.

The maiden shot to open the service was that which had been used on the corvette Regina, which was later sunk. The bullet-riddled flag was sent home by Keith Danbury, RCNVR.

Special tribute was paid Mr. Dodds who had been responsible for arranging the service, and the presentations for the B.W.V. Fund. The service closed with the lowering of the ensign and the hymn, God Save with You, and We Have Been at Sea.

Tells of War Experiences

A sailor for fifty years, Captain Charles Arthur Gerrow was third Captain with the Canadian Pacific Company, now residing at Carrying. related his experiences in the present war, when a sailor on the Empress of Britain liner he evacuate civilians from Hong Kong and Singapore, and to carry troops from Capetown, Australia to Africa.

The summer of 1940, when the Empress of Japan now known as the Empress of Scotland, was going from Liverpool to England, Capt. Goddard was attacked by a German bomber, he recalled.

"The first bomb just missed our boat, but the concussion wrecked the refrigerating system and some of our motors. The second and third bombs just missed the decks", he said. "Our men finished that journey standing at the motors with cans of oil, pouring it on the bearings so that we could get to port. We had taken on 180,000 eggs at South Africa. When the decked, we found that 130,000 of them had been broken.

"My last drastic affair was at Singapore", related Capt. Goddard, "I'll never forget that period and very. We left Scotland and were joined by the Exeter. At noon the day before we reached Singapore, a large bomber came at us straight out of the sun. We couldn't see him and couldn't hear him because he had his motors off. The first we knew, the bombs started falling all around us. Luckily, none of us was hit, and he was out of range before we could fire at him.

Critical Situation

"We reached Singapore the next day at daybreak. Dog-fights were going on all over. We could see that the situation was critical. Anti-aircraft was blasting away, and lumps of debris of searchlights sweeping the sky. We could hear the whine of dive bombs. I heard one coming pretty loud and it landed close by, shaking the ship from stem to stern. The ship's hose was on deck in case of incendiaries, but soon it was in sufficiently light. We hurried to shore, but nothing could be done to fight the fires raging in warehouses. The Japanese bombs scattered as they hit, it being their aim to kill as many persons as possible. I dug 40 pieces of shrapnel out of my ship later.

"The Singapore radio ordered that all women and children be evacuated. Our ship had accommodation for only 500 but 700 got on. The sorrow and distress I saw that day was pitiful. They had parted up what they could and left husbands and fathers behind to an unknown fate. Fortunately, we had an efficient hospital staff. These people were with me for 50 days. A number of babies were born on the boat.

Sirens Destroyed

"Early the next morning, another bomber came at us out of the sun. One bomb landed behind us, one in front, and one behind the next ship. I believe I was the last to see a bale of rubber or a case of pineapple leave Singapore. It was awful to see the warehouses with their stocks of rubber, copra and coal blow up and burn.

Capt. Goddard recalled seeing a destroyer blow up off the coast of South Africa, and a freighter meeting a like fate. It was later learned that 1,000 men had been killed there.

Capt. Goddard had been at Hong Kong evacuating civilians when the sudden scare swept the East 18 months before the city was actually taken. He helped evacuate civilians from Kyang in late 1940 when the Italians were threatening to cross the border of the country.

Capt. Goddard said he could not estimate the number of mines he had sailed over, but he ran away to sea as a boy of 13. He started his career on sailing ships and had visited every part of the world. During the present war he had sailed over a total of more than 200,000 miles. Capt. Goddard has been close to death with dangers ever in. Recently he went through 3 wars, has been bombed, whirled through typhoons, fired on by cannon, but has never had a ship sunk under him. "It's a most unnatural career," he concluded.

College Hill Women's Group

The April meeting of the group was held at the home of Mrs. W. Mc. Sharon, Glen St. Mrs. J. L. Bird gave the Scripture reading. Three letters from service men expressing thanks for boxes received were read, also a letter of thanks from Mrs. Rodgers who is in Italy with the Red Cross. Several articles for the layette were brought in as a result of four other donations. Sewing activities in the group have been curtailed somewhat of late owing to boxes received from local shops and headquarters that no new materials are to be purchased for civilian use until further notice.

Mrs. Storms gave an interesting talk on "Hymns and Their Origin." Many of the hymns sung in this country can be traced back to the year 1,000. A. D. Some have been arranged by modern writers but the main thought is that of the Original writer.

Refreshments were served by the hostess and her helpers.

19th Parliament Will Prorogue This Afternoon

Ottawa, April 16 (CP) — The life of Canada's 19th Parliament will expire this afternoon by proclamation signed by the governor-general. The legislation passed during the short session which began March 5 will include money bills necessary to provide war funds until a new parliament sits.

The proroguing ceremony will be performed by the clerk following the reading of a short speech from the throne by Gov.-Gen. Viscount Alexander of Tunis. The Governor-General in his speech will announce the proclamation, which will follow, also will officially fix June 11 as the date of a dominion election, as already announced by Prime Minister Mackenzie King.

Already the wheels are turning in preparation for the poll, the first national election in Canada in five years. Mr. King has been Prime Minister and the chief opponents, Progressive Conservative House Leader George Drew and Leader of the C.C.F. M. J. Coldwell will be busy during the campaign. The latter is also the Francisco World Security Conference.

Likely to Fill Senate.

It is expected that before he leaves Mr. King may do some shifting among his ministers. He will also fill Senate vacancies and nominations to vacancies in the Senate.

In the cabinet there is one actual vacancy, Hatfield Bermuda, and three potential vacancies, the Navy, Resources and Statistics portfolios, held by Angus Mc. Mackenzie, Resources Minister, Ilsley and Elsie Gordon, Statistics.

Larty have announced they will not run, Re-election and guarantee believers Mr. King may choose to find successors for them at once.

Today's proclamation will be the signal for the launching of the federal election campaign, and one that will be one of the most unusual in Canadian political history. The addition to the fact that the Federal and Ontario elections will be held on the same day, Prime Minister King, Mr. Graydon and Mr. Coldwell will be absent from Canada for a good part of the campaign.

It is expected that the World Security assignment may take from a month to six weeks. The Prime Minister has said he expected to be absent for a month at San Francisco. Because of this he may not be able to attend his own nomination in his old constituency of Prince Albert, Sask.

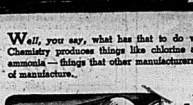
C-I-L GROWS BECAUSE CANADA NEEDS CHEMICALS

Industry in Canada had a lot of growing pains between 1915 and 1939. That was a busy quarter-century. During that period we were building the industrial structure and acquiring the "know-how" of making things that serve the nation.

Value of Canadian Industrial Production 1939 $3,051 Million



Well, you say, what has that to do with Chemistry? just this — that Chemistry produces things like chlorine and sulphuric acid and synthetic ammonia — things that other manufacturers simply must have as ingredients of manufacture.

1. For example: The value of newsprint produced in Canada was more than trebled between 1915 and 1939. The makers of newsprint — which is one of Canada's major industries — needed chlorine in order to bleach the pulp to produce white paper. C-I-L makes the chlorine from salt brine.

2. Another: Production of textile materials in Canada had grown by 1939 to almost 125% of the total volume of Canadian manufactured goods. C-I-L produced the chlorine for bleaching processes and the sodium used to give fast shades and the caustic soda needed in the making of rayon.

3. And then Automobiles: 89,944 motor vehicles in Canada in 1915 jumped to 1,439,248 in 1939. C-I-L introduced the "Duco" and "Duhe" finishes that helped bring costs and prices down, by cutting finishing time from 56 days to 4 hours. Other chemicals, helped to put 10 times more mileage into tires, and anti-oxidants put more power into gasoline.

Chemistry is the hard-working, kind man of industry, helping industries to grow and provide more jobs; helping to create national wealth; helping to make better things for better living.

GEORGE DREW

to all with Relatives and Friends Overseas

ARRANGEMENTS have been made by the Conservative Party of Ontario to mail to Armed Forces overseas in the coming Canada election by soldiers' vote a leaflet box for the candidates of their own district. The correspondent will have been supplied by the Ontario Conservative Party and not been made for any other purpose. The Government has refused to supply similar facilities during the war. What is equally important is that those who are fighting for the liberties of the home, the right to vote and to choose the Government of the land of the home of the brave, they should vote. That can only be done if those supply them with information. Many servicemen have been unable to vote in the last election because they did not know to which constituency they belonged. Many others, not knowing Canada closely, did not know for which candidate they should vote. The Conservative Party of Ontario, in offering these facilities, is not attempting to influence the votes of servicemen, by editorial comment, or otherwise, but is merely providing the means by which they may make up their minds on the basis of full information.

One of the things which will cause the greatest difficulty in the minds of those overseas, particularly those who live in large cities, is to determine which Riding they live in. Maps will be available, but even the best map cannot be forever clear when the voter has been away from home for a long time. The Conservative Party of Ontario is anxious to overcome that difficulty will be increased because of the distance between the boundaries of Dominion and Provincial Ridings.

I should suggest that you write immediately to friends or kin with whom you can be more communicative and tell them the Riding in which they live and give them what information you can about the party and the candidates in the Riding where they are entitled to vote.

I should mention that every member of the Armed Forces overseas will be entitled to vote. That is absolutely their right as voters. They have performed their duty as citizens. One of the duties of home is not only to make sure that the duties of the men overseas are done, but also to do everything possible to make sure that they are able to vote with knowledge of the real issues in the election.

If you have not received from the Conservative Party of Ontario a leaflet box with the proper addressing, if for some other reason you have not received information which you require, please write at once to the Conservative Party of Ontario, Toronto, and they will have no trouble to do what is necessary. In the meantime, write your friends overseas. Tell them to vote. Remind them that they are not to be influenced by editorial comment, or otherwise, but to make up their own minds on the basis of full information. Tell them to write to the candidates and say further information will be supplied.

Yours sincerely,

George Drew

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

ENGAGEMENT NOTICE

The engagement is announced of Phyllis Madeleine, daughter of Mrs. Wright and the late Reverend G. G. Wright to Flight Lieutenant William Stuart MacLeod, son of the Reverend A. A. MacLeod and the late Mrs. MacLeod of Halifax, N.S. The wedding will take place quietly in Ottawa on May the fifth.

Miss Marion Mumby spent the weekend at her home in Deloro.

PO. James Cathcart, Mount Hope, spent the weekend at his home, 80 Highland Avenue.

Mr. W. H. Moorman, Ann Street, left Saturday to spend the summer in Neepawa, Manitoba.

Albert Bunton is home from overseas with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Bunton, Albion Street.

LAC. Bill Lynch, R.C.A.F., spent the weekend with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Lynch, Pine Street.

Dr. Chas. Adams, of the Mayo Clinic, Rochester, Minn., is the guest of Dr. J. J. Robertson.

Dr. J. J. Roberjson has returned to the city after attending a meeting of the Industrial Accident Prevention Association in Toronto, last week.

Messrs. Dick Fitzpatrick, Don Boyle, Sonny Donovan, Tom Mascaro and Jack Boyle, attended the St. Michael's-Moose Jaw Hockey game at Arena Gardens, Toronto, Saturday.

Rev. E. M. Cook was attending the annual meetings of the United Church Home Missions Board in Toronto during the past week and addressed the Board on rural life matters.

FASHION FLASHES

A SHINING SUCCESS is plastic patent, which seems inkier and shinier than regular laminated leather. A pretty pouch in inky black plastic patent is set in a frame of twisted lucite which continues on to form a big clasp.

VERY GOOD with a tailored suit is the shoe bag of reptile or snakeskin with glove trimmed to match. Many glove departments are featurning gloves with palms of suede and backs of alligator or snakeskin in colors.

A TREASURE worth searching for is the dress of pure silk or linen, of which many shops are showing a few examples. Pure silk in black with a blue-pink circus horse and clown face design is used for a charming afternoon frock made with a draped tunic top and a softly draped slim skirt. Nice for evening, dressed up with big black hat and long gloves.

SIGN OF THE TIMES is the amount of detachable detail in white on many expensive frocks. Navy blue crepe is used for a simple dress with sleeves puffed at the elbow and a row of button trimming at the shoulder line. The self-covered buttons are used to hold a detachable eyelet pique plastron which has a flared peplum held by the belt of the frock.

SLIM LINES feature the new house robes and coats ready for pleasant home hours during Spring. A collarless neckline marks a blue crepe housecoat, its line long and slim, made with a centre panel of white crepe that marks either side of the bodice and continues down the centre of the skirt. A large blue satin frog ornament is the fastening at the centre waist.

Easiest to dress up or down, and very smart on its own is the slim suit in moire or faille, shown in black or navy. By itself a smart two piece dress, the addition of a lace jabot, dickey or blouse makes it a charming, dressy suit. Replacing the usual simple button with something special in enamel or rhinestones is an easy way to enhance such a suit.

How to Be Tops in Beauty

By HELEN FOLLETT

IF THERE IS anything that makes a man furiously mad at his wife it is to have her go round with her slip showing beneath the hem of her dress. He may be as sloppy as all get out about his own appearance, but he wants his wife to be spick and span. If he observes a bit of lipstick on her teeth, he will be as scornful as if she had stolen pennies from children. Men are like that.

As for the fourteen-year-old son, just getting opinions of his own, he is likely to be all too frank with his criticisms. He may even hint that he would like to have his mother get a new hat, and please have it smart. Other boy's mothers wear smart hats.

Whether women dress to please the men is a question that has never been settled. Some do, some don't. But men have ideas that are worth considering.

Importance of Neatness.

Some men like to see their women in gay, bright-colored clothes, but the more conservative husbands feel that red frocks and looney hats make a woman conspicuous. If a wife can dress to please herself and her husband, that is just dandy.

Neatness of appearance is a requirement that precedes chic, though one can have both, if one has taste and a mind cultivated along the clothes line. Loading on the make-up is a grave mistake; it makes a woman look older. The purpose of make-up is to make one look fresher and younger.

Apply Make-up Sparingly.

The formula for good looks calls for a complexion that is of fine texture, fresh and clean looking, with rouge and lipstick applied sparingly. It calls for hair that has gloss and a live look, that is arranged according to the prevailing mode. Another requirement is an erect figure that carries clothes that are not just the unusual run of the fashion mill.

Health Hints to Lightweights

With wide shoulders and bosomy bodices, the skinny girl is not as pleased with herself as she might be. Present day notions of the ideal figure are a far cry from the period of the boyish shape and the tight brassiere. Then the plumpies gathered around the ready one, clasped their hands in despair, exclaimed "Oh, if I were only as thin as you are!" Only our senior readers recall those dear, foolish days, and when they do they laugh at themselves.

It is worth while for the heavyweights to slimmer down, and for the lightweights to take on curves. Normal proportions make the selection of clothes an easy matter. Individuals who are thus blessed are beloved by the insurance companies; they live longer, suffer less from illness than the undernourished or the ones who have a crush on the bathroom scales.

Some of the girls who are not supplied with the usual amount of adipose padding eat fairly well, but only those food elements that don't build fat appeal to their appetites. They love pickles and green salads, get goosefiesh at the sight of cereals or sweets. They don't get enough calories and, almost invariably, they belong to the hurriers who use up energy faster than the body motors can create it.

If they will follow a few simple rules, they will start building a silhouette that is less flat and angular.

More fats, starches and sweets are what the skinnies need. Breakfast should consist of fruit or fruit juices, a hot cereal, maybe a few slices of bacon or an egg. Their teeth go on edge at the thought of stoking up the first thing in the morning. Cocoa or chocolate is better than tea or coffee, more nourishing. If coffee is taken, add plenty of sugar and cream; they will put fat on the ribs. A quart of milk a day will supply calcium and other elements necessary for well-being.

Dates, figs, bananas, and nuts are what the reedy dollies need though citrus fruits must not be overlooked.

When the quest for extra poundage starts, endeavor to slow up on activities. No rushing. Exercise is necessary, but should not be vigorous. During the summer season, have sun baths on the beach.

Long hours of sleep are essential; it is during sleep that Nature makes repairs. Rest at the first sign of fatigue. Thin individuals are nearly always of the drive-yourself type.

By adding a little more fat-building material to the diet, by getting plenty of fresh air and sunshine, by taking life easy, and getting nine hours of sleep every night, the lightweight can take on two pounds a week.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

The Christening

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

1. My husband and I had our baby christened a week ago, and next week the minister is coming to call and to bring the certificate of baptism. How should I address this minister when he comes to call? How should I introduce him to the members of my family who have not met him?

2. Should I shake hands with him when he arrives, and when he leaves? Would you give me a few suggestions as to what I can talk about? Would it be proper to refer to the christening ceremony in any way?

3. I would also like to inquire about how my social letters should be addressed. My husband is the only one who addresses his letters to me as "Mrs. Henry Bigelow." My relatives and friends address their letters to me as "Mrs. Elizabeth Bigelow." Which is correct? When I am asked my name I always say "Mrs. Henry Bigelow", but they always write "Mrs. Elizabeth Bigelow." Why? In the future, what should I say when I am asked my name?

E. B.

1. If your minister is a Doctor of Divinity, you address him and introduce him as "Doctor Davis"; if not, as "Mr. Davis." When he arrives you shake hands cordially with him, and say, "How do you do, Mr. (or 'Dr.') Davis. It is so nice to have you come to see us." Introducing him to your mother, say, "Mother, this is Mr. (or 'Dr.') Davis." And, for example, to a married sister, "Dorothy, this is Mr. (or 'Dr.') Davis." Then to the minister, say, "my sister, Mrs. Carter"

2. Yes, as hostess, you should shake hands with your guest when he arrives and when he leaves! (And when he leaves add to your "goodby," "Thank you so much for coming. It was such a pleasure to all of us. And thank you too for bringing the certificate.")

Yes, after the introductions, it would be a proper and easy and natural way to start the general conversation by talking about the christening ceremony. Then it would be natural too to chat about church activities, how much you enjoy belonging to his church, how helpful his sermons are to you, If he has a family, inquire cordially about his wife and children. I'm sure there won't be any dearth of conversational material!

3. I wish I could tell you why people cling perversely to using a woman's first name after "Mrs."! You do give your name correctly, should continue to say "Mrs. Henry Bigelow." Perhaps you could devise some gracious way of hinting to your relatives and friends your preference for the correct form "Mrs. Henry Bigelow." An excellant way is to blame it on a "discussion you've had (even if you haven't!) fo example, "Miriam and I had such a lively discussion yesterday. She said that it is correct to address a letter to a married woman as 'Mrs. Mary Brown.' I said it should be 'Mrs. Henry Brown.' So I stopped in the library this morning and looked it up in an etiquette book. I'm right...and I must remember to tell her she owes me the dollar we bet, to be given to the Red Cross!"

Use Your Husband's Full Name

For several years before my husband's death, we were separated. At the time we separated I started to use my name as "Mrs. Helen Palmer." Since my husband's death, I have been sharply criticized by my friends for using this form of name, and for continuing to use this form now. They say I should use "Mrs. John Palmer." Are they right about this?

H. P.

Yes, ma'am, your friends are right about this. Although, at the time of your separation from your husband, you arbitrarily changed you name to the incorrect form, I suggest that now, with the fortification of the excellent advice of your friends, you use the proper form, Mrs. John Palmer.

WEDDINGS

WADSWORTH—HARPER

A particularly lovely Spring wedding took place in Trinity-St. Andrew's United Church, Brighton, on Saturday, the fourteenth of April, when Lois Evelyn Harper, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert P. Harper, of Brighton, became the bride of Donald Gifford Wadsworth, only son of Mr. and Mrs. G. D. Wadsworth, of Sherbrooke, Quebec. The Rev. J. E. Anderson was the officiating clergyman.

Lilies and carnations adorned the church for the occasion. Mrs. Arthur Alexander presided at the console of the organ, and Mrs. Frank Hamilton, as soloist, rendered delightfully "Because I Love You Dear" and "Always".

The bride entered the church on the arm of her father to the strains of the Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin. She was radiantly gowned in a wedding dress of white duchess satin and net. The satin top was fashioned with sweetheart neckline, long tight fitting sleeves that ended in points over the wrists, and tiny satin covered buttons from the neckline to the waist. A full sweeping net skirt, accentuated with satin appliqued designs, fell in graceful folds from a basque-tight bodice. Her bridal veil of tulle fell to the floor from a striking satin pleated coronet. She carried a bouquet of Better Time roses.

Miss Shirley Harper, as her sister's maid of honor, and Miss Winona Best, as bridesmaid, wore lovely gowns of faconne crepe in pastel green and lavender hues respectively. They were made in long torso effect with full skirts, sweetheart necklines and three-quarter length sleeves. Atop their heads nestled dainty Juliet caps in toning shades. The maid of honor carried pastel pink roses and the bridesmaid, yellow roses.

Mr. Edgar Stevens, of Montreal, Quebec, was groomsman, and the ushers were Capt. Donald Long, Ottawa, and L.Cpl. Keith G. McLaren.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the White house, Brighton. The bride's mother chose a poudre' blue crepe ensemble black accessories and corsage of pink roses and sweetpeas. The groom's mother wore aqua crepe accented with navy blue accessories and corsage of pink carnations.

On the wedding trip to New York City, the bride selected a grey tailored suit flecked with Chinese red. She wore a black hat misted with veiling accentuated with tiny Chinese red bow designs. Her accessories were black and her corsage was of red rosebuds.

Out-of-town guests were from Perth, Pembroke, Ottawa, Montreal, North Hatley, Quebec, Toronto, Belleville, Bailieboro, Newmarket.

Mr. and Mrs. Wadsworth will take up residence in Montreal.

The Marry Go Round

Psychology of The Cigarette

The cigarette shortage may prove a greater menace to domestic happiness than the meat-shortage. You can invent substitutes for meat, but try to find a substitute for a man's favorite smoke!

A woman who smokes not only has to cut down or cut out her own solace, but has to endure the nervous tension and audible sufferings of the man in her life. It is even worse if he tries to give up smoking altogether, as many men have done since the beginning of the tobacco shortage.

Take away a man's tobacco and you loose his untamed, aboriginal nature! No man is quite civilised before his first morning cigar or cigarette. I have often wondered how women endured life before men took up smoking—and golf!

I don't care what a man smokes —Havanas, stogies, cigarettes, a brier or a corn-cob pipe—so that he goes behind a smoke-screen at least once or twice a day. Every man must have some escape valve for his superfluous energy, and in these days for his nervous tension. And nothing else has ever yet been discovered quite so innocent or so effective as smoking.

Smoking is not pretty, it is not particularly good for you, and it does not tend to make a man or a girl more kissable. But it has done more than any other one thing to preserve the peace of the home and prevent quarrels, boredom—and even divorces. Perhaps if Hitler were an inveterate smoker we might never have had a war! He might never even have thought of writing "Mein Kampf."

Before smoking was introduced, murder was the favorite morning pastime and outdoor sport. When a monarch's breakfast disagreed with him, he ordered a dozen or so of his subjects beheaded to relieve his blood-pressure and pep up his spirits—just as a man takes a few puffs of tobacco today.

A wife never could be sure when her husband banged the front door and departed in a huff whether he would return with his own head —or with his enemy's head. But she knew there would be a fight. Instead of writing sonnets or buying a girl orchids, a lover went out and killed somebody, to prove his love.

There was simply no other outlet for a man's temperament, his inhibitions and his complexes, except fighting and drinking. But smoking and golf have brought solace and relaxation to the souls of men—and women.

Stick a man's favorite smoke in his mouth and, no matter how great his grievance, his worry or his anger, the effect is as magical and soothing as though you had handed a baby its bottle. Slowly his tautened nerves uncurl, his problems go up in smoke and over his troubled spirit steals a sweet calm. A restive animal has been transformed into a nice, tame husband—at peace with all the world!

Now, if Hitler had only been a devotee of the weed and had his "favorite smoke" like each of the "favorite smoke", how different the world might be.

Advice to the Lovelorn

She Wants to Send This Man Back to His Wife and Family

Do you agree with me when I say I think the writer of this letter is a good woman, in spite of what she writes about herself? And I wish heartily she'd meet some decent man who'll appreciate married life together.

Here's her story.

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"I'm 26 years old and have made my living since I was twelve. By hook or crook I've managed to live, and being a girl that hasn't been easy—I've just had to take it.

"Men have been my meal ticket most of the time. But I'm tired of all that. I want to break with a certain man I've been going with—I've never felt just this way before, even if the men were married. But this case is different.

"He has a nice little wife and a bunch of dear little kids who will suffer more than I think fair, if I don't drop him. I've told him many times to go home to his wife and children. At first I didn't know he was married. When I found out that he was, I didn't feel comfortable about taking the bread away from that little family.

"I've done everything I know to get rid of him. Not been in when he called, have hung up the receiver when he phoned. He walks up and down in front of my house waiting for me. He torments me with his attentions. He's mailed me money, and I've mailed it back to his wife anonymously, because she and the children need it more than I. I know I'm no good, but the man's family is nice, and I won't want his wife to lose faith in human nature as I have. I want to send him on his way. I want to get rid of him.

Bad Luck"

The best way to get rid of a weak, irresponsible man such as you describe is to hurt his vanity. Tell him he bores you and you find others more interesting. When the ego of such a man is bruised and treated with contempt, he's mighty apt to go back to the Little Woman and the "kids" from whom he is sure to receive necessary salve for his bruised feelings.

You can of course wear out his patience by continuing your absent treatment—hanging up the phone when he calls you, refusing to open the door, etc. There are more drastic means such as reporting his annoyance, but it's not well to invoke them, if milder methods will work.

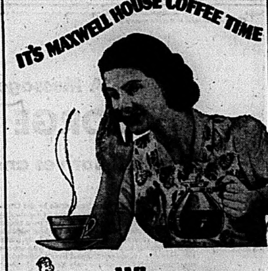
Fascination of Mink



(St. Thomas Times-Journal)

A New Jersey woman, advertising for a servant, stated that she would allow the hired girl to wear her mink coat on days off. She had a flood of applications for the job, notwithstanding the scarcity of womanpower. The majority of the applicants did not ask what the wages were, but they did want to know about the size of the coat.

Mink appears to have a fascination for women. It is the ambition of almost every woman to possess a mink coat. We are sure there are lots of fur coats that look just as nice, but the ladies prefer mink. Perhaps it is because mink coats are so expensive. There is a queer quirk in human nature that causes men as well as women to hanker for things that cost a lot of money.

And why are mink coats so expensive? Simply because the animals that bear what are called "mink" fur have been trapped and killed to such an extent that they are relatively scarce. Mink may get more expensive as times goes on; it may even become almost extinct until trapping is forbidden. Then some other fur will take the place of mink as the ambition of every woman—because it is the most expensive and because she wants to outshine Mrs. Jones next door.

Hitler's Refuge To Be Eagle's Nest in Alps?

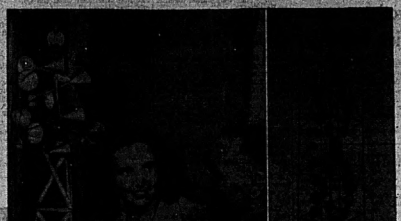
(By Phil Deutsch, in the Milwaukee Journal)

With the loitering Third Reich leaders about the Berchtesgaden area, Adolf Hitler and the Nazi party attention, the rugged mountain region of southeastern Germany has become the interest of the world as it has, scientifically, never been before.

This region of the Bavarian Alps, nearly Switzerland, cuts a path through tourist age, which attracted thousands because of its crisp, bracing climate, its beautiful scenery, and how the mountain strongold of a crazed dictator. It is the biggest wild area in which Hitler's military legions are accepted to make their last stand, and to which dictator himself may retire to seek temporary solace in the security of his mountaintop citadel, the Kehlstein, perched on a rocky promontory on the mountain but 80 miles from Berchtesgaden in Hitler's Pass, the gateway through the Tyrolean Alps, which rises up to 7,000 feet above Germany's defiant. In the First World War, it is the vital link between the Nazi force in Germany and those which slowly are being pushed North in Italy.

Beyond Pass, although it is only one of 30 passes in which the Alps can be crossed, is the only point where the 600 mile long chain of mountains can be crossed by traversing a single ridge and it is the only little between Germany and Italy. It was at the tiny village of Brennero, in the past, that Hitler and Benito Mussolini held their historic conference which led to the Second World War. To what more fitting spot could the dons of the dictators be sealed?

Hitler's personal retreat in the mountains has been transformed into a formidable fortress by the German engineer, Dr. Fritz Todt, who built the West Wall. "Haus Wachenfeld", the best known of the Berchtesgaden retreats, once was a modest mountain home acquired by Hitler after the death of his friend, the poet Dietrich Eckart, and was little different from other Alpine homes in the neighborhood. Hitler has created from it a thing of beauty, enhanced by the gorgeous setting of the Bavarian Alps. The "Haus Wachenfeld" has been greatly enlarged, and the first floor now includes a great hall with floor-to-ceiling windows overlooking the valley. A costly Gobelin tapestry and carefully selected paintings adorn its walls—paintings perhaps looted from the great art collections of conquered Europe. In this mountain home Hitler often has held cabinet sessions. He also built a sort of second chancellory at Berchtesgaden in 1936, so that he might spend more time there.



Hitler's "eagle nest" at Berchtesgaden is the more fascinating dwelling, however. To reach the twenty peak, one drives more than a mile along a highway carved out of solid rock, and then quickly ascends until he reaches a doorway cut in the rock mountain. Inside, Hitler has been doors slid, silently open, revealing a marble lined garage large enough to accommodate four automobiles.

From this chamber a short passageway leads to the elevator which is operated by a skilled engineer and his assistant who are permanently on duty. The elevator shoots up 1,800 feet through a copper lined shaft, to the top of the mountain.

The pavilion constructed of steel and glass is perched on the edge of a precipice. There is a clear view of mountains and valleys on all sides, and the old Austrian fortress it within easy gunshot range. Besides a glass enclosed room, large enough to accommodate about 12 persons comfortably, the elaborately heated pavilion includes a kitchen and pantry. It is furnished in Bavarian Alpine design, and glass enclosed rock garden adjoins it.

In both pavilion and garden powerful field glasses have been placed on tripods at vantage points. Water is pumped to the crest by electricity, and the Reichsfuehrer is believed to have made provision for a place of refuge deep in the mountain—safe from bombing attacks.

If Hitler was at the Kehlstein hang last Feb. 20, he may have made use of that refuge, for on that day American Thunderbolt dive bombers pumped rockets into rail yards and other targets at Berchtesgaden. The raid, in addition to damage it have why damage transportation, added credence to the belief that Hitler intends to make his last stand there; for the planes encountered intense anti-aircraft and small arms fire. News dispatches at the time noted that the Berchtesgaden "may be the most heavily fortified spot in all the Reich."

Burrs

Burr's Mrs. Kenneth Vanoff and Mrs. Eric Edwards opened their home for the April meeting of the W.A. on Thursday afternoon. Several guests were in attendance, namely Mrs. Fred Maxwell, Mrs. Elliott Bird, Mrs. Claud Maxwell, Mrs. Clayton Carter, Mrs. Clarence Osmond and Myron. In the absence of the president, Mrs. F. Huffman, Mrs. C. Hough conducted the meeting. Plans for cleaning the church were made for the afternoon of May 8. Letters of thanks for parcels sent were read from Gunner Oliver Edwards and Bdn. Ross Russell, both in service in Germany. A motion was carried that the missionary fund be paid quarterly. The May meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. C. McCreary.

Mooney evening concluded a series of very enjoyable social evenings for the local Red Cross unit. Mrs. Eric Edward and Mrs. Allan Carter were the capable conveners. Nineteen tables of euchre were in play with Mrs. Johnson, Wellington, and Mr. Joe Lavender winning the high scores and Mrs. W. Adams and Mr. Ed. Bird getting the consolations. A box of groceries was won by Mrs. C. Rowe who turned it in to the Red Cross again to be auctioned off. Mr. Will Adams proved a very able auctioneer and from the sale of tickets and sale of contents $20.16 was made. Refreshments and dancing added to the pleasure of the evening. Music was supplied by Mr. C. Gaudin, Mrs. Preston and Vasars. Cason, Boyd, Morton and Wood. Vocal selections were sung. The regular Red Cross meeting will commence at the hall the first of May.

Hillier Township S.S. Convention was held Tuesday afternoon and evening at Melville United Church. Mrs. A. Neland, Peel County, representative of the O.R.E.C. was the speaker and spoke from a broad experience of a Christian life. Rev. H. Adams of Wellington, gave a splendid talk on the responsibility that rests on Christian parents. Melville S.S. presented a devotional period led by Mrs. A. Cruickshanks and Mrs. F. Tiller. Refreshments were served by Melville ladies. A lively round-table discussion was also held.

Stirling-Marmora Hockey Team Banquet Guests

Each Member of Squad Presented With Jacket and Crest

Marmora, April 16—A large number of local hockey fans attended the banquet served in the town hall on Friday evening in honor of the Stirling-Marmora Combines hockey club. After ample justice had been done to the splendid tea room, several guests were in attendance, namely Mrs. Fred Maxwell, Mrs. Elliott Bird, Mrs. Claud Maxwell, Mrs. Clayton Carter, Mrs. Clarence Osmond and Myron. In the absence of the president, Mrs. F. Huffman, Mrs. C. Hough conducted the meeting. Plans for cleaning the church were made for the afternoon of May 8. Letters of thanks for parcels sent were read from Gunner Oliver Edwards and Bdn. Ross Russell, both in service in Germany. A motion was carried that the missionary fund be paid quarterly. The May meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. C. McCreary.

Mooney evening concluded a series of very enjoyable social evenings for the local Red Cross unit. Mrs. Eric Edward and Mrs. Allan Carter were the capable conveners. Nineteen tables of euchre were in play with Mrs. Johnson, Wellington, and Mr. Joe Lavender winning the high scores and Mrs. W. Adams and Mr. Ed. Bird getting the consolations. A box of groceries was won by Mrs. C. Rowe who turned it in to the Red Cross again to be auctioned off. Mr. Will Adams proved a very able auctioneer and from the sale of tickets and sale of contents $20.16 was made. Refreshments and dancing added to the pleasure of the evening. Music was supplied by Mr. C. Gaudin, Mrs. Preston and Vasars. Cason, Boyd, Morton and Wood. Vocal selections were sung. The regular Red Cross meeting will commence at the hall the first of May.

Hillier Township S.S. Convention was held Tuesday afternoon and evening at Melville United Church. Mrs. A. Neland, Peel County, representative of the O.R.E.C. was the speaker and spoke from a broad experience of a Christian life. Rev. H. Adams of Wellington, gave a splendid talk on the responsibility that rests on Christian parents. Melville S.S. presented a devotional period led by Mrs. A. Cruickshanks and Mrs. F. Tiller. Refreshments were served by Melville ladies. A lively round-table discussion was also held.

Murder or Mayhem

(Ex. Thomas Times-Journal)

We picked up The Billboard the other day, and many of the words and phrases intrigued us. For instance we wondered what was meant by "the show" in reference to the season's plays, but further reading enabled us to guess that the "acts" were the artists. The "rube" on a sideline is the information booth. "Flicker" is picture house operators. Then a "stiff" is a person of vaudeville circuit, and the "Hausfrau trade" is the listening audience to radio programs in the daylight.

The "video jockey" and "news reel" leave us somewhat in a shadow. "Heat" may mean sweets. One writer stated that a new film is "rubbed" by the end-of-the-week. We also read that "cooking" is a good "act" to a program and that a new tune is a "wow." Shoes seem to be "canvas" but we come to a "plaster jockey," and arrived at words we doubted that is a radio employee who puts grating noises on the machine. A "wet session" turned out to be a stenographer's report of a "night club," and a "three minute" is a round of applause. All in all, a confusing mix.

And so it goes. All this lingo is a mystery to readers of entertainment intelligents, but to collectors a property would be a necessity.

Remember the big storm of last December . . . the streets and highways waist-deep in snow . . . the traffic paralyzed for days? It was a worrying time for one young mother. You see, she had a hungry, 14-months-old baby to feed—and very little milk in her refrigerator!

Hour after hour the blizzard howled, piling the drifts higher and higher. Then there came a knock at her door. It was her milkman, bagging two precious quarts of milk in the shelter of his arm. He knew she would need it for the baby. He knew it was hopeless to attempt the streets in the neighborhood by truck. So he had driven as close as he could on one of the few ploughed roads . . . then trudged the rest of the way through the deep snow to his customer's house.

It's just a simple story . . . yet you can imagine how grateful this mother was. Many similar stories could be told of the hundreds of other milk delivery men, highway truckers and dairy farmers who fought the blizzards and ice and snow of this record-breaking winter to maintain your daily milk service.

It's a service you take for granted . . . but take a moment now and then to consider just how vital it is to your daily convenience, and the healthy well-being of your children.

Old Couple's Devotion Defies Death

Life has been very kind to the Hartigans.

They loved to be together, little David-Jo-Anne beside the fire for when one is in the nineties, the weather is always cold, Mabel Marshall writes in The London Daily Mirror.

Here they are now, together.

I never dreamed there had been such a fight for life in the aircraft. We started off in the morning in the clear icing air and finished with a sea story and blends with the grimness of war.

Evidently our Spitfire escort had informed a nearby station of our position and within twenty minutes, Canadian doctors and an ambulance were on the scene. I had taken Thompson to a nearby farmhouse. He was in a pitiful condition; weak and helpless. I gave him a shot of morphia and dressed his wounds with anti-burn ointment. He was later transferred to a military hospital in Holland.

I spend four days in the hospital and frequently visited Thompson. His face was a bit thinking and his pain but asking how the rest of the crew were getting along. I have never seen such bravery. He died three weeks later.

Colonel Hartigan died suddenly the other day. His wife, Lucy, followed him in little more than 12 hours. They were buried together at Stockbridge.

Perfect Love Story.

But it is Lucy's sterling character that shines out of this perfect love story.

Lucy did not marry the gorgeous young subaltern Hartigan, all right blue uniform and spurs, who went out to India and fought in the border skirmishes. That was Lucy's friend, Evangeline Agnes.

No, Lucy married the white-haired cripple Hartigan, the man with case back, invalided out of the army.

Evangeline died after six illness through which Lucy nursed her diligently, though she herself was always the delicate one of the family.

A year later, some 18 years ago, Lucy became Mrs. Hartigan, though she still lived in the big house that had been hers for 24 years.

They needed no one else, those two. For Lucy adored her brave soldier.

Observed Formalities.

There was formal dinner every night in the dining room of the big refectory table with the silver and the china and the maid in frilled cap and apron.

Then, afterwards, in state to the drawing-room filled with the souvenirs of their separate lives—grand gold-framed paintings of Lucy Hartigan's officer forebears, all scarlet and medals with tremendous moustaches.

They sat together thus; tall, ramrod-backed old soldier and tiny little lady with the face far from dear since she had great age, on the Saturday afternoon when the Colonel was taken ill.

Lucy Hartigan, though she had been married to him for years, insisted on going in the ambulance with him, and waiting beside the operating theatre till the doctors assured her that "her Archibald" was all right.

"I Must be Brisk."

So she went home and sat up all night in a chair, waiting.

"Archibald has a bit six moments—I must be ready," she said.

In the morning they sent for her. Though the Colonel was recovering, oxygen, it did not dawn on his wife that he was dying.

When she saw him she clicked her tongue in annoyance and breathed and combed his hair, giving him odd bits of news the while—how the Jersey cow fire would not draw, how the man were getting on with clearing up the damage caused by a bomb.

Even when he died she did not realise it, but when the fact sank in she walked quietly down the steps of the hospital, home. Aware of Loss.

At the doorway, the blow hit her with all its force. She broke down and cried: "Archie, whatever shall I do now?"

Then, still the great lady, she pulled herself together and made her plans for the week—gave May, the housemaid, her money and her orders, and went up to the flat.

She packed the bed and said wondderingly: "Where has Archie gone?"

and suddenly: "There's no point in going on without Archie."

She came down again and sat in her chair opposite his, waiting. Presently she drifted into a coma and in the early morning she died.

She wanted to be with Archie. She still is.

How Flt. Sgt. Thompson Won His V.C.

By FO. F. H. Denton, D.F.C.

(B.B.C. Press Service)

LONDON (By Mail) — It was a beautiful morning; cold but clear, and I confess I experienced a certain feeling of exhilaration as "D" for Dodo—that's my Lancaster—pulled along with the French coast contoured far beneath us. I rather like daylight trips. You felt more, as it were, free at the air. This was a second, and it didn't seem possible on such a morning that things were stalking with us. But little more did I know that it would be accompanied by acts of heroism and courage. That another chapter was to be added to the history of Bomber Command and that behind me quietly, playing with his navigation table, a young Scottish radio operator destined to die yet carry with him the most coveted of all awards—the Victoria Cross. He was Flight Sergeant George Thompson.

As we sped towards our target, I frequently chatted with the crew over the intercom. You know, the usual things about what we would do when we got back and things after the war. They were a fine team, of fellows, and this was our fifth op., although we had trained together since last April. The two gunners were Welsh, Tommy was a real Scotsman, while the navigator, bomb aimer and engineer were English. I was the only Dominion member, but I always got on very well with them. In fact, I had spent some leave with Tommy and his homely parents in Scotland.

The weather still remained good as I altered course. I had just glanced round to see other Lancasters at our pre-arranged rendezvous and continued on our way to Germany. Nearly one just sits and thinks or hums a slight tune as the aircraft slips through the sky. Through the haze and loosely billowed clouds I could see Wessels beneath and occasionally rivers circuited like twisted silvery ribbons across the flat country.

The time over the target had been set just before dawn, and glancing at my wristwatch, I found we had been flying for something like three hours when I saw the faithful Spitfires escorting us. They are wonderful planes as they streak through the clouds and just remind me of excited children round their mother when they are near us. I could see the River Rhine quite plainly, although we knew we were somewhere close to this area as spasmodic bursts of flak welcomed us.

Our target was the Hortmund-Ems Canal and it was a clear morning; so much so that I could see the clear stretch of water minutes before we were timed to attack. You see, we were the last of a fairly long run. I spoke to the crew. Everything was O.K. We went in. The bomb aimer said "Bombs going" and then it came.

I remember at that moment there was a terrific blast which shook the aircraft violently and completely filled the cockpit. A few seconds later, the air cleared and I saw that the nose and canopy had been shattered. I knew we had been hit by a burst of flak. I remember seeing the blackened figure of the bomb-aimer struggling from the nose clutching his parachute. The intercom. had been smashed, so I couldn't speak to the crew. Glancing out to the port engine I saw that the starboard liner was on fire. I did the only possible thing: to feather the engine and use the automatic extinguishers. The fire went out momentarily. I opened out to full throttle with the other three engines and climbed. I must reach either France or Holland as soon as possible. The intercom. was damaged and the aircraft tail heavy we lost height steadily. The thought rushed through my mind how lucky I had been. For almost an hour we limped through the sky with the bomb doors swinging open and both gun turrets ablaze.

Meantime, little did I know that Tommy with supreme endurance had dragged bare-handed in a place of safety the unconscious mid-upper gunner in the face of fierce flames and exploding ammunition. He quelled the flames and then rushed to the rear gunner and pulled him from his position.

I gasped and my heart pounded as I saw three FW 190s coming towards us. I thought the end had come, but to my amazement and relief they passed us about 200 yards to port. I could only conclude they had no ammunition left.

As we neared Arnhem more flak was buried up at us, mingled with tracer bullets. I had to make several more steep dives and alterations of course, but I think we had been hit in another engine for the port liner was afire. Actually, when I managed to extinguish this fire it served to balance the aircraft a little better.

However, it was a pretty grim situation for we were losing height at a rate of 500 feet a minute. We had dropped from 19,500 feet to 2,000, which meant we only had four minutes flying time to go. Swiftly I glanced round for a suitable landing ground. At the same moment, much to my relief, a flight of Spitfires had spotted our plight. I saw a small paddock in which I might have been able to crash land and I was just going in when the Spits swooped in front to warn us. I glanced up to see some high tension cables just ahead. The aircraft was wobbling badly and I must land somewhere. As I came just a little distance further on. It was two square paddocks side by side with clumps of trees on each side and at the opposite end to which I was approaching. Nearby there was a little Dutch village. It was a chance but I had to take it. For a moment I thought the one wheel was still down as a

The Bailey Bridge Man Tells of His Invention

By Donald Bailey in London Calling.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Mr. Bailey is the inventor of Britain's famous Bailey Bridge—"a kind of Meccano bridge," he calls it—which has proved of enormous value to the Allies in the Battle of Europe.

At the end of 1940, with France out of the war, with many interruptions from the Luftwaffe, and we in Britain were expecting invasion at that time, my job was the designing of bridges. It is still my job.

They were not bridges to be used for the defence of Britain. They were bridges I hoped would carry our soldiers, tanks, guns, and lorries on the offensive over any rivers and such-like obstacles which they might chance to meet and wish to cross. The military bridges then in existence were not strong enough for the increased loads likely to be brought into service. Until then we had been able to stretch just enough to deal with such tanks as the Matilda, which was just going into use, but no more straws could be added to the camel's back without disaster.

The bitter lessons learned from the German panzer divisions during their advance through France had made it quite certain that bigger and better tanks were urgently necessary. Moreover, where there is a tank there must also be a "tank transporter" to carry it on long journeys, which means a still bigger load for the unfortunate bridges to carry.

But at this particular time — the end of 1940—designing of stronger bridges might have seemed unduly optimistic. It did not appear likely that there would be any opportunity in the immediate future for us to make use of bigger tanks and larger vehicles, or of bridges to carry them—unless, indeed they were required in this country. Nevertheless, the order for a high-capacity bridge had been made, designs had been put forward and these plans were being considered.

* * *

It seemed most essential that any scheme which was to be adopted should not be limited to the loads and spans required at that time. They should be sufficiently adaptable to carry the biggest vehicles which might come into service, and also remain economical for carrying the smaller ones—capable of taking bigger loads and not be too cumbersome or costly for smaller loads. It must also be easy to manufacture in large quantities, and be capable of erection without too much technical knowledge and training, and, if possible, difficult to assemble incorrectly. They were the requirements for this all-purpose army bridge.

I had had in mind for some time the idea of using complete prefabricated sections of girder, which could be erected side by side, or one on top of another, to form complete girders of greatly varying strength. A kind of "Meccano" bridge. This seemed to have some advantages over other proposals, and so I spent a good deal of my leisure for some weeks in developing the design to a sufficiently advanced stage before I put it forward. The work at any rate enlivened sundry, and otherwise dreary, hours spent in an air raid shelter, and by early in January, 1941, the main features of the project were firm, and sufficient detail had been worked out to put before the Ministry of supply technical authorities. It was favorably received, and my plea for permission to complete the design was agreed to officially.

With the scheme becoming an of[fic]ial one, help became available f[rom] the staff of the Experimental [Bridg]ing Establishment and from [indust]rial firms and technical [staffs] whose members included [many] scientists and engineers, [including] the designer of the Sydney [Harbour] Bridge. As we worked out [the det]ails, the scheme seemed to us [to sho]w more and more promise and [there] were many enthusiastic conferences held to consider and solve some problem, or to argue the merit of an idea that someone claimed to have thought about in his morning bath.

Eventually, on February 14, 1941, a letter was received from London instructing us that every effort was to be made to produce sufficient [...] for a full-scale trial to be [...] three mo[nths].

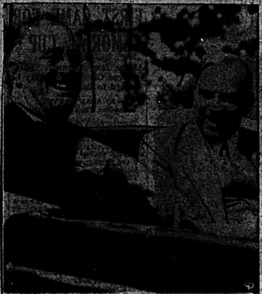
To us, knowing the enormous amount of work to be put in—drawings to be made, steel to be rolled, jugs to be made to ensure accuracy of manufacture—to us, the task of carrying out trials within three months seemed a tremendous one.

While our own drawing office worked far into the nights to complete the production drawings, strings were pulled to ensure prompt manufacture of the steel, and I journeyed to the Midlands to visit a firm which was said to have capacity to do the fabrication. They examined the draft drawings, agreed to do the job, and after some pressure promised to start manufacture of the necessary jigs straight away. They played up wonderfully, and as a matter of fact the girders were finished on May 1.

* * *

At last the great day arrived when we were to stage a demonstration before the War Office—demonstrating the building and launching of a complete 70-foot-long bridge. We had only just got the girders and, of course, all sorts of minor misfortunes occurred, which prevented any prior assembly. It was only after a hectic all-night session by our workshops that it was possible for the Royal Engineers, who were to erect the bridge, to get a little practice in on the very morning of the day on which the great men from the War Office were due to arrive. They were to see the bridge-building demonstration at noon.

There had been a bad blitz that night in London, and the train bringing our visitors was late. This was bad. They would surely be in a critical mood. What a pity, we thought, we had not put on a proper lunch instead of sandwiches and beer in the office! However, it was too late to do anything now. We must hope the sappers would put up a good show.



At 2 o'clock the officer in charge of the erection party ordered "In double time form bridge." He blew his whistle and they were off. To our anxious eyes, how slow everything seemed! The delays were endless. Every pin seemed impossible to get in. Sapper so-and-so had dropped a spanner somewhere and could not find it. Eventually the bridge was completed and launched across the gap, and a lorry rumbled across a Bailey bridge for the first time. We looked at our watches—we had not dared to do so before. It was 2.36. Surely there must be some mistake? But no, there was not. The 70-foot bridge had been completed in 36 minutes!

Yes, those cappers had been marvellous, as so many others have been since, and that lorry was to be the forerunner of thousands of others in all theatres of war in which British, Dominion, and American troops are fighting.

Since then, thousands of tons of Bailey bridge parts have been manufactured by every conceivable type of contractor, from small garages up to the largest steel works in the country.

Needless to say, the tremendous production did not go through without having to overcome many difficulties some of which only became apparent when the output was stepped up to a maximum. The responsibility of solving many of these difficulties fell to the inspection department of the Ministry of Supply, and they, together with the department that deals with the organization for supply of materials have done a fine job.

The finest job of all, however, has been done by the soldiers in the actual field of battle. These men have erected hundreds of these bridges, of all sizes, under sometimes the most appalling conditions in Tunisia, in Italy, in France, in Belgium, in Holland, in Burma, and, we hope, now in Germany and very shortly in Japan. Some of their feats, like the 1,250-foot-long bridge over the River Chindwin in Burma, and a somewhat similar one over the Sangro river in Italy, were real achievements.

It was during his visit to Canada in August, 1938, that this picture with Prime Minister Mackenzie King was taken. On that historic occasion when war clouds were gathering, President Roosevelt said, "I give you assurance that the people of the United States will not stand idly by, if domination of Canadian soil is threatened by any other empire."

A Poor Boy Comes to the Top

(Ottawa Journal)

The name of Adolf Hitler leads all the rest in the official Allied lists of war criminals. Thus is ambition rewarded; so do dreams come true.

Let us suppose the lad Schicklgruber, of doubtful legitimacy, of a low-middle-class Austrian family, said to himself, he would excel all mankind in evil; how far away the peak must have seemed! But young Adolf applied himself in the true "log-cabin-to-White House" manner, no doubt decided that to practice evil on a small scale was to prepare himself for greater things and he would put his hand to whatever came in his way.

First he had to change his name, because there is something irresistibly comic about Schicklgruber, and so he became Hitler. He painted a bit, whether barns or Christmas cards we are not quite sure. He lived precariously. He fought in the First World War, emerging as a corporal, with a record and a decoration which never have been able to stand close inspection. Then, in the confusion of defeated Germany came his great chance. He joined the revolutionary movement, began making speeches and killing people. He found he could lie convincingly, and that was a wonderful asset. Deceit, fraud and falsehood were his natural gifts, but he cultivated them assiduously, and presently he was top Nazi and running Germany.

Then indeed did Adolf blossom. Instead of having to content himself with killing a few unwary Jews and doing back-street jobs of assassination he could come out in the open. He slaughtered Jews in tens of thousands and stole their property. He staged a "purge" to kill off hundreds of "good" Germans who had disagreed with him—or knew too much about him for his comfort. He branched out to murder hundreds of thousands of Poles and Russians, he tortured and robbed on a wholesale scale, he operated horrible prisons and unthinkable slave camps until nobody in all history could match his crimes against the human race.

Now Hitler has his final accolade—Chief Criminal on the Allied lists—and ambition can take him no farther. The lad Schicklgruber has come a long way.

IMPORTANT BRITISH MEDICAL DISCOVERY of Dissolving Micro-Organisms

In the case of chronic diseases such as acute rheumatism, arthritis, catarrh, and sepsis conditions, the poison in the system uses up or destroys the whole or nearly the whole of the hydrotropins in the body system, thus rendering the ordinary type of vaccine when taken orally or by injection, either partially or totally ineffective, due to the fact that there are little or no hydrotropins available to dissolve the vaccine, which results in the antigenic fluid not being released from the body of the organisms, which further results in a complete failure to produce the necessary antibody resistance to destroy the toxic poisons, and either to make the poison germs innocuous, or to actually kill them off.

THESE PICTURES SHOW HOW LANTIGEN OPERATES

1. These are the villi—small sucker-like protuberances in the upper intestine, which have together an absorptive surface equal to a room 12 x 12 x 12 feet, and which absorb LANTIGEN from the gastric fluids and carry it into the system.

2. This diagram shows some of the many dangerous germs that cause disease. Observe their small dot-like appearance.

3. This is an illustration of a white corpuscle stimulated by Lantigen engulfing and destroying infective germs for the purpose of their elimination from the system.

for CATARRH & BRONCHITIS

Bronchial Asthma, Antrum, Sinus, Catarrhal and Bronchial Colds.

Lantigen "B"

Usually the first catarrhal infection is due to the neglect of a simple cold. Rapidly the infection spreads, and develops into severe chronic inflammation in the mucous lining and the air passages become blocked. The excretions which are dislodged by blowing the nose often fall back into the throat, infect the tonsils, and result in acute laryngitis and inflammation of the throat. Maddening head noises make the catarrhal patient's life a misery. LANTIGEN "B" Oral Dissolved Vaccine will quickly improve this condition and create a feeling of well-being.

for RHEUMATIC & ARTHRITIC PAINS

Neuritis, Sciatica, and Lumbago

Lantigen "C"

The early effects of using Lantigen "C" are: (1) relief from pain, (2) the recedence of swollen joints and limbs, (3) improvement in general health. In the case of Rheumatic pains, in most cases the following bacterial organisms are present—Streptococci polyvalent.

Sufferers report good results. Many now enjoy improved health. Free from pain first time in years, following a course of Lantigen which treats and immunises, without vaccination by injection.

Gentlemen:

I am writing to let you know what Lantigen B has done for me. First I am able to go to bed and sleep the whole night through without wakening around three o'clock, choked up and getting no more rest the remainder of the night. It is a wonderful thing that I can go out in this frosty, stormy weather and have lots of pep—something I have not been able to do for years and years. Other winters I would only go a few yards in frosty weather till I would be choked so badly that many times I would go to my Doctor's and get the needle in my arm before I could return back home. It has been a God-send to me to learn of Lantigen B, and what it has done for me—it is worth its weight in gold—mine being very stubborn severe attacks of Bronchial Asthma.

I have just completed using one bottle and I feel so much better that I think I can reduce the dose to about three times a week. I really feel with Lantigen B I will in time be completely cured of this treacherous disease. I have at least ten people started taking it, since they can see what it has done for me. I had one lady come to me this morning saying, "I am like you now. I feel like a new person and I have only taken half a bottle of Lantigen B." You can see it is helping others—anyone with Bronchial Asthma, don't suffer one more day. Give Lantigen B a try—no diet, eat anything you wish, the same as I am with Lantigen B. I trust this letter can be published to let everyone know what Lantigen B has done for me.

Yours very truly,
Mrs. Mary Braithwaite

Dear Sir:

I feel it is my duty to write and tell you what my first bottle of Lantigen has done for me. I have been one of the most stubborn cases of Asthma Bronchitis in the City of Toronto for the past twenty years. I have spent a small fortune in trying to get relief which in one or two cases I did get a little relief. For the past fifteen years I don't know what a real night's rest was, I had to sit the night out in a chesterfield chair. I have been taking Lantigen for two weeks and from my first dose of six drops I have had perfect rest—not even a wheeze or cough all night. I leave the house at 7 o'clock in the morning, rain, fog, or sunshine, and in the past two weeks I don't think that I have coughed six times in the two weeks, and at $6.00 per bottle which lasts sixteen days, I think that it is far cheaper than any doctor's bill I have paid for one week without any signs of getting sleep. I have never felt so good in nearly twenty years, and I will never be without nor never stop boosting Lantigen B as long as I live.

Henry James Foster

Wombarra, April 20, 1943.

Dear Sirs,

I am writing to let you know that both my husband and myself have derived great benefit from Lantigen "B". My husband is a T.B. case, greatly complicated with Catarrh, and the "B" Lantigen has greatly relieved the latter; also a friend at Blackheath to whom I recommended Lantigen "A" has not had a cold for three years. She is now taking Lantigen "C" and receiving much benefit. As I am still taking "B" will you kindly let me know if I could take "C" say, alternate nights, or would they clash. I am troubled a little (not very bad yet, but I would like to "nip it in the bud") with Rheumatism in knees, shoulders, hands and big toes, and would like to try Lantigen "C", but not sure if both kinds can be taken at the same time. Shall be glad of an early reply.

Yours sincerely,
L. RUMARY.

WHAT IS LANTIGEN?

Lantigen is made in a Government Licensed Laboratory in Australia and therefore all their stringent regulations have to be adhered to. Lantigen is not a patent medicine—and is devoid of drugs. Lantigen is an oral vaccine in a DISSOLVED state.

Being a completely Oral Dissolved Vaccine, it is operative immediately it is taken. It is operative in two ways, firstly by absorbing into the open tissue, such as the tongue, throat, and intestinal tract, and secondly it is also operative by means of its distribution through the alimentary—stomach system. The antigens being fully released, begin to immediately incite the system to produce antibodies, which in turn destroy the toxic poisons given off by the poisoned germs and also render the poison germs harmless.

LANTIGEN SUCCEEDS

LANTIGEN is a natural aid. It is produced out of the human body and gives increased antibody resistance to disease. It is not a drug or a chemical aid. You would not develop colds, catarrhal and rheumatic conditions if your antibody resistance was strong enough to combat them. Remove the cause sapping your vitality. It reduces or eliminates the inflammation of the nerves, which result from all disorders.

Three-Goal Scoring Outburst In Final Period Gives Detroit 5-3 Victory Over Toronto Leafs

Kennedy Scores All Three Goals Secured by the Toronto Team

(By FRASER MACDOUGALL)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, April 16. (CP)—The Toronto Maple Leafs and their supporters today face the disturbing possibility that this could be the year for Detroit Red Wings to avenge their defeat in the 1942 Stanley Cup final in which the Leafs lost the first three games and then came back to take four in a row to walk off with hockey's world series.

The Wings took the first step at least in this reversal of the 1942 play-off pattern Saturday night with a resurgent display of power which gave them a 5-3 victory in the fourth game of the 1945 final after losing the first three without scoring a goal.

But Toronto still holds a commanding lead in the eight-point series with six points to two for the Red Wings.

A three-goal scoring outburt in the third period clinched the Detroit victory Saturday before 14,587 fans. It erased a one-goal lead the Leafs built up in the first and second periods on a great scoring display by Ted Kennedy, 19-year-old centre ice star from Port Colborne Ont. Kennedy scored all three Toronto goals, two in the first period and one in the second.

Hollett Opens Scoring

Bill Hollett, veteran Detroit defenceman, scored the first goal of the game, at the 8.35 mark in the first period. It was the first goal the Wings scored in the series and it limited to 188 minutes and 35 seconds the shutout hockey goaltender Frank McCool played for Toronto. With able assistance from right Wing Mel Hill, Kennedy matched Hollett's goal and added another to put Leafs ahead in less than four minutes. He got his third goal in the third period, just a minute after centre Murray Armstrong got Detroit's second tally.

Before the first four minutes of the third period had passed the Red Wings were ahead on unassisted goals by two left wingers—25-year-old Eddie Bruneteau and 19-year-old Ted Lindsay, the latter a rookie from Kirkland Lake, Ont. Before the period was over centre Joe Carveth clinched the verdict with a breakaway goal.

As the Red Wings proudly marched to their dressing room where they hurriedly prepared to catch a train for Detroit Carveth said: "We sure stopped them tonight—and it's about time".

Manager Jack Adams' comment was brief. "We're in there yet and fighting", he said.

In the Toronto dressing room, Coach Hap Day consoled his players saying: "No use worrying about that one fellows, that one's gone. Anyway, we're two up".

Sports Roundup

(By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.)

New York, April 16. (AP)—Now that the baseball season is ready to start, it looks as if it might be a mistake to wait until the 24th to name a new commissioner—if the major league bosses plan to do it then. . . . After watching a week of the kind of ball they'll be playing this season, the man they pick may decide he doesn't want to be associated with anything like that . . . When the Dodgers shipped Howie Schultz and Tom Brown to St. Paul the other day, some observers claimed it had to be a two-man deal because Schultz is the only first sacker tall enough to spear Brown's wild heaves from short. . . . Joe Sprinz, veteran catcher, maintains the greatest change in baseball in his 20-odd years in the game is the improvement in riding qualities of balances. He has been kayoed often enough to know.

Monday Matinee

Creighton Miller, reported signed by one of the post-war pro football clubs, has been warned not to perform too strenuously in his job as Yale backfield coach. Reason, high blood pressure. . . Al Guido, New York lightweight, is getting a reputation as a streak buster as well as a beak buster. He broke Tony Janiro's victory string after 25 straight, checked Eddie Giosa at 28 and Charlie Smith at 30. Next is Freddie Russo of Rahway, N.J., unbeaten in 48 fights.

WILLIE THE GREAT — By Jack Sords

SPORTS PROGRAM WILL INCLUDE EVERY SOLDIER

Games Will be Climaxed by Largest of Peace-Time Olympic Games

By BUS HAM

Washington, April 16.—(AP)—When the end comes to Germany, United States soldiers in Europe will lose no time swinging over from fighting to athletic competition. The War Department has at the "kick-off" stage a vast sports program to include every man in uniform.

These games eventually may be climaxed by Allied championships that will dwarf by comparison the largest of peace-time Olympic games.

Such countries as Great Britain, Canada, France, Poland, Brazil, Australia, New Zealand, Yugoslavia and others probably will compete.

"And we hope that Russia comes in," said Col. Henry W. "Eskie" Clark, head of the athletics branch of the Army Special Services Division.

"When the fighting stops, our men will have leisure time before they are transferred to the Pacific or some come home," Clark said, "and these sports games will keep them interested and in physical trim."

Schools in Rome and Paris are turning out officers and men in "refresher" courses on athletic administration, training, officiating, coaching, promotional activities and publicity.

More than $7,500,000 worth of equipment already is available for practically every form of athletics, including:

Enough baseball uniforms for 15,000 men with additional balls, bats, gloves and the like for 500,000 more players; equipment for 800,000 softball players; complete gear for 700 football squads of 25 men each with 72,000 footballs; basketball uniforms for 5,000 teams of 10 men each.

SENATORS OPEN WITH YANKEES

Washington, April 16 (AP)—The 1945 Major League baseball season opens today under sad and unusual circumstances as New York Yankees meet Washington Senators at Griffith Stadium.

For the first time the contest is dedicated to the memory of a former President, Franklin Delano Roosevelt, frequent champion of the sport who died only four days ago.

The fourth wartime season marks the debut of the Yankees under new owners, Larry MacPhail, Dan Topping and Del Webb, who purchased the club from the Jacob Ruppert estate during the winter.

It still was unknown whether President Truman would toss out the first ball in keeping with a custom which began in 1910 when William Howard Taft was in the White House.

Mr. Truman, as Vice-President, promised to make the first pitch, if President Roosevelt was unable to do so. But now that he is President he may not find time to attend the game.

In respect to the memory of Mr. Roosevelt, an expected near-capacity crowd of about 30,000 will stand for a minute of silent prayer shortly before the game starts at 3 p.m. E.D.T.

Two veteran righthanders will do the pitching, Atley Donald for the Yankees and Dutch Leonard for the Senators.

C.A.H.A. OFFICIALS READY TO CHANGE HOCKEY RULES

Also Approve Amendment to Do Away With Red Centre Line

Toronto, April 16. (CP)—Delegates to the 36th annual meeting of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association yesterday approved "in principle" a suggestion to remove the red centre line from hockey and reduce the centre ice area from its present 60 feet to 36 feet. The suggestion is designed to curb ganging and to give the defending team increased space in which to manoeuvre.

Tom Lockhart of New York, president of the Amateur Hockey Association of the United States, said the idea had been tested in the Eastern United States Amateur Hockey League and "it was an improvement".

"The plan has possibilities and I am sure the N.H.L. will adopt it".

The suggestion also included removal of the red penalty shot lines and increase in the area behind the nets from 10 to 13 feet. The goal line would be extended across the rink and substituted for the penalty shot line in the rule covering icing the puck.

This would mean that if the defending team shot the puck the length of the ice, it would have to pass their opponent's goal line instead of the penalty shot line before being considered "icing".

The suggestion will be considered at the joint meeting of the C.A.H.A.-N.H.L. Rules committee in June.

Various rule changes adopted by the meeting included adoption of the "slow whistle" for off-sides. Under the rule, when attacking players cross the blue line off-side and pass, the play is not stopped until the pass is completed. Thus if a defending player intercepts the pass, the play is legal and no offside is called.

SENIOR LACROSSE LEAGUE FORMED

Montreal, April 16 —(CP)— An inter-provincial senior lacrosse league was formed at a meeting held yesterday at nearby Lachine arena. The new loop will include five teams from Quebec and one from Cornwall, Ont.

The Quebec teams are: Quebec, Shawinigan Falls, Lachine-Ville St. Pierre, Montreal Canadiens, University of Montreal. First game will be played at Shawinigan May 5 and at Quebec May 6. No date has been set yet for Cornwall.

The new league will be presided by Edgar Goulet, vice-president of the Quebec Lacrosse Association which sponsored organization of the new circuit. Another Q.L.A. vice-president, Richard Brayley, has been named secretary of the inter-provincial league.

Executive committee of the league will include: Andre Cliche, representing Quebec; Romeo Williams, Shawinigan Falls, and Edgar Lauzon, Cornwall.

ST. MIKES TAKE FIRST GAME FOR MEMORIAL CUP

Moose Jaw Canucks Show Some Class and May be Hard to Beat

By ALAN HARVEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, April 16 (CP)—It seemed a safe forecast today that the Memorial Cup finals between Moose Jaw Canucks and Toronto St. Michael's College Majors will follow the familiar east-west tradition—plenty of speed, thrills and action.

There was little class differential between the teams Saturday as St. Mike's opened the best-of-seven series with an 8-5 victory before a near-sellout crowd of 12,420 at Maple Leaf Gardens, where the second instalment will be played tonight.

Except for a brief stretch in the second period, St. Mike's always were in command against a Moose Jaw team which seeks to bring Saskatchewan its first junior championship since Regina Pats won the 26-year-old trophy in 1930. Coach Roy Bentley's Canucks surged from behind a 3-1 deficit to tie the score at that stage and stormed the Toronto cage for close-range thrusts at goalie Pat Boehmer, but the collegians weathered the flurry and came back with two goals to enter the final period ahead 5-3.

Capitalize on Lapses

Then the storm broke. Capitalizing on rival defence lapses, Majors popped three goals behind Bev Bentley in the Moose Jaw nets to salt the game away. Metro Prystai and Frank Ashworth closed the scoring in a belated Canuck rally, but they were futile gestures.

The other three Moose Jaw tallies came from the stick of 175-pound Bert Olmstead, towering Sceptre, Sask., product. Successive penalties to Ted McLean and Frank Turik left St. Mike's two men short in one 40-second stretch during the second period, but Canucks could not connect.

Paced by Morison

The Irish attack was paced by Gus Morison, who shifted from his customary defence post to a forward role with Johnny McCormack and Joe Sadler. Morison tallied twice and the other St. Mike's goals went to McCormack, Sadler, Tod Sloan, Jimmy Thomson, Turik and Len Costello. Turik played for Trail Smoke Eaters last season when they were beaten in the Memorial Cup finals by Oshawa Generals.

Coach Bentley said last night he was uncertain whether Canucks would use Gerry Couture, Moose Jaw replacement who was used by Detroit Red Wings in their Stanley Cup series against Toronto Maple Leafs. Couture is expected to return to Saskatchewan, where he is to write university examinations.

GETS REMATCH

Demanding a return bout with Red Vagnone, the California Rocket, that unpredictable wrestling villain, Nanjo Singh, the mad Hindoo, got his latest wish when Vagnone readily agreed to meet Singh at the Hume arena Wednesday night. And in order to pacify the principals Promoter Frank Tunney announced the second meeting would be a 90-minute time limit bout. "The bell saved Singh last week, but it'll be a much different story with the extended time limit. Wrestling an unorthodox man like that wild Hindoo a good wrestler has to wear him down, and that's what I propose to do Wednesday night now they've added an additional 30 minutes to the time limit," Vagnone predicted today. "They call him the California Rocket, well I'll take the expulsion out of him early and often," sneered Singh while preparing for a new method of unscrupulous attack. Promoter Tunney is adding two high class Queensbury A.C. preliminaries with Bob "Strangler" Wagner meeting "Toar" Morgan while "Irish Tom" Collins takes on Johnny Dempsey to round out a strong card.

GRECO SIGNS FOR BOUT

New York, April 16 (AP)—Johnny Greco, Montreal welterweight, and Chuck Taylor of Pittsburgh have signed for a 10-round bout at the Jacksonville, Fla., basketball park April 27, Jack Lakin announced today. Greco has been guaranteed $5,000 with an option of 30 per cent of the gate.

Shamrock ladies of London hung a 36-16 defeat on Montreal Olympics Saturday night at London to win the final round 64-36 for the Eastern Canadian Senior Women's basketball Championship.

Increased Crowds—

Statistics show that when the major league baseball clubs throw open their turnstiles to usher in the 1945 big league ball season tomorrow ticket sales will have hit a sensational stride in both major leagues. Nearly every club reports exceptionally heavy purchases for opening day and for the season, indicating unusual interest in the game so early in the year.

Among the clubs reporting check-ups on ticket sales, Brooklyn found advance requests for season tickets, as well as for opening day, far greater than last year and may mount to 25 per cent more. Opening day sales by the Chicago Cubs are five times as great as last year. Washington opening-day sales are ahead of all former years and Secretary Edward B. Eynon expects a complete sellout. All boxes for the season, except for scattered seats, already have been sold at Pittsburgh, with opening-day sales ahead of 1944. The usual sellout crowd is assured for the curtain-raiser at Cincinnati. In St. Louis, the purchases are running about even with last year, but advance sales never are heavy in that city and a big jump is expected the day before the season opens.

Around the Town—

When the Belleville and District Men's Softball League hold their annual meeting and election of officers Wednesday night President Joe Samain says he'll endeavor to prevail upon the league to operate a four-teamed circuit in 1945 . . . The City Baseball League executive meets tonight to name three more to their executive and also consider additional entries . . . Here also, President Jack McVeigh and his cohorts might be well advised to take a page from Mr. Samain's idea book . . . Red Vagnone, the California wrestling Rocket, says he could have beaten Nanjo Singh last week had he have known the time limit was so close when he finally clamped on his famed "Rocket hold" . . . Well, Vagnone will have ample time to make the mad Hindoo say 'uncle' Wednesday night, as Promoter Tunney has the show booked over the 90-minute route, which should be ample time for either principal to decide the issue. Or is it?

Frankie Kovacs, the tennis clown, is still unchanged after two years in the U. S. army. He still modestly admits that he is the best singles tennis player in the world.

Remember when—

Bob Feller, 21-year-old Cleveland Indian pitcher, became the first major league hurler to pitch a no-hit no-run game on opening day when he turned back the Chicago White Sox and blanked them five years ago today. The Pale Hose came close to scoring in the third inning when Feller went wild and the Windy City club filled the bases. Feller then struck out the remaining two batters to retire the side. He is now in the United States armed services.

What's Doing in Sport

(By The Canadian Press.)

Morton and Walker Cooper, starry battery of St. Louis Cardinals Saturday gave notice they would not play in the opening game tomorrow unless their respective salaries were hiked to $15,000 although they had signed contracts at $12,000 each for 1945. The brothers stated they were planning to quit baseball unless their terms were met.

Injured while at batting practice Friday, infielder Whitey Wietelmann of the Boston Braves had the little finger of his left hand amputated at the second joint Saturday at a Boston hospital.

Merritton-Hayes juvenile basketballers Saturday captured the Ontario championship on their home grounds at St. Catharines Saturday, defeating Toronto Lizzies 22-14 at the end of a two-day tourney.

Distant clubs at Kingston, Barrie, Penetang and elsewhere were negotiating to affiliate with the Western Counties Baseball Association in a move to broaden the scope of the organization, Past President Jim Millman of London told the W.C.B.A. annual meeting Saturday at London. Fred Ruckle of Thamesville was re-elected president.

After defeating Toronto and Hamilton teams, St. Catharines was eliminated by Brantford Y Pirates 35-33 at Brantford in the final game for the Ontario Intermediate "B" basketball title. Pirates reached the final rung by disposing of Guelph and Midland.

Toronto West End Y.M.C.A. Saturday night defeated MacDonald College 41-30 at Ste. Anne De Bellevue, uQe., to take the Ontario-Quebec round 74-67 in the playdowns of the Canadian intermediate basketball championship, thus qualifying to meet Fredericton in the final series at the New Brunswick capital.

PRINCESS ELIZABETH STUDIES ENGINE MAINTENANCE WITH A.T.S. GIRLS

Princess Elizabeth is seen in the khaki uniform of the Auxiliary Territorial Service, women's division of the British army. She is linked in army records as Subaltern Elizabeth Windsor, her rank being equivalent of lieutenant. The Princess, who will be 19 on April 21, is known as "Sette" to her fellow service-girls. Learning to be a driver, she is seen, left, with other A.T.S. members during a lesson on engine maintenance at a training centre in southern England. When not engaged in public duties, she is a busy parents visitor to her daughter, who has shown considerable ability as an auto mechanic as well as driver, told them she can now decarbonize an engine. Queen Elizabeth watches a lesson in the centre picture, while right, her father, King George, joins her in her studies.

LESSON NO. 457
By SAM GORDON
The Ribbies

Horse Sense is not flighty. It takes sense all the way. Listen to the bids and see what they say about the south hand when you have this north hand:

♠ K 10
♥ J 9 3 2
♦ A 8 4 2
♣ A 7 5 3

The bidding trips along like this:

SOUTH	NORTH
1 S	1 NT
2 H	2 NT
4 H	4 NT
5 S	6 H

Having bid a higher ranking suit first, when south bids his heart suit, he says the magic word less than spades. Having rebid hearts, he says his heart suit is at least five cards long.

If he has five hearts and they are not longer than his spades, he must have five spades. It must be assumed that both these suits are re-biddable; three honors in each suit, as a rule.

With five cards in each major suit, he has a total of only three cards, in both minor suits. That means three short cards in his minors. Each short card is a trick. So, he has three short card tricks.

In answer to four no-trump, the south bid of five spades is The Ribbies convention signal for showing only one ace and two kings. There are three tricks. His other tricks must be queens and shorts.

His one-jump to three hearts on the second round promised eight tricks. Three of them are his ace and two kings. Three of them are his three short cards. His other two tricks must be two queens.

Thus, you read him with one ace, two kings, two queens, a five card spade suit with two high cards; a five card heart suit with two high cards; a doubleton minor with one high card; a singleton minor.

We Horse Sense suits can use precision while others wail for toleration.

ST. LOUIS TEAMS PICKED TO REPEAT IN THEIR LOOPS

Cubs and Pirates to Give Competition in National and Detroit and Yanks in American

By JACK HAND

New York, April 18 — (AP)—St. Louis, Chicago, Pittsburgh and possibly New York will battle for the National League pennant, and St. Louis, Detroit and New York for the American loop flag; according to a digest today of pre-season comment by major league managers for the Associated Press.

None ventured an outright pennant pick and all expected their own clubs to show "improvement," qualifying all remarks with "If we can keep what we have." As usual, no manager expected his team to finish in the cellar, coupled last year by Washington and the Philadelphias.

The managers followed the general line of reasoning of 30 baseball writers who predicted similar races with another all-St. Louis world series.

Perhaps the most enthusiastic statement by a skipper came from Steve O'Neill of the Detroit Tigers.

"With the best pitching staff in the league and plenty of good reserves for all positions we're much better prepared for the opening than we were a year ago," said O'Neill. "Hitting has been our big question mark but Rudy York, Roger Cramer and rookie Bob Maier have been meeting the ball squarely and we may be stronger offensively than we thought."

Break from Weatherman

All skippers agreed a fine break from the weatherman who provided unusually warm March and early April left the clubs in the best condition since northern spring training was begun.

Due to travel restrictions and curtailed exhibition schedules, managers have not been able to size up the opposition accurately.

Comments by other managers included:

Billy Southworth, St. Louis Cardinals — "I'm not making predictions about the others. Haven't seen any other clubs in action so can't know how the competition will stack up. Military demands may change the whole picture."

Joe McCarthy, New York Yankees — "The team will be just about the same as it was last year if we can keep what we've got. We finished third last year, and now, with the pressure off, we may come back and win. I hope so."

Charley Grimm, Chicago Cubs — "St. Louis and Pittsburgh will be tough but we should be in there fighting if our pitching holds up. With Bill Nicholson back, our attack should be good and our defence looks better."

Mel Ott, New York Giants — "Judging by the predictions that circulate it going to be more crowded than a rush-hour subway. I figure we'll be up there, perhaps in the first three. We have the same lineup, plus more pitching strength, our 1944 weakness."

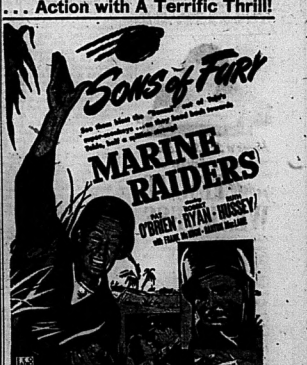
FORMER MAYOR DIES

Midland, April 18 —(CP)—Douglas Arthur White, 81, three times mayor of Midland, died here Saturday after a long illness. Born in Albany, N.Y., Mr. White he one of the founders of the Great Lakes Navigation Company.

LEAVES PLENTY OF LOOT

With Canadian Troops in Holland, April 18 —(AP)— Arthur Seyssinquart, German commissioner in Holland, fled from advancing Canadian troops, leaving behind him most of the accumulating store of loot which his lieutenants promptly expropriated, liberated Allied prisoners of war reported yesterday.



RESISTANCE BROKEN

Sydney, Australia, April 18 —(Reuters)— Organized Japanese resistance in the Dagua area 7 northern New Guinea, was broken when Australian troops made bayonet charges, an Australian Army Headquarters announcement said today.

Sergeant J. Cote Home on Leave

Trenton, April 16—Home on rotation leave after five and a half years overseas is Sergeant John Cote who is spending leave at the home of his mother Mrs. J. E. Cote, Dufferin Ave.

Sergeant Cote left for England in November 1939, having been associated with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment prior to the outbreak of war, on special duty. While in England he was awarded the Efficiency decoration.

On August 16th last he was wounded in France when a shell exploded as he was standing near his motorcycle removing dust from his glasses. He received shell fragments in his leg and chest and was burned about the neck. He was immediately removed to hospital in England.

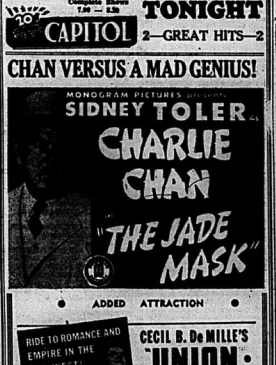
Just before leaving for home Sergt. Cote met his brother Sergeant Jud Cote of the R.C.A.F. and spent a couple of days with him in London.

Sergt. Cote noticed a great improvement in his home town upon his return but his greatest thrill was the sight of so much food, especially, fresh fruit and vegetables, displayed in the local stores.

Kitchen Gutted.

Fire completely gutted the kitchen of the home of Wilfred Ashley, 117 Dufferin Ave., on Sunday afternoon and much damage was done the balance of the home through smoke and water.

Firemen quickly responded to the call and were able to bring the blaze under control in a short time preventing damage to neighboring property. The fire is said to have started around the chimney and kitchen stove pipes.



Mr. Ashley is an employee of the Crane and Blackwell factory which is located directly across the street from his home.

Central Bridge Co. To Build Tugs On New Order

Ottawa, April 18—Among the contracts let to Canadian shipyards by the Munitions Department which was announced yesterday is that to Central Bridge Company of Trenton to build seven 50-foot steel fire tugs and 36 60-foot diesel tugs, for which engines will be provided by the Virtue Engine Co., Vancouver.

CANADIAN BOATS HELPING

London, April 18 — (CP Cable) — Game little Canadian minesweepers, which helped clear the English Channel for the invasion of Western Europe last June and have been doing 35 per cent of Channel sweeping since, are helping the French navy in the attack on Bordeaux, it was learned last night.

CHAPTER 20

"And you never thought of looking way out here?" Leach smiled as he tossed the eggshells into the sink. "I'm not hiding. I live here because I get plenty for my money—two big rooms, a bath and kitchenette, a view and plenty of light and air. If I were farther downtown, on my salary, I'd have to live in a miniature edition of the Black Hole of Calcutta, and I'd be interrupted every time I tried to work on my novel by the phone ringing, and people dropping in. Here I have no telephone and no one knows this address. I don't miss invitations because I'm at my club every morning and at my office every afternoon."

"Well, I'm afraid you won't be there again very soon," remarked Foyle. "Your managing editor told me you were fired."

"Did he?" Leach sipped his unpalatable drink with a wry face and added a little more whisky.

"It doesn't seem to worry you much?"

"Oh, no. They'll take me back. They always do. I've been fired five times altogether. . . But each time they find they can't get anybody else so cheap who has all the dope I have."

"I'd go easy on that whisky, if I were you. Just what is your salary?"

"Fifty. I'm not like the big guns who get their stuff syndicated. I'm just a local space-filler."

"You dress on that?"

Leach smiled. "No. A friend lent me credit at his tailor for the suit. I don't know where the next one's coming from. As for the shoes . . . ." He contemplated his burnished shoe tips. "I gave the bootmaker a puff in my column."

"Wasn't it rather reckless to plan marriage with a girl of luxurious tastes on fifty a week?" suggested Basil.

"You're wrong." Foyle's gaze was penetrating. "She hadn't a cent."

"But—that's impossible!" Leach gaped at him. "I mean—that house and the coming-out party—and the way she was publicized."

"All part of Rhoda Jocelyn's game," said Foyle, bluntly. "She wanted her stepdaughter to marry well, so she got Edgar Jocelyn to pay for the coming-out party. It was a gamble—a speculation. Neither Rhoda nor Kitty had any money left. But according to Rhoda, the girl herself didn't realize that."

"No, she didn't."

"And—neither did you?"

Leach colored. "It wouldn't have made any difference if I had!"

"Perhaps you have relatives who would have helped you out if you had married Kitty?"

Leach re-filled his empty glass with neat whisky and drank it at one gulp.

"Nothing like that. My father was a Cleveland banker. The police out there will tell you he shot himself after the Wall Street crash of 1929, so I might as well tell you now. I was in my junior year at college and of course I had to leave. I came to New York determined to be a novelist. Not a best seller. The real McCoy. Dostoievsky and all that. . . . But I didn't click. Then I tried to write hooey—business stories, love stories—the 'folk prose of western democracy.' But I didn't even sell that. I barged into an ex-speak one night to drown my sorrows and whom should I see but an old college pal, a New York fellow. Didn't know how hard up I was. He thought I'd just blown in from Cleveland. So he introduced me to all his friends and they began inviting me right and left. I accepted all bids 'cause each one meant a free feed. Suddenly, it dawned on me that there might be money in gossip writing. I dashed off something that read like a stenographic report of chit-chat in the observation ward at Bellevue, tacked on a few publicised names, and took it to a newspaper office and—the rest is history. Just another success story.

"When did you first meet Kitty Jocelyn?" asked Basil.

"Last summer. Ted Aldrich, the polo player, took me over to Hurlingham as his guest, and we met Kitty on the boat coming home. She and I were engaged, secretly, before the voyage was over. It coud never have happened on shore, for Rhoda Jocelyn used to watch Kitty like a hawk. But Rhoda and Victorine and that fat pig, Pasquale, were all sea-sick, so they didn't know what was happening. We didn't tell anybody—we knew it wasn't any use. Rhoda was full of ambitions for Kitty."

"Miss Jocelyn was poisoned by a cocktail she drank the afternoon of the dance and—"

"Poisoned! A cocktail? Do you mean Kitty was actually poisoned at the Jocelyn house when I was there?"

"Exactly. What can you tell us about that cocktail party?"

It was some moments before Leach pulled himself together. Then he answered:

"I was feeling pretty blue that day. I'd struck a snag in my work and the novel that morning, and I felt like burning the manuscript and jumping into the river. When I got to the Jocelyn's, I found Kitty was miserable herself. We were out of hearing of the others for a few moments and she said to me, 'Rhoda really believes I'm going to marry Danine, and she's so terribly in earnest, she frightens me.'

"We'd planned to get married when my novel was done. But I saw the situation was getting on her nerves. So I said, 'Why not elope tonight—right in the middle of the dance?' I'd just had four cocktails and I suppose they made me reckless. I told her I'd be at the 79th street entrance to the park with a car at eleven p.m. and wait until she came. She was to leave the house as soon as the crowd at the dance was big enough to cover her departure. Then we were going to drive down to Washington—that seems to be the only place left where you can get married in a hurry.

"When I left the Jocelyn house, I had to go downtown to see my editor. After that I got dinner at a restaurant, and borrowed Tony Belcher's. Sedan. I reached the 79th street entrance to the park at five minutes of eleven on the dot—and Kitty never turned up at all!

"At three a.m. I decided that either she was ill, or Rhoda had found out about our plan and made trouble. Fortunately, I'd kept my card of invitation to the dance. I drove out here, changed into evening things, and then went downtown again to the Jocelyn house. Kitty was dancing and looking perfectly well and completely unworried. When she saw me, she smiled—just as if nothing had happened.

"My first feeling was reilief. I was glad to see that she was all right. But the next minute I was furious at the way she'd stood me up. Four soldid hours I'd waited for her and it was as cold as the ice age that night. I went to the bar and had a couple of drinks. Perhaps I had more than a couple. Then I cut in on her—just to see what she'd say. Believe it or not she never even attempted to apologise or explain! She was gay and carefree and talked about impersonal things.

"By that time I was too dazed—or too drunk—to be angry. I got her alone in a corner of the library and tried to ask her what had happened, but—she wouldn't listen to me. The minute I put my arm around her she pushed me away. That was too much. I left her and I left the house.

"Nothing seemed to matter much then. I didn't even bother to turn in my story on the dance at the office. I came home here and—well—I got drunk in earnest and slept it off and worked on my novel and got drung again. And I've been here ever since. It's awful to think that the last time I saw Kitty we quarreled. . ."

Basil broke the silence. "Did it ever occur to you that the girl at the dance was not Kitty Jocelyn?"

"What!"

Again Foyle told the tale of Ann's impersonation.

"Then—Kitty did keep her word. She did try to meet me—even though she was ill. And all the time I was waiting for her, she was dying only a few yards away. . ."

"She must have planned the impersonation from the first as cover for her elopement with you," said Basil. "That's why she wore Ann's clothes when she left the house instead of her own. She evidently had no idea how seriously ill she was. According to Victorine, Kitty, like Rhoda, believed it was just another touch of her recurrent malaria. Her talk with you the afternoon of the dance shows she was afraid of Rhoda's scheming, and determined to leave the house that night if she possibly could. The effort used up her last reserve of strength. She must have collapsed when she got as far as 78th street and Fifth Avenue where her body was found."

Leach buried his face in his hands. "If I hadn't been half drunk when I danced with her I would have seen through that impersonation—I know I would. I knew every line of Kitty's face by heart."

"What about Danine?" Foyle looked at Basil. "He wasn't tight, but he was taken in by the impersonation."

Basil nodded. "I've been wondering for some time if Danine was quite as much in love with Kitty as he claims. . ."

Leach looked from one to the other. "If Danine didn't love her why was he pestering her to marry him?"

"Did he ever ask her directly?" inquired Basil.

"I believe not. She kept him at arm's length. But everybody thought he wanted to marry her Rhoda was sure of it."

"Do you know of any one who had reason to hate Kitty?"

"No one could have hated her. Of course I always had a feeling that Mrs. Jowett didn't like her. But I think that was just because Mrs. Jowett is a stuffy old thing and Kitty was young and gay."

"One more thing. Do you recognise this?"

Foyle extended the palm of his hand. On it lay the diamond ring.

"Why, that's my mother's engagement ring!"

"Sure?"

"Of course I'm sure." Leach examined it. "I'd know that little V-shaped scratch on the side anywhere. I gave the ring to Kitty. She couldn't wear it publicly, but she kept it in her purse. Where did you get it?"

"We found it in Pasquale's rooms."

"In—Pasquale's rooms?" Leach looked utterly astonished. "But Kitty would never go there! She didn't like him. Nobody liked him but Rhoda. I—I don't understand . . . ."

Outside, again, Foyle sighed heavily. "D'ye suppose he was acting when he pretended he didn't know Kitty was hard up? A fortune hunter might poison a girl to get rid of her if he believed she was an heiress, and then found out a bit too late that she was a fortune hunter herself."

"Say, chief!" cried a policeman in uniform when they entered his office. "Word's just came in from the Nineteenth Precint that they pinched a young feller last Hitler, for drunk 'n' disorderly 'n' night who said he was Adolph 'n' assaultin' an officer 'n' they found he had two menu cards on him engraved in French—'n' there wasn't no restaurant name—justa funny lookin' thing like a unicorn 'n' date—same date as Kitty Jocelyn's coming-out party. One o' boys hopped round to the office o' the caterer the Jocelyn's had 'n' sure enough, he identified the cards as two o' the menus used for supper at the Jocelyn dance."

The man brought into Foyle's office thirty minutes later was young, tall and gaunt. He wore evening clothes but one trouser leg was torn at the knee, the whole suit was gray with dust, and the bow of his white tie had come undone. His hair was mussed, his lower lip cut, and he sported a truly beautiful black eye.

Foyle regarded him for a moment.

"Well, Herr Hitler, just what were you doing at the Kitty Jocelyn's coming-out party?"

"So that's it!" The young man sat down without asking permission "I suppose you found the menu cards in my pocket and recognised the Jocelyn crest? Did you notice that it violates two laws of heraldry? The old grandfather must have got one of these paid genealogists to fake it for him."

"Crest? Oh, you mean that unicorn thing? No, it was the date that put us wise. Lissen, young feller, I don't want any cracks outa you. This is a murder case and it's serious. What's your real name?"

"I don't believe my name will convey much to the police, Inspector. It happens to be Elmer Judson."

"Why did you gate-crash the Jocelyn party?"

The young man smiled. "Because I wanted something to eat."

"Something to—eat?"

"Precisely. Something to eat. Sordid but necessary. I hope to be an anthropologist some day. At the moment I'm working my way through Columbia, by serving as night clerk in a small broadway hotel. I earn enough for rent, tuition fee and books. Unfortunately there remains the somewhat pressing problem of food. And that's how I've solved it — by crashing swell parties.

"I'm required to wear evening dress at the hotel, and I'm on duty there from six p.m. to two a.m. That lets me out just in time for supper. During the season, I live on the fat of the land. The only trouble is that I'm beginning to get a little tired of caviar, pheasant, terrapin, and foie gras. I'd give anything for a dish of corned beef and cabbage."

"Why did you take those menu cards?" demanded Inspector Foyle.

"One of the boys at Columbia told me," said the dishevelled Judson, "that I was able to get away with gate-crashing only because parties are given in hotels nowadays. I bet this fellow a week's salary that I would crash a party in a private house. I was to bring him a supper menu card in order to prove I'd actually been there."

"How did you get into the Jocelyn house?" asked Basil.

"I got the afternoon and evening off at the hotel where I work. Then I hid my glad rags under an old raincoat, took a bunch of red roses that had been used to decorate the hotel lobby, and went round to the Jocelyns' about four in the afternoon. There were all sorts of fellows going in and out—florist's men, caterer's men, messenger boys and so on. I followed the crowd down into the basement kitchen. I saw a fellow with a chef's cap on, and I waved the roses in front of him and said, 'Where do these go, brother?' He glared at me and answered, 'Upstairs, of course!' So I trotted upstairs with a messenger boy who was toting a bunch of gardenias, and he says, 'This way, buddy,' and takes me into the biggest private ballroom I ever saw outside the movies. There were more florist's men there, and everybody was too busy to notice me particularly, so I shoved the roses in a corner, and beat it upstairs to the next floor.

"I found an unused room and camped there. The time passed quick because I had a pamphlet on the derivation of the levirate from fraternal polyandry among the Kuki-Lushai tribes of North East India. Around three a.m. when I judged the party would be well under way, I strolled out into the hall."

"And no one noticed you until you got downstairs?"

"Well I had one narrow squeak. A fat, pasty-faced fellow came out into the hall from another room I thought my goose was cooked. But his face went sort of greenish and then he said something about Miss Jocelyn having asked him to get her a wrap and that was why he'd been in her suite. I couldn't help saying, 'Where the wrap?' An' then he looked sicker than ever an' said he couldn't find it.

"I got downstairs without meeting any on else, and made a beeline for the supper room. Gosh, it was like something in a dream! Roses and strawberries on every table. . . . I grabbed two menu cards for good measure. Then I drifted into the ballroom and a bird with a dead pan came up and said, 'Please step this way, sir,' an before I knew what was happening he'd got me into a little room with a gray-haired dame an' she was onto my being a gate-crasher somehow, an' she began to threaten me with the police just as the door opened and in walked Fatty—the pasty-faced sneak I'd met in the hall upstairs.

UNIVERSAL MILKING MACHINE, double unit, electric, nearly new. Oliver Lamplugh, R. 2, Tamworth. Coming one week from Friday on April 27. We will have the honor of the first two teams to play by next week. Two teams will be eliminated in the first week's play. In the playoffs the first and fourth, second and third teams will meet in a best two out of three series and the two finalists will play three out of five. Each game must last at least seven innings to be declared a game. Each team may sign fifteen players, the members playing with the grade they registered with. The teachers may use any students not signed on other teams. Players' forms obtainable from Mr. Hurdon, must be filled out. Each team must contribute seventy-five cents to the league for prizes for the championship. First prize will be three dollars and second will be one dollar and fifty cents. Teachers are not eligible to play. Umpires will be selected from Stew Wood, Gord Bankier, Maurice Rollins, Bill Sheehan, Mr. Hurdon and Mr. Townsend. Tom Leslie is the official scorer. Practices will be conducted during this week according to the following schedule. Monday, Grade IX will practice under Johnny Neal. Tuesday, Grade X under Mr. Mc-Cormick. Wednesday, Grade XI under Bob Strachan. Thursday, Grade XII under Mr. Mills. Friday, Grade XIII under Bill Sheehan. The staff will practice Saturday under Mr. Townsend.

The five mile race will be run off one week from Wednesday on April 28, but not if more entries are received before that date. The approximately four p.m. and will cover the following course: The runners will start from the back of the school, going east along Queen to MacDonald Avenue, then to Victoria and east to the Golf links, then diagonally to the corner of Sidney and Bridge, then to Birchtree and Station, along Station and across to the beginning of coal chutes, then around the Round House and over the College Street Bridge, along Front Street to Bell and across the upper bridge, then along Foundry Street, up Church Street and ending up on the campus in front of the Collegiate. Spectators are to be a feature event of the year and don't forget the prizes.

Arrangements talking part in the Y.M.C.A. display on Thursday will practice Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday at noon.

Week of Monday April 26 to Friday, April 30

Monday, April 26—The Home and School Club this week will take the form of a Flower and Seed Exchange. Instruction sheets have been handed out so there should be no mistake as to whom is to bring what. Some talented local artists have given their services for this evening and a fine program is guaranteed for all those who attend.

Tuesday, April 27—Nothing doing.

Wednesday, April 28—One week from today is the day set for the six mile race. All those who have decided to enter must have their entry applications and parents' permissions no later than Friday of this week. If any parents are timid, there will be no race. So you longwinded fellows get busy running.

Thursday, April 29 — Same as Tuesday.

Friday, April 30 — This is the day the whole school has been waiting for. The Belleville College Ale Formal takes place tonight. No official time has yet been set for the start of the dance, but Mr. Turner's Three Star Windy graciously promises that it is coming. Ill one-thirty a.m. Such gems will be open and ready to fill yourselves by the committee-chairman, Ruth Bleakney. Decorations are to be in charge of Jean Bentley and Betty Lou Gilmour. Invitations should have been in by four o'clock Monday. Admission is $1.25 per couple for those holding student cards, $2.00 others. So prepare for a really marvelous evening.

Remember the big date for this week is the twentieth.—Y.C.M.

The Odyssey

At the first hour or 2:45 on Wednesday April 21st., a group of young people left the HOLLY-Code grounds through the dimly lighted streets of the city to the tune of a Virginia Reel played by Mr. Ellis. Here on their way to the station to catch the train which would carry them to a singing engagement in Marmora Hall. As luggage they were carrying (so it is reported) four toothbrushes, a pink nightshirt and two pounds of salami.

The trip to Toronto was uneventful, and they weighed heavily on the travellers' hands. The meals were many an idle hour by stepping from the front carriage and picking a bundle of the little crosses which decorate the floor, and then stepping back onto the rear coach as the train. The remainder of the boys carried 12 cents an hour dealing milk during the train at the various wheatie stops.

Indeed this only exciting occurrence of the whole trip was when Sylvester Cavanagh was snatched from the observation car by an inquisitive cow which was standing by the track and was last seen in the outskirts of Cobourg. He didn't catch up until we were 3 miles past Brighton.

A fine mist of rain had hung in the air during the last part of the trip but it increased to a heavy downpour as the boys left the Union Station. Their instructor, who had arrived a day before them and worked diligently for days unmasis in securing reservations in a hotel, found that every hotel had just enough time to dry their clothes between the last of the previous night. Their meagre rations were supplemented by a bag of bananas which they had managed to obtain while passing an outdoor fruit stand en route to their reservations. It might be said here that Sylvester Cavanagh was undoubtedly the hero of the holiday during the remainder of our stay by tipping him a nickel.

A practice was scheduled for the o'clock on Friday. Hall after taking the wrong street car, and engaging in a fist fight with the bus conductor, the Octet arrived at the Broadway Tabernacle about twenty four. The place seemed to be deserted so the boys amused themselves for the better part of one hour by sitting in the back row of the pews and singing. Mr. Cavanagh R.S. shot at the tympani on the stage below, following which they returned to their rooms and caught a few hours sleep.

That evening, the organization took part in the program at Massey Hall which was a huge success with the best musical talent in Ontario appear, and the Octet stood up to the best of them. Flushed with success from this slightly boisterous performance the boys went out into the night and sang a series of numbers on the corners of Yonge and Bloor Streets, and after passing the hat, realized the tidy sum of $2.35, which this money they bought themselves a light lunch and then returned to their rooms.

Now all the previous color and adventure faded from the undertaking and Thursday was a dreary day indeed. The 8 a.m. interview was spent in sordid slumber and most of the afternoon was passed in the form of a dingy corner theatre. The train ride was spent in a mood bound through the Newsreel and comic strip attractions and then fell asleep exhausted by the day's events.

The train that sped them home glad events that followed from the end of the previous day, in that it seemed to be one long succession of motion, other than a strong tailwind. Indeed only two hours after leaving the United States Sylvester who lay asleep on a packing case in the observation car roused himself long enough to say—"Look, the Octet is home!"

Well, there it is: the story of eight boys who went away to sing for the people of Toronto and perhaps some of the details have been left out, unintentionally but you may be sure that the boys gave their very best possible effort and had an excellent impression of musical entertainment in B.O.L.V.S. behind them.

Letters to Sylvester.

Dear Sylvester,

I have come to your fair city from mid-Ontario and I find the housing situation is terrible. I can't get a place to stay. What should I do?

Signed:
Sherlock Homeless.

Dear Sherlock:

All I can advise is that you buy a bicycle. As long as you have a bike, you can always get a flat.

Signed:
Sylvester.

ASSEMBLY

Movies on Music:

The main event in our Wednesday assembly period was the Hollywood production of a film which dealt with the symphony orchestra. Through the students received an idea of the size and appearance of the orchestra as well as something from the music itself.

Guest Conductor:

The band played under the direction of Trumpet Major Ridsdand who acted as guest conductor in addition to giving the boys much valuable practice during the month out the entire week.

The remainder of the period was the musicians, from various positions, in with the regular assembly activities.

BOYS' SPORTS

Here we are in the final term, and as is customary at this time of the year softball takes the spotlight. This year Mr. Townsend has inaugurated something entirely new. Interfor-form will go on as usual at noon hour, but a new league has also been formed to provide some amusement for the entire body. Here is the plan. Each grade will contribute an all-star team, and these, seven each, will make six teams in all. These six teams will play a round robin schedule playing every Monday, Wednesday and Friday at noon. The first game commencing one week from Friday on April 27. We will have the honor of the first two teams to play by next week. Two teams will be eliminated in the first week's play. In the playoffs the first and fourth, second and third teams will meet in a best two out of three series and the two finalists will play three out of five. TORONTO STOCK EXCHANGE

Toronto, April 16 (CP)—Industrials posted gains this afternoon on Toronto exchange, though sales were narrowly despite sizeable gains in spots. Volume was a little lighter at 2,761,000 shares.

The lighter issues stood out in the action. Hollinger-Ontario gained 2 points and Hiram Walker 2. Senior oils and foods were stronger.

Edona changed hands in heavy volume, Kelly opening around 3.15 ½ sagged to 1.76 and then slowly recovered to $2.05 for a net gain of 4 cents. Pickle Crow was up 3 cents to $2, Obeago was up 17 to 66 and Dominion Tar was 25 cents high at 1.35 before selling back to 96 when it was up 23 cents from Friday's close.

Lake Duvalt and Lakeshor were weaker base metals. Noranda advanced to 36 or more and Noranda had a small gain.

HOGS

Toronto, April 16—(CP)—Prices were unchanged on bacon-hog markets reporting early today. Grade A bacon-hogs were quoted at $17.60, Barrie $17.75; Stratford, Thorn to Farmers $17.60, to truckers $17.75.

INDIN LAKE
YELLOWKNIFE'S NEW BOOM CAMP
With as great "boiling," according to Dr. Wilson, Provincial Geologist, by May 45.0, as that of the famous Yellowknife camp, Indin Lake, 100 miles northwest of Yellowknife, is attracting interest now leading prospectors in the North. Preliminary indications are that this district is the scene of a "new gold rush" in the Northwest.
In the statistical review of the Indin Lake region which Dr. Wilson has prepared, he says he believes its shores seem to rise up the spectacular possibilities of this new gold district.
The statistical review is all the more interesting in that the fact that it was compiled by a financial writer who has specialized in the Yellowknife Gold Belt since 1941 when writing a series of investment articles forecasting what has since proved to be the Yellowknife boom. Sector and showing why Giant was a 1/7—Advertisement.

A copy of this timely Indin Lake report is available to readers of this paper upon request, without obligation—and we shall also be pleased to have your name on the mailing list for our Daily Market Letter. This is a daily report on developments in the mining and investment fields.

Cpl. Ivor Pearson Wins Commission
Two ruddy-faced English boys with the freshness of Lincolnshire bloom in their complexions sailed from their native England during the blitz-horror days in 1940 and took up residence with relatives Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Wright of Deloro.
They were, Ivor D. and Alan Pearson, sons of Squadron Leader Gerald Pearson, R.A.F., of Lincoln, England.
Fifteen-year-old Ivor furthered his education in Belleville Collegiate Institute classrooms, graduating in June 1942.
Then came a war and Ivor, and Britain needed men. Ivor said good bye to his chief mates and many other Belleville friends and joined the Canadian Army as a private.
Today the Department of National Defence announced that he has been given the commission of a first Lieutenant in the Canadian infantry.
After enlisting, he was sent to Brockville for training. He took an instructor's course. He went overseas with the rank of Lance Corporal in September, 1942 and was later promoted to the rank of Acting Corporal. He did some extensive fighting in France and Germany and his name appeared on the leadership merited him the recommendation for a commission.
Brother Allan returned to England in December, 1942.

RUSSIAN TANKS NOW 20 MILES FROM BERLIN AMERICANS REPULSE ATTACK ON ELBE BRIDGEHEAD

9th Army Fights One of Hardest Battles of War

Capture of Big Rail Centre Of Plauen Bisects Germany

By JAMES M. LONG

Paris, April 17 — (AP) — The Germans launched a heavy attack today on The United States 9th Army's Elbe bridgehead pointing towards Berlin, but the Americans beat off the attack with heavy losing ground.

To the south, the United States 3rd Army captured the big Saxony rail centre of Plauen, in effect bisecting Germany, and knew down the last six miles to the Czechoslovak border.

The Germans attacked the 9th Army's Biederitz area below the bridgehead in the Barby sector 53 miles southwest of Berlin with infantry-men and tanks. The Germans withdrawn from Berlin and the eastern front, are being thrown in to meet rising serious losses and destruction of 15 to 20 tanks.

The United States 9th Army fought one of the hardest battles of the war in the Elbe bridgehead. Plain five miles east of the Elbe, within 46 to 52 miles of the bombarded capital. The United States 1st Army moved into the Berlin sector 40 in the Leipzig area, 75 miles southwest of the capital. German sources said the Americans and Russians were 25 miles east of Berlin. Leipzig was encircled.

Leipzig was virtually encircled, but the 30,000 enemy troops there were disposing of the city's war materials and the 1,000,000 civilians in the city to the forces of the United States 1st (BBC) said Leipzig was encircled.)

Supreme headquarters said 1,313 planes a fourth of all aircraft the Luftwaffe is believed to have left were destroyed yesterday. A spokesman for the United States 8th Air Force said "The Luftwaffe has been knocked out."

The pace of Gen. Eisenhower's offensive was slowed by hundreds of stretched supply lines and partly because of stout German resistance in besieged cities such as Leipzig, Bremen, Hannover, Magdeburg, Halle and Dessau.

The stowup of Allied armor and infantry into the Leipzig area probably will be the post-war zone of Stalin and Eisenhower armies, but this stirred some speculation that the Allies intended to move into the so-called Russian eastern zone. But it was likely that the Allies "next few days might go far to clarify the situation."

German radios were full of talk that the 3rd Army had launched the awaited offensive and was moving toward an imminent juncture with the Russians. Reports from Prague said in Paris said a link-up already had taken place, but this needed confirmation. Moscow, however, said there were 30 miles from the Saxony capital.

Enemy Goes Dike.

Canadian troops whittled down a Nazi pocket in which they captured 200,000 Germans. The pocket was centred on Arnhem and Zuider Zee dikes at Hilversum, sending salt water flooding toward Utrecht. It was the first Canadian army task.

The U.S. 3rd Army, which captured Plauen, was about 75 miles from the Russian lines in a front moving westward according to German accounts.

For all practical purposes, the capture of Plauen by the 3rd Army became it cut some of the last remaining rail and road lines to the enemy. However, still has routes through Czechoslovakia. Plauen, a city of 102,000, is a textile and lace manufactory and textile, lace and embroidery industry.

Pilots saw panicky movements of German vehicles north and south and westward from Berlin through the narrowing corridor between the Allies and Russians.

Fight to Nuernberg.

On the southern flank, the 45th Division of the U.S. 7th Army fought in the streets of Nuernberg, second city in Bavaria and the birthplace of the Nazi racial laws. The Germans' traffic centre is 5 miles from Munich and 153 miles from Berchtesgaden.

The 200,000th prisoner was taken from the Ruhr pocket. The Britain's Tribute Paid Late President At St. Paul's, London

By WILLARD BONI

London, April 17 — (AP) — A somber King and Queen of Britain and a Prime Minister who wept for an old friend joined American service men and women today in a memorial tribute to President Roosevelt in battle-scarred St. Paul's Cathedral.

Princess Elizabeth, the Princess Royal, and the Duchess of Kent, accompanied the King George and Queen Elizabeth. With Prime Minister Churchill, who proudly called himself "President Roosevelt's Lieutenant," was his daughter Sarah.

The high and the humble were in the gathering of 2,300 which filled the cathedral. Other thousands stood in the streets in the warm spring sunshine. They waited outside during the ceremony and watched the dignitaries file from the church as St. Paul's bells tolled the Requiem.

Selection of St. Paul's Cathedral — traditional scene of Britain's great public memorial services — was an added mark of the unprecedented honor the United Kingdom has paid a foreign statesman.

Latest adjustment of the severed trap was wiped out yesterday and the western remnant was being closed rapidly. The 340-mile gap through the removal of prisoners, including many generals taken prisoner.

One important industrial prize was the capture of Leipzig (600,000), on the approaches to Leipzig Here was a vast synthetic oil plant from which the Germans drew 350,000 tons a month. Iron foundries, machine tools and other factories dot Merseburg.

Halle is in Chemnitz.

Third Army troops moved to within two miles of Chemnitz and British Second Army forces attacking Bremen in the north were the same distance from the city. Chemnitz was virginally surrounded by 1st. Army troops moving in for the kill on a fanatical Nazi garrison of 30,000 men commanded by Gauleiter Hellmuth Hall, on the outskirts of Dessau, is the scene of the trial of Adolf Eichmann.

Prisoners entered cages by thousands. The 3rd Army alone took 22,382.

Nuernberg's communique listed 86,768 prisoners taken Sunday, raising the total for April 16 days to 340,000. Many were captured by the 12th. Army group which is pushing through the vitals of Germany.

No Formal End of War Until Enemy Pockets Wiped Out Says Eisenhower

By LEWIS HAWKINS

London, April 17, (AP)—A statement by Gen. Eisenhower that there will be no announcement of V-E Day "until the important enemy forces in the western front have been wiped out" indicated today that the last campaign of the war in Europe may be weeks, if not months, away.

This Allied Supreme Commander told a group of American radio correspondent who visited an advanced headquarters yesterday that the end of war in Europe probably will not end until Allied troops have completed the occupation of Germany.

Eisenhower's statement might mean that V-E Day proclamation will be issued until after Hitler and his fanatical cohorts are rooted from their mountain redoubt in the Bavaria into which they are reported streaming for a death stand.

Military minds have estimated it may take months to reduce Hitler's cragged fortress.

It must be remembered there are millions of men in Germany under arms—how many no one knows.

There are certainly enough to put sizeable forces in the pocket along the German front from Lubeck, Stettin to Bremen, as well as in the Berchtesgaden area.

In addition, there are more than 500,000 German troops outside Germany proper, including 300,000 in Holland, 300,000 in Norway, 300,000 in Italy, 80,000 to 100,000 in Holland, Belgium and Nordwest area and perhaps another 60,000 in other French Atlantic coast pockets. Allied troops battling in Italy, Holland, the Low and Nordwest area and perhaps another 60,000 in other French Atlantic coast pockets. Allied troops battling in Italy, Holland, the Low and theatres can testify to the effectiveness of their die-hard resistance.

Hitler may have as 300,000 German troops remain in Norway, which Allied air forces have been heavily reupplied recently.

It is by no means certain that the fall of Berlin and a solid junction of British and American forces would immediately shake the German resistance to pieces all over the country. Hitler rules all the way from Italy to Norway. Unless it did, it seems unlikely that London, Washington and Moscow would feel justified in declaring major opposition at an end.

MONTY CONFERS WITH ALLIED LEADERS IN GERMANY

During their April conference on plans for the final Allied assault, British and American commanders took over a chart compiled by the Western Front. Left to right: a British A.D.C.; Lieut.-Gen. Sir Miles Dempsey, British 2nd Army; General Omar Bradley, commander, 12th Army Group; Field Marshal Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, commander British Army Group; Lieut.-Gen. William H. Simpson, U. S. 9th Army and an American A.D.C.

Germans Lose 1,013 Planes Monday, Greatest Day's Loss In History of Air Warfare

By HENRY S. HAMILTON

London, April 17 — (AP)—American and British air fighters ripped into southern Germany again today as a final tabulation showed a total of 1,013 German planes were destroyed yesterday by Allied pilots during a record assault on German air fields.

One British force boosted the tally of enemy aircraft knocked out on the ground and in the air by Allied pilots in the last 10 days to 1,440 which represents about half of the estimated reserve strength of the Luftwaffe at the time of the Rhine crossing.

In the first 16 days of April at least 3,121 German planes have been destroyed.

Air force officials worked all night checking and rechecking the record-smashing claims turned in by fighter pilots.

Their figures were verified by combat films. (Cameras on fighter planes are synchronized to the guns.)

Luftwaffe Knocked Out

"The Luftwaffe has been knocked out," said one highly placed official who asked that his identity not be revealed.

Months of relentless bombing of German oil plants had had their effect. The German air force had ample planes in reserve — provided it could get them. But crucial moment there was no fuel to get them into the air.

There was no let-up in the heavy bombing campaign which Gen. Spaatz, commander of the U. S. Strategic Air Forces in Europe, declared Germany had switched from strategic to a purely tactical job in support of the ground forces.

As he was issuing an order of the day to American airmen saying that the strategic air war had been won, British and Canadian Typhoon fighters were winging to Czechoslovakia and southern Germany, where they attacked German rail bottlenecks in direct support of the U. S. 3rd and 7th Armies.

One British force made a 1,600-mile round trip and attacked freight yards at Plzen, a Canadian force hit Schwandorf, on one of the lines from Munich to the Danube and the Austrian frontier.

Fast and West Fronts Close

The east and west fronts now are so close together in this area that the blocking of rail lines will severely hamper German defences on both sides. The yards at Plzen, where several lines meet, carry arms from the Skoda works direct to both fronts.

During the night, R.A.F. Mosquitoes bombed Berlin, dropping a number of 2,000-pounders, and also Munich, where installations for the defence of southern Germany has been reported temporarily centred.

Medium and light bombers hit the Nasjon, but Nuernberg was the principal nursery of Nazi ideology. Here, year after year, beginning in September, 1923, seven months after Hitler's seizure of power, the Germans were indoctrinated with Nazi "enlightening" during weeks of endless oratory, pageants, marches, military exercises and countless personal appearances by "Hitler, Hess, Goebbels, Goering, Himmler, Rosenberg, Ley and other Nazi spellbinders.

Rally City 4 Years Before Hitler

Nuernberg, in fact, had been selected as the rally city 6 years before Hitler came into his own. In the days before his rule the Nazis convened every second year.

With their seizure of power the Nazis gave flamboyant epithets to their annual Nuernberg rallies. The official commendatory follows:

The 1926 Congress of Victory; the 1934 Triumph of Will; the 1935 Party Convention of Honor; the 1937 Party Convention of Freedom; the 1938 Party Convention of Greater Germany.

Highlights of their annual party rallies were:

The 1933 Hitler's proclamation at the opening wherein instructions were given to the party and its followers on what to do in the ensuing year; excerpts from address on "Hitler as Leader" which he ridiculed every set tendency that did not suit him, and read into "the Jewish conception of art," and decried what he called Bolshevism in art.

The third rally was marked by the gathering of 100,000 elite Hitler Youth delegates representatives of the party throughout Germany.

The 1935 "Greeting Day" of Reich Leaders.

Before Hitler's advent the whole world flocked to Nuernberg for another reason: the medieval walled part of the town often was filled with tourists. Nuernberg nearly bursting with pride in its priceless works of art and beauties of its ancient past with "Die Meistersinger Von Nuernberg" immortalized by Richard Wagner.

CRADLE OF NAZISM, NUERNBERG, FALLS TO YANKEE TANKS

German National Socialism Shaken to Foundations by Latest Hun Disaster

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER

Outside Nuernberg, April 17 (AP) — Nuernberg was shaken to its foundations when, despite all its frantic efforts to the last, American tanks entered this "city of the party conventions" and the Nazi spiritual fortress boasts that Nuernberg would be ge done duak yesterday.

900 Ft. Underground Nazi Jet Plane Factory Discovered

Tarthun, Germany, April 17 (AP)—A huge, 900-foot underground operating with 6 planned production headways for 700 fighter planes a month was uncovered here Monday by United States troops.

One of the keys in the vast underground system built to thwart bombings, the plants gave insight into the ingenious industrial empire conceived only for war by Adolf Hitler.

ENEMY FLOODING TERRAIN TO SOUTH OF ZUIDER ZEE

Sudden Thrust of Canadian Tanks From Arnhem Upsets Nazi Plan of Defence

By ROSS MUNRO

(CP War Correspondent)

With the 1st Canadian Army, April 17 — (CP) — The Germans today began to flood the Kras south of the Zuider Zee between the cities of Utrecht and Amsterdam as Canadian armored units poured west towards the Grebbe line and "fortress Holland" itself.

By opening the dike gates the enemy was allowing the Zuider Zee waters to pour over the Polders — land reclaimed from the sea and blooming tulip fields in the area north of Utrecht and southeast of Amsterdam. This flood control system is an essential part of the defences of fortress Holland which includes the cities of Amsterdam, Utrecht, the Hague, Rotterdam and Hilversum.

A sudden and unanticipated sweep of Canadian tank columns northwest from Arnhem upset the German plans. Their tanks and guns are believed to have resorted to flooding when speed was the one hand intended.

This spectacular armored thrust into the German pocket south of the Zuider Zee held the spotlight on the Canadian-Canadian Army front after practically all initial resistance in the Arnhem-Ede area had ended.

Thrust Near Ede Cut.

The Canadian armor reached Barneveld, 17 miles northwest of Arnhem, today, 17 miles south of Amersfoort and another column struck north on the Apeldoorn-Amersfoort highway, the main route of withdrawal for enemy forces caught in the Arnhem area.

Tanks were only six miles south of the Zuider Zee after cutting the highway.

To the escape route cut, the Germans now are evacuating by barges from the port of Harderwijk, 10 miles northwest of Ede's doorn, across the southern tip of the Zuider Zee to the Hilversum-Amsterdam area. A considerable number of Germans withdrawn from the Arnhem area at home but there still remains about 2,000 enemy troops in the area.

The Apeldoorn garrison is being cut off from the north, northeast and south by Canadian infantry and tanks. The 1st Russian, of London, and the 49th (West Riding) and the 2nd Armored Brigade is one tank column driving on Apeldoorn from the Apeldoorn sector.

(This was the first time the 1st Russian have been named as participating in the fighting since the Russian Canadian Army was formed.)

Except for a few isolated pockets, resistance has ended in Arnhem, the area over when the German garrison of Groeningen, Holland's fifth largest city, surrendered yesterday to the Canadian 2nd Division while the Canadian 3rd Division reached the west of the 2nd, closed up to the Ijssel River, which flows through the 3rd were within 10 miles of the eastern end of the causeway stretching to the Afsluitdijk.

The tanks, meanwhile, attacking in the direction of Arnhem, last night were within a mile of Barneveld and only eight miles east of Amersfoort, key town in the Grebbe defence line to which the pointed Germans are withdrawing. Within a few days all the eastern portion of the Grebbe and Peel defence line likely will be clear of the enemy.

German Garrison, Largely of Poles And Russians, Revolts at Doesburg

With the 1st Canadian Army, April 17 — (CP Cable) — The German garrison of Doesburg, in the east bank of the Ijssel River 19 miles east of Arnhem, revolted Sunday afternoon, preventing marching batches of enemy troops crossed the Ijssel to surrender to the Canadian 3rd Division's advance.

The revolution was made up predominantly of Russian and Polish troops, impressed into the German army from prison camps by the Germans. Two hundred are in Canadian prisoner-of-war cages. At least one company still unaccounted for and probably hiding in Doesburg.

The Russians sent three emissaries at 1:30 a.m. to find out whether the Canadians would accept capitulation.

The first troops made their way to Canadian lines at 4:30 a.m. Others following at intervals until 11 a.m., when the last of the garrison set off to the corps prisoner-of-war cage.

The prisoners then were brought to the compound where Lt. Cpls. Bill Norris of Drayton, Ont., and Jim Wilson of Enfield, N.S., took charge.

Reds Tear Open Sectors of Front Says Nazi Report

Konev Launches Drive To Link Up with U.S. 3rd

London, April 17. (CP)— The German High Command today said the Russians have torn open sectors of the German front east of Berlin and Marshal Ivan Konev's 1st Ukrainian army has launched another, powerful offensive across the Neisse in a drive to link up with the U.S. 3rd Army.

An afternoon German broadcast declared Russian tanks were in action "east of Hoyerswerda", only 20 miles northeast of Berlin on the main highway and railroad to Sielitin.

Earlier the Germans said Soviet airborne troops had landed less than 22 miles from the Reich capital.

Transocean said a clean breakthrough by the Russians toward Berlin had been prevented.

"At some points the front was torn open but later these points were sealed off and some of them were narrowed", the Propaganda Agency declared.

Impose Security Silence.

The German High Command imposed a security silence on naming places or details on the Berlin front or any other sad, indicating the situation was considered critical.

The German announcement said Konev was attacking along a 35-mile front from Forst to Rothenburg, near the Saxony border.

Hard on the heels of the order of the day in which Hitler sought to rally his armed armies for a death stand, the military command on the Oder canal, upon "every German soldier" to "stand and his watchword "they shall not pass".

Reporting on the Russian appeal, the German Transocean Agency quoted the army command as telling the troops in the field:

"Only those who continue to gain everything. To lose our nerve means to lose everything."

Russians Are Paratroops.

By German account, Red army paratroops have been dropped somewhere within Berlin's inner defense ring, were encircled and wiped out. One enemy commentator announced Russian troops had landed within heights 23 miles from the capital near Seelow, nine miles west of the Oder River.

The Russians still maintained their bridgehead on the west-side of the Oder river offensive which the German spokesman said broke forth at 3:30 a.m. yesterday on a front of 130 miles. Berlin conceded a 35-mile front was under Russian forces, last reported some 85 miles away, was likely in the area mentioned.

The rumble of Russian guns was heard in Berlin as the enemy said Soviet assault forces "reinforced by fresh troops" were on men lines on both sides of Frankfurt, 23 miles east of Berlin.

Advancing in Austria.

The Red army meanwhile drove steadily ahead in Austria and Czechoslovakia, Marshal Feodor I. Tolbukhin's 3rd Ukrainian army battered its way through the Austrian Alps and captured Furstenfeld, 26 miles east of Austria's second city of Graz. Other troops driving through the Danube Valley were 39 miles east of Linz.

Czechoslovakia — Marshal Rodion Y. Malinovsky's 2nd Ukrainian army drove within 18 miles south-east of the war production city of Brno (Brunn), Czechoslovakia, Radio Bojanovice.

PASSING OF F.D.R. 'GREATEST LOSS,' 'ENVIABLE DEATH'

Mr. Churchill Extols Late President as "Greatest American Friend"

By JAMES F. KING

London, April 17. (AP)—In deeply emotion terms, Prime Minister Churchill today eulogized Franklin D. Roosevelt as "the greatest American friend we have ever known, and the greatest champion of freedom who has ever brought help and succour to the world since the old."

Speaking in the 75-year-old Prime Minister's seat in the House of Commons, was a "bitter loss to humanity", but coupling on the eve of victory, it was "an enviable death."

Earlier at a memorial service in St. Paul's Cathedral attended by the King and Queen, Mr. Churchill had hailed the late President.

He said he had noticed at Yalta that President Roosevelt was ailing, and that when they parted at Alexandria, he "had an indefinable sense of fear that his friend and strength were on the ebb."

Tragic Character of Leadership.

With deep emotion Mr. Churchill, gifted in finding words for almost any occasion, said that this time words failed him in trying to convey to his colleagues, for Mr. Roosevelt.

"It conceived an admiration for him as a statesman a man of affairs, and as a war leader, I felt the utmost confidence in his upright, inspiring character and outlook, and a personal regard and affection beyond my power to express now."

The late leader, indeed, better loss, to humanity that these heart beats of sympathy, he said, "There is no doubt that the President foresaw the great danger dawning in the not pre-war world with far more precision than most well-informed people on either side of the Atlantic."

The House was hushed as Mr. Churchill spoke. He presided with the Speaker's mace covered by the King express Britain's sorrow to the Commons on behalf of the government.

Rotary Acclaims J. O. Herity on 75th Birthday

The Rotary Club at its Monday luncheon paid tribute, to one of its distinguished members, Rotarian John O. Herity, who celebrated his 75th birthday on that date. Rotarian Herity was given a presentation by his fellow clubmen who after the luncheon paid personal congratulations on his attainment of the three score and fifteen years with the best of health that he would enjoy many more birthdays.

Rotarian Herity in silent appreciation stood up and bowed to the applause that followed. Born and one of one forty years his junior, Rotarian Herity is a native Belleville lad. Rotarian the Rev. Grant Spearing, rector of Christ Church who this week is leaving the proud father of a booming baby girl. The Reverend clergyman showed tangible appreciation in the gift of cigarettes.

Rotarian Ken Thompson also came in for club ecstion when President Phil Finkston announced that Rotarian Harry Yoke, organizer for the 8th Victory Loan, was the guest speaker at the regular Monday noon dinner meeting of the local Rotarian Club held at the Quinte Hotel on Monday evening.

In his brief address he declared it a duty of Canadians on the home front to support the forthcoming loan. The money was needed, he said, to supply the materials of war and to provide for the vast rehabilitation program set up for members of the Canadian armed forces.

He told of his own experiences with the R.A.F. and the Belleville R.C.A.F. during the early years of the war and how through lack of equipment airmen were forced to fight and train with obsolete and inferior equipment. Only full support of Victory Loans and Canadians doing their part in the war production front had resulted in the now being turned in the Allies favor. He called for the influence of club members to support the forthcoming loan.

President Harry Rollins was in the chair, while the guest speaker was introduced by Kin Jeff Marvell and club singsong was enjoyed with Kin Ness Wilbur, Jeff Marvell and Norm Colebrooke acting as song leaders with Phil Huddleston at the piano and "Shiv" Barnett as ticket collector. Victory Loan organizers, Mr. Clarke Kinnear and Mr. Don Ross were also present.

Holy Name Society Holds Monthly Meeting

The regular monthly meeting of the Holy Name Society was held last Sunday in the Separate School Academy. Since the previous meeting, the Society has lost several members including Messrs. J. C. Gilcarthy, Chas. Nolan, Louis Mercer, Jack Walsh and John Cornick, the latter two having been killed in action. The only current item of business to be discussed was the presentation by the junior weekly Rings which are to start next June. The Society will be at other undertakings which will mature in the future were briefly discussed and the meeting was brought to a close by prayer.

Kinsmen Speaker Urges Full Support Of Victory Loan

Former Imperial Airways pilot and now a member of the R.C.A.F. and R.C.A.F., Flt. Lieut. C. P. (Pat) Morse, Hastings county public relations officer Victory Loan, organizer for the 8th Victory Loan, was the guest speaker at the regular Monday noon dinner meeting of the local Kinsmen Club held at the Quinte Hotel on Monday evening.

In his brief address he declared it a duty of Canadians on the home front to support the forthcoming loan. The money was needed, he said, to supply the materials of war and to provide for the vast rehabilitation program set up for members of the Canadian armed forces.

Principal Turner Accepts Position At Brantford CVS

Principal of the Belleville College, late and Vocational School for the past three years, Mr. William R. Turner has accepted the position as principal of the Brantford Collegiate and Vocational School with duties to commence with opening of the fall term in September. Mr. and Mrs. Turner will take up residence in Brantford in July, shortly after the close of the present school term is stated.

Coming to Belleville four years ago, Mr. Turner, acquitted as the assistant Collegiate principal and three years was raised to that principal, succeeding Mr. P. C. Mc-Laurin, a strict disciplinarian. Mr. Turner nevertheless gained almost instant respect by the student and was well liked by both the student body and members of the local Board of Education.

Also interested in young people outside their regular school hours Mr. Turner takes an active part in church organization and is associated with the Belleville Rea Cadet Corps. He is an active worker and member of the Belleville Rotary Club and is a regular attendant at St. Andrew's Church where his whole family will be much missed.

The Brantford Collegiate, where Mr. Turner has accepted the principalship, is considerably larger than the Belleville school and has a student registration of approximately 1,200.

Military Notes

Four members of the Reserve Army qualified for Gruer mechanical training in a tender last week on Sunday by Captain A. S. Stratton, Kingston. They were Cpl. C. W. Tice and S/Sgt. Don Brown, Argyll Light Infantry and Cpls. J. J. Purvis and H. V. Rogers, Prince Edward Hastings Battalion. The tests included written and practical examinations with the top mark of 100 per cent.

Said by his officers to be one of the regiment's most efficient mechanical transport instructors, S/Sgt. Don Brown, A.L.I., has been promoted to the rank of acting quartermaster sergeant in the Quartermaster. The new WO has trained many of the regiment's drivers and is held in high regard by all ranks of the unit. Civilian life he operates Brown's Garage, Dundas Street.

The new Reserve Army badge to be worn on the sleeve of the battle uniform were issued last night to the Reserve units. The badge is covered with black lettering "Reserve Army" and is worn on the left sleeve 5½ inches above the cuff in the same position that Active Army personnel wear their badge. The badge was issued primarily to distinguish reserve armyists from National Mobilization Act personnel who are on Home Defence duty.

Captain A. Gallup, of Ottawa and Cornwall, has been posted to this district as district officer recruiting Captain George Brooks, Belleville, has left on his first visit to Belleville yesterday.

Frank Haffey C.C.F. Nominee In W. Hastings

Well known Trenton druggist and town councillor of that centre, Mr. Frank Haffey, has been named as the C.C.F. candidate in the West Hastings riding in the forthcoming provincial elections, it has been announced through party headquarters.

Mr. Haffey made his debut into public life in December of last year when after being approached by Trenton labor representatives he successfully became a candidate and was elected to the Trenton town council. He received the C.C.F. nomination for the West Hastings riding by acclamation.

He has three sons in the services; Michael, in Holland with the R.C.A.F.; Clyde with the Army in England, and Frank of the R.C.A.F. in Ottawa. A fourth son, John, received his retirement from the Air Force last week and is now on the reserve list.

"I joined the C.C.F. movement because it is sincere and is what it proclaims to be," declared Mr. Haffey stated following his appointment as party candidate. "If it is the desire of the riding association to have me run as provincial candidate then I can do nothing but agree. I will, as usual, do my utmost to see my convictions through to it's ultimate success in June of this year."

'What, No Ration Coupons?' Asks Scottish War Bride Buying Clothes and Food

A brawn Scottish lassie, with the roses in her cheeks fresh on her young face walked slowly down Front Street on Saturday, and gazed with something akin to awe and bewilderment at the various displays of dresses, hats and other feminine habiliments that go to the heart of a woman especially at this time of year.

"And ye dinna have tae has coupons tae buy any of those wonderful things?" she queried in astonishment to her companion.

Later she passed through the city market. Here too were surprises. She paused for a moment at stocks of eggs offered for sale by farmer's wives. "My goodness," she sighed, "if the wee folk back home could but see this."

She was Mrs. Dan Wilson, wife of Private Dan Wilson, son of Mr. and Mrs. "Scotty" Wilson, 43 Dundas Street. Private Wilson war lassie who arrived in Canada with the first war bride ship to dock here. Two children were well looked after. The kind ladies and gentlemen, too, who met us in Belleville were very nice." Overseas they said.

Mrs. Wilson's husband has been overseas for the past five years with the Royal Canadian Engineers Regiment and has yet to see his 18-months old son. He is a member of the fighting Belleville family, three brothers and his father serving in the armed forces. Andrew is back in Canada, discharged after being wounded in Italy. Private Bill is with the Royal Canadian Navy. A brother-in-law, Trooper Don, Jones is also overseas.

The father "Scotty" Wilson served with the famous Scots Greys in the last war and also served with the Veterans Guard of Canada.

'Rat Invader Caught by Two Girls

Mention the word "rat" in the offices of the Bank of Montreal here, and the staff will probably with justifiable pride to two of its youngest women employees.

For these heroines of the Front and Bridge Streets financial establishment, a routine day was unexpectedly destroyed, a large furry invader, commonly known as a rat, was excited staff members and Saturday morning customers looked on.

It happened during that busy hour in banking offices about 11 when with the usual crowd of weekend patrons milling in the front office.

The rat entered cautiously appearing from the basement through a deposit box when he was sighted by one of the girls who gave the alarm thing happened. There was a shriek. Then another. Male members of the staff made a gallant stand of the rodent scampering for cover behind desks and other office paraphernalia. There were no spectacular leaps or mortars available, and rolls of quarters were too valuable to fire at the stranger.

Then the two girls took on the rescue. Armed with waste paper baskets they cornered the unwelcoming rodent and finally netted him in the basket. Mr. Miles Rat was not p' tally caught. He caught a whiff of the Spring-like air and made for the nearest door. He hopped out of the basket—but as promptly the captors grabbed him back. This happened two or three times.

Finally one of the girls had a bright idea. When the rat again hopped into the basket she promptly capped it (the basket) with an overturned wastepaper basket. Then she marched to the basement, where the rodent joined his ancestors in rat heaven or wherever such things go.

AWARD BUTTONS IN SAFE DRIVING

Of 423 Bell Telephone Employees So Honored Six Are From Belleville

Six employees from Belleville are among the 423 Bell Telephone employees who have been awarded safe driving buttons for 5 years of safe driving, and certificates signed by H. O. Power, vice-president of the league, and by L. G. Buck, the company's transportation division plant superintendent.

Of the grand total of 423 awards, 20 were for consecutive years' driving of a Bell vehicle without an accident, 10 say Buck, for the smaller record extending over 11 years, and eight for ten years' safe driving.

Lack of Frost Keeps Cobblers In Good Condition

Farmers and urban gardeners may be encouraged to hear reports of early planting and growth of spring crops, especially Timothy Wilson, Dundas Street E. has one for the little red book.

"Scotty" is clearing potatoes from his garden which averages the size of a large hen's egg. He says, "Let 'em beat that record if they can," grinned the amiable Scotsman.

The only catch to the fact is that the potatoes are planted in the spring of 1944, but about two dozen of those giant specimens.

"Scotty" apparently missed two crops during the spring and fall, and the heavy fall of snow and lack of frost in the ground kept the potatoes in fine condition.

Furthermore, twelve heads of cabbage planted after the spring weather had melted away their heavy snow covering and the bottom of the vegetables were found to be hard, devoid of frost and were used on the Wilson table over the weekend.

Hitler Issues Order to Troops Facing Russians

London, April 17 — (CP) — Adolf Hitler in an order of the day to German soldiers on the Eastern Front declared last night:

"For the last time the Jewish-Bolshevist arch enemy has begun all his inhuman attack. He is trying to destroy Germany and to wipe out our people."

"Soldiers in the East, you yourselves know what fate threatens, particularly the German women, children and children," Hitler asserted. "While old men and children are being murdered, women and girls are being ravished by the hordes of prostitutes of the comrade led away to Siberia.

"We have expected this offensive and since January of this year everything has been done in order to build up a strong front. A tremendous artillery concentration is meeting the enemy.

"This time the Bolsheviks will suffer the old fate of Asia—they must perish in front of the German capital.

"Whoever at this moment does not fulfil his duty is a traitor to our nation."

Hitler's order asserted any unit which left its fighting position "must be shamed by our women and children who in our towns are standing up to the bomb terror."

Then he warned that officers to watch "particularly the few treacherous officers and soldiers who, in order to save their own miserable lives, must fight against us in Russian uniform."

"Anyone who orders you to retreat and is unknown to you must be arrested immediately and if necessary disposed of, whatever his rank."

Hertha remains German. Vienna will again become German and Europe will never become Asiatic."

He concluded with an appeal to "Germany, the Nation" to "stand as a solid bath."

"At the moment when fate has eliminated the greatest war criminal of all times, the turn of the tide will come," he said.

Yankees Still Ahead Schedule On Okinawa Is.

Ocean, April 17 — (AP) — A noticeable decrease in Japanese artillery fire along the 9-mile-wide "Little Siegfried Line" on southern Okinawa was reported Monday by the campaign's only official visitor of Japan itself went into its third week.

U. S. 10th Army troops, who control a central two-thirds of the Ryukyus Island, and were rapidly overrunning the northern tip, were one fourth of the way across the ninth straight day yesterday but still met well aimed fire.

Admiral Nimitz' communique Monday reporting no change in the situation interpreted here as meaning field commanders were saving Japanese artillery ammo as all offensive until the way is well blasted by artillery.

Marines were mopping up small enemy pockets in the northern section of the island within 10 miles of the northern tip.

Infantry invaded Kouisa, a small island in the Kerama group off Okinawa's southwest coast, Saturday. Resistance evidently was slight. Seven Kerama islands were seized by the 7th Division just prior to the invasion of Okinawa Easter Sunday.

No further air activity against the American invasion fleet was reported.

Roslin

Roslin — The April meeting of the Women's Institute was held on Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. F. C. Bezzo with an attendance of thirty-five ladies present.

Mrs. W. White presided.

A discussion on the co-operative program followed, the subject chosen for discussion at the district meeting being "Community Development."

Plans were made to hold a euchre party the latter part of the month when the "dirty dish" basket of groceries will be drawn.

Community singing was enjoyed. Readings were given by Mrs. W. White, Mrs. J. Robinson and Mrs. G. Chisholm. Contest for the day "Outdoor Farm Decoration" was unusually interesting.

Several suggestions for next year's program were handed in. The singing of the National Anthem brought the meeting to a close.

Refreshments were served by the hostess and her assistants and a social half hour was enjoyed.

Germany Cut Asunder

France can feel now that the mills of the gods have been grinding lustily in these years which have sent the Allied nations on their great mission of cleansing Europe of Hitler and the German Nazis. France knew what it was to be twice in the hands of the Germans, in 1871 and from 1940 to 1944. Now she sees the steady progress of the United Nations cutting Germany asunder. Within a few miles of the Czech border, yesterday, the American 3rd Army has bored through Germany.

It was in the days of Napoleon that the French armies crossed Germany and since that time no troops of any nation have gone through until in these latter weeks. Never have so many soldiers of opposing nations trodden on Germany's "sacred soil" in all her history as today though all of the Nazi leaders have often said it would not be done. In many parts of Germany great swaths are being cut and the Reich is being cut apart.

The punishment has come home to the fireside of the criminal German nation. This could never have happened if Germany had not been an aggressor, and if Hitler had never been allowed by Germans to rise to power.

Gigantic Achievement of C.N.R.

During the five and a third years of war to last December 31, the Canadian National Railway System, the largest single industry in the Dominion, carried on a gigantic work for the people of Canada and the Allies, says the supplement to the C.N.R. annual report to Parliament.

Freight and passenger train mileage travelled during the period aggregated more than 330,000,000 or measured in car miles, the total is nearly ten billion. Freight amounted to more than 433,000,000 tons. More than 132 million passengers were carried—greater than ten times the entire population of Canada.

More than four million troops were carried during the period, requiring 6,540 special trains. Special trains for war industry workers carried over 37,000,000 passengers. Nearly 11,000 meals a day were served on dining cars of the C.N.R. More than fourteen million guests were accommodated at the company's twelve hotels. Purchases by the railway amounted to considerably more than half a billion dollars.

With an average staff of 97,065 the system paid out $967,500,000 in wages during the period. Twenty thousand men and women of the system enlisted with the armed forces. 503 have lost their lives, more than 100 have been decorated for gallantry. The C.N.R. and its employees have subscribed nearly $147,000,000 to Victory Loan purchases and War Savings Certificates.

More than 12 million pounds of wartime mail has been carried, two million tons of express and more than half a million passengers on its 5,299 miles of domestic routes.

The Canadian National Railway System has turned over to the Dominion Treasury a cash surplus over its requirements after interest payments due the public and Government as a result of last year's operations.

Chairman and President R. C. Vaughan's statement for 1944 tabled in the House of Commons shows that operating revenue reached the grand total of $441,147,000 in 1944 for the highest figure in all history, an increase of $532,000 over the years 1943.

The volume of freight and the number of passengers furnish figures which can easily be understood. 80,851,000 tons of freight and 35,326,000 passengers were carried over the lines last year, about twice as much freight and four times as many passengers as in 1939. Heavier freight tonnage was carried in the year than in the year before but the revenue at $321,589,000 was less by $3,310,000 because of the decreased movement of higher rated war and industrial materials and an increased volume of lower rate products. But passenger earnings were up for a high of $69,776,000, an increase of $2,885,000. It may be explained that apart from minor adjustments, freight and passenger rates remained fixed at the pre-war level.

Operating costs totalled $362,547,000, an increase of $38,072,000 over 1943. Increase over 1943 in operating expenses was occasioned by higher wage rates amounting to $23,348,000, an increase of $7,102,000 in price of materials and additional maintenance work on track and equipment costing $6,360,000.

Shipments by the Canadian National Express aggregated 15,781,000 in 1944, an increase of 1.35 per cent over 1943. Express revenues at $17,275,000 were the highest in the company's history. Revenues from C.N. Telegraphs amounted to $6,366,000. The combined revenue of the railway's hotels amounted to $5,330,000. Of the 12 hotels recently three resort hotels remained closed. Meals served on dining cars totalled 4,904,000, more than five times the number served in 1939.

The railway is co-operating in plans for post-war projects. Now passenger equipment will be lighter in weight. Attention is being given to the design of freight equipment and locomotives, both steam and diesel as well as other improvements to stations, terminals and shop facilities.

The number of C.N.R. men and women in the armed services now represents twenty-five per cent of the peacetime staff. The company is making plans for rehabilitation of its employees on discharge from the forces. Already some 1,400 have been welcomed back to the railway service.

Royal Engineers Over Rhine

An invaluable part in forcing the Rhine was played by the 21st Army Group's secret sappers, the First Assault Brigade of the Royal Engineers. Their units carried Commandos across the Rhine in Buffaloes to capture Wesel, while, under fire, other units built rafts to ferry armor across—a job which they had rehearsed in England beforehand. Crossing with the first wave, an officer went 500 yards deep from the enemy to reconnoitre the riverbed for a rafting point, while enemy mortars exploded behind him.

On March 23, the night before the crossing, bulldozers got to work cutting approach roads through the Rhine flood banks to the selected sites, in preparation. At H-Hour—2:00 a.m. the following morning—Buffaloes of the Assault Brigade roared into the river under an artillery barrage which lifted halfway over. Despite some direct hits by enemy mortar and shell fire, the Buffaloes touched down at the exact spots and put the Commandos ashore. Meanwhile other Royal Engineers began work on rafts to ferry tanks over pending the completion of the bridges, and some crossed the river with bulldozers and prepared landing places on the east bank. By 5:00 a.m. 8,000 of them were working on the banks of the river, and 2,000 more in the rear areas organizing the rapid flow of supplies. Two ferries were soon carrying vehicles across the river into two brigade bridgeheads. Working non-stop, the ferries carried 1,000 vehicles in the first forty-eight hours, including 200 tanks and self-propelled guns.

More than 1,000 trucks brought up 5,300 feet of bridging and rafting. The Royal Engineers, helped by perfect weather, built a bridge very rapidly, and the first night 500 tanks crossed over it to the east bank of the Rhine.

All News to the Germans

(New York Times)

A German war prisoner, when told that he was the 300,000th captured by the American First Army in March, exclaimed, "It's unbelievable!!" It was only natural for him to be astonished, for he was behind the times. For ten years or so he and his 90,000,000 fellow-Germans had been deprived of the news. It was against Nazi policy to let them know what was going on. The wave of the future in the Reich believed that it could safely disdain the present.

Elmer Davis, Director of OWI, offers what seems to be a sound suggestion for bringing the Germans out of their trance. "The best way to re-educate them," he says, will be to give them hard factual ... of world events."

MYSTERY

Who was it that was moved to think
To tip the peony bloom with pink,
And who conceived the frail design
Of candy-tuft and columbine?

There's very little that I know
Of motor car or radio
Or engines great for serving trade
Which men of genius have made.

But I am sure, were I inclined
To study them, that I should find
All man-made things so simply planned
That even I could understand.

But, ponder long, I cannot know
Who set the daisy first to grow
Or by what magic gift of art he thought
The joy of marigold was wrought.

could see the colossal naval power that was being assembled. We have to believe your eyes. It's one of the most impressive things I've seen in the war.

We have plenty of troops in reserve. They are coming out of supply. We have already begun to arrive just as the English finishing the original massive supply fleet.

On Okinawa the majority of the Japs are on the southern tip, and in the mountainous ridges in the northern area is being combed and we are mopping up rapidly.

There is tough fighting in the south and it will remain tough to the end. But until April 1st, when we say the south end of Okinawa may be cleaned up, I don't think that we will mean heavy casualties on our troops. The end of Okinawa is inevitable.

And while the Army, 10th Corps of infantry is doing that job, the rest of the island apparently is quiet, open for us to occupy and we are doing it with our usual speed.

The Island has everything that could want in such an island. There is plenty of room for more than 100,000 troops and vast supply dumps and anchorages for ships and the airfields from where we had expected trouble are docile and harmless.

The way Americans can build, this island can be transformed in two months. Before long it could look like Guam, or Pearl Harbor. We in Guam's back door and while we are here they can't really be very much in us.

Of course, Japan's vast land armies are still almost intact. But if it does come to the great mass land battle, we and our Russian allies now are able to build up strength for that warfare right on the scene.

There is a fighting spirit among the Troops on Okinawa. Everybody is confident of the possibility of the Pacific war ending sooner than we had ever believed possible a year ago.

For years it looked endless, but now you hear people talk about being home maybe by Christmas. Some really believe they will. Others have their fingers crossed, but they are more hopeful than ever.

Instead of a war weariness, there has been made for the extension of our forces to sweep on and on, and wind the thing up in a hurry.

Feeling of Optimism Permeates American Troops on Okinawa

By ERNIE PYLE

Okinawa.—(by Navy radio)—Our war with Japan has gone well in the last few weeks.

We are firmly on Okinawa, which is the latest base foot to the Mitchen door.

Our wonderful carrier pilots have whittled down the Jap air force daily. Our anti-aircraft from ships and from shore batteries has helped Jap fliers for the highest ratio I've ever known from anti-ack.

Our task forces have absolutely bottled-up the Jap fleet. They have to put it on in many months. It's like hitting Japan, with fighter planes from Iwo Jima. Marauders are springing up on Okinawa. We all say we knew what we are not in the Japs' shoes.

• • •

One main question asked over here now is, "How long will the Japs hold out?" There are many kinds of opinions, but actually nobody knows.

We don't know, because no one in his right mind can pretend to understand the Oriental manner of thinking. They are unpredictable. They are incredible. As one officer said, "They are uncannily smart one day, and dumb as hell the next."

Their values are so different from ours. The news broadcasts from Tokyo said Shanghai are in utter chaos. These broadcasts are utterly ridiculous.

During our first week on Okinawa they constantly told of savage counter-attacks when there weren't any. They told of driving a large part of our landing forces back into the bohs and far out to sea, when actually they fired only a few shots into the beaches.

On D-Day plus four, they broadcast that despite their counter-attacks we finally succeeded in landing 6,000 troops. The truth is that by sunset of the first evening we had an incredible number of scores of thousands of American on Okinawa!

Everything that Tokyo said about us was a downright lie. Yes maybe Tokyo really believed it. No one can tell. The Japs don't think as we do.

• • •

The crippled Jap air force cannot do us anything of consequence harm from now on. And their navy need not be considered. If you

19TH PARLIAMENT OF DOMINION IS DISSOLVED

Reduced Into Office in Year 1940 and Ends as Government Near Defeat

By NANCY O'DONNELL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, April 16 — (CP)—Canada's 19th Parliament, which took office in 1940 when the country's army was massing up spectacular successes was directed yesterday when defeat of the Germans appeared imminent.

The parliament, which dealt with war, post-war and social security legislation, was dissolved by governor-general, Thibaudeau Rinfret, who read a Speech from the Throne which, sadly spectacular victories of cases against Japan presaged the end of the months of war as well as in Europe.

The Senate and Commons had been in session since March 19 and had voted money for the carrying on of the war and civil administration until a new parliament meets. The new parliament is expected the forthcoming World Security Conference at San Francisco.

San Francisco Conference

The Throne Speech referred to the conference and declared it to be "of great significance that the Canadian delegation has been selected from the strong support of both Houses of Parliament. In a determined effort to further the creation of an international organization to maintain peace and security in the post-war world."

The speech confirmed an earlier announcement that the general election would be held June 11. Before holding measures necessary to a successful outcome of the war in Europe now had been fought and the election should be held as soon as possible, said the speech.

"They (the ministers) are deeply gratified that it is now possible to call the parliament at a time more favorable than any hitherto, to a careful consideration by members of the armed forces, as well as by the citizens generally, of the post-war problems relative to Canada's future.

Soldiers' Franchise

"The most ample provision has been made for the exercise of the franchise by members of the armed forces in all parts of the world."

The speech paid tribute to the late President Roosevelt and said the "indomitable spirit" displayed inspire the San Francisco Conference.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

MY BEST CLIENT

Dr. William Brady, M.D.,
Dear Sir:

I was in the ninth grade and I got a health report in school, so I reported on the article in your column that brushing the teeth was found to be useless.

Now my health teacher wants me to write to you, to find out why you say that it is not useful. Thanking you for an early reply.

Sincerely yours,
Mary Alice Jane (Or is call it) 10th Year Average,
Public School, Coleraine.

You are my most important client today, Mary, and I am pleased with the gravity (and deep attention, even terrified with it.

In the first place, let me congratulate you upon the excellence of your letter. I mean the English, the form, the spelling, the punctuation. Don't you? If not is it because you say all there is to say in the fewest possible words. There are letters writing which I find difficult, you will not make again — it is superfluous to address a physician as Dr. and as M.D. — address him either as Dr. Doe or John Doe, M.D., and the abbreviation Dr. means Doctor, not Dear, so one might omit a letter. It is not only the salutation "Dear Doctor" or "Dear Dr. Doe" "Dear Sirs" or "Dear Sir" that must be coldly formal, "My Dear Dr. Doe," or if one is on friendly terms with the correspondent, "Hi-ya, Doc."

In the next place I congratulate you upon the productivity of your letter. In a few hundred words you send a pupil to ask why as you do, Mary, is a fine, healthy mind.

I hope I have not implied that brushing the teeth is harmful to the teeth. I know of no teeth that brushing the teeth is a waste of time and energy. I do not believe the teeth or preventing decay of the teeth may be overrated.

Now, Mary, in writing parts of your sentence I am sorry certified world people who never brush their teeth have much finer teeth and healthier teeth than the average phenomenal Americans who learn to brush their teeth before they learn anything else from anyone.

Go to your health library, Mary, and look up the November, 1938, number of The National Geographic Magazine. There is a fine article on Nutrition and Physical Degeneration by Weston A. Price, M.D., (published by Member of Harper & Brothers) and from it you may study the pictures in Dr. Price's book and read the article by W.

Robert Foran on Grisiez de Cumbe and the fine teeth of the people there.

It will do you no harm to learn that there is a scientific study of the teeth, from disinterested sources.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Tax for Malignancy

A year ago I had an operation for cancer removal and a test for abnormal growth. Recent systemic indications point to a malignant condition as before. Could this be possible?

(Mrs. K. O.)

Answer — Aside from the question of malignancy, the papers they have been not completely successful and in that case you may have the same trouble as before. The useful course is to return without delay to the good doctor for advice. I am sorry to say that I could not advise by or take the responsibility of answering questions of this kind, at the time of the operation.

Tricks of the Trade

We found a brand of margarine with which we became quite at ease by thought. But when we removed it from the paper carton there was no wrapper to identify it. The wax stuff contains sodium benzoate. We years ago that sodium benzoate is the stuff assured us it contained no harmful substance. We have no reason, as he said with real indignation when we called his attention to the fact, that it is harmful and did not omit from the outside label that it was. We do not object to a dash of vitamin A, however. In fact, we think that at this price too, does the state take a cut from the big crook manufacturers?

(E. A.)

Answer — They probably split it three ways. I am so fond of margarine that I actually admit it even when butter is available. But the world people who never brush their teeth have much finer teeth and healthier teeth than the average phenomenal Americans who learn to brush their teeth before they learn anything else from anyone else.

YOU'D BE SURPRISED

By GEORGE W. STIMPSON

OLD MAN ELOQUENT

John Quincy Adams is known in American history as "the Old Man Eloquent." He earned the title on his later years by his eloquence.

The phrase was coined by John Quincy Adams' own colleagues, likening him to Socrates, a famous Athenian orator. In a sonnet written by Oliver Wendell Holmes in 1866 on Lady Margaret Lay appears the lines:

The tall the sad breaking of that Parliament
Broke with us as that dishonest victory
At Chaeronea, fatal to liberty.
I'll tell with regret that old man eloquent.

This refers to the speech that Demosthenes died of heartbreak and grief upon hearing that Philip of Macedon had defeated the allied Greek army and destroyed it. The fact seems to be, however, that Isocrates died of voluntary starvation four days after the battle.

It is an interesting fact that John Quincy Adams lived to be an old man. He was born on his father's birthday and, like his father, he died on July 4. Another president, Jefferson, should have become known as "the old man eloquent," as should Daniel Webster, Henry Clay or one of the other great orators of that period.

John Quincy Adams has been the only ex-President to sit in the House of Representatives after retiring from the White House. During the nearly 17 years in the House the former President kept that body in an uproar, especially during the presenting petitions against slavery and the annexation of Texas. He was ridiculed for his "old man eloquent" under which name petitions were referred to as "Mr. Adams' petitions," read, printed or debated.

It was during this period, when John Quincy Adams acted as the champion of free speech, that his colleagues dubbed him eloquent, and he won the title "the Old Man Eloquent."

WHOLE WORLD PAYS TRIBUTE AS LATE PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT IS LAID TO REST IN THE ROSE GARDEN AT HYDE PARK

The funeral procession moves, slowly down Constitution Ave. on the way to the White House, in Washington. It is now passing the National Gallery of Art, and in the distance is the Washington monument.

The late President's funeral cortege with its six white horses, rounds the corner from 16th Street into Pennsylvania Ave., in Washington.

Body of Late President, Drawn On Caisson by 7 White Horses, Makes Slow Journey to White House

Washington, April 14. (AP)—The body of President Roosevelt reached a sorrowful capital shortly before 10 a.m., today.

President Truman and members of the Cabinet were at the Union Station a few minutes before the train pulled in at 9.50 a.m., E.D.T., waiting to lead a mournful procession to the White House.

Members of the Roosevelt family were also the first to enter the funeral train, followed by President Truman.

Brig.-Gen. Elliott Roosevelt and his wife and Mr. and Mrs. John Boettiger went aboard.

They were followed by Admiral William D. Leahy, who was President Roosevelt's military chief of staff; by Bernard Baruch, James F. Byrnes, and War Mobilization Director Fred M. Vinson.

Members of the Supreme Court and their wives, and Cabinet officers and their wives also entered the train.

As the government officials heads bared, walked slowly toward the cars a marine band softly played "Hail to the Chief" and the National Anthem.

Caisson and Seven White Horses.

The funeral train was parked on siding near a bustling freight depot. Crowds thronged as close as police would let them to the train. At the rear of the President's car stood a huge army caisson and seven white horses awaiting the body of the President.

The body was lifted to the caisson at 9:36 a.m., and the procession began, its slow trip to the White House, where private funeral services will be held at 4 p.m. today.

Virtually every high dignitary of the government rode in the procession as it wended its way through the railroad sidings and on to the picturesque Union Station terminal, that faces the national capitol.

Two of Mr. Roosevelt's secretaries, Stephen T. Early and William D. Hassett rode together in one car. Behind them came another limousine of the White House secretarial, Jonathan Daniels.

With his shoulders slumped, Elmott Roosevelt, Mr. Roosevelt's long-time counsel, rode in one of the cars reserved for the former President's closest friends. Rosenman had been associated with Mr. Roosevelt in one capacity or another since the days when the late President was Governor of New York.

Treasury Secretary Morgenthau, a Hudson Valley neighbor of the Roosevelts, rode alone—his head bowed in grief.

Esther's Pipe Sounds.

Two sharp high notes of a sailor's pipe signalled the start of the long cortege.

With the tear drums of a military band thumping in the distance, a battalion of Marines followed by a detachment of sailors, moved solemnly up Constitution Avenue.

BUSY SERGEANT RUNS SUPPLIES INTO HOCHWALD

Stretcher Bearers Praised for Valor During Fight to Drive Germans From Hochwald Forest; Battle Sidelights

By DOUGLAS AMARON
(CP War Correspondent)

With the Canadian Army in Germany, April 17 —(CP)— A beardless man during the fighting for the Hochwald was O.B.M. Bill Ives of Toronto, who had the difficult job of keeping his company supplied with food and ammunition.

Commanded by Maj. Ben Dunkelman, Toronto, the company fought for four days through the dense spruce woods. The only roads into the Hochwald were dirt tracks, which were possible until tanks moved over them, but then became so torn and rutted that even jeeps and carriers bogged down.

"I've had just about no sleep at all during this time," the company commander said. "He wasn't always successful in getting through but he was always trying. If he couldn't get up one road he would take another until he found some way of reaching us."

Another man Dunkelman praised will have to go nameless for the time being because he was wounded. He was a stretcher bearer from Winnipeg who "did quite a serious wound-shaved forward to care for casualties. The major eventually got him out of the fighting by sending him back with some wounded but as soon as he delivered them he came back again.

Another stretcher bearer, Rfm. Frank Pascoe, M.M., St. Boniface, man, picked up an American dollar bill during the fighting. It apparently came from the Germans who always carry a strange assortment of money ranging from Russian rubles to Italian lires.

During the move down to the Hochwald, the Lake Superior Regiment bivouacked one night in a field. First thing they knew there were Germans around battalion headquarters and some officer was shot through the back.

The Germans picked up five Canadians and raced off with them as prisoners. Four of the Canadians escaped quickly and a rescue party went out immediately, shot up the Germans who still weren't very far away and brought back the fifth Canadian.

Maj. Harry Parker, Toronto, battalion second-in-command, said the situation was tense for a while as you couldn't be sure who was friend and who was foe. He was in a caravan and kept one hand on the lock, challenging every visitor before opening the door.

Maj. Tommy Murray, Port Arthur, Ont., a company commander in that unit, told of another strange experience in this area. He was with Capt. Tommy Henderson, Winnipeg, when they spotted two heads over the edge of a trench.

"We took it to be an outpost from one or our other companies but it was curious and went up to have a look," said Murray. "They let me get within 30 yards then shouted German and waved to me. I had a sten and fired. They returned the fire. We got out of that and started sniping, killing one, wounding another and two got away."

Murray, incidentally, said that one of the prisoners his company took said his formation was pulled back to Xanten then sent back to the Hochwald with orders to fight until death.

"That's all right for the other fellows, not for me," said the German who came in and surrendered.

Marriage Guidance Subject of Course

London, April 17 —(CP)— An experimental course in marriage guidance has been opened at Morley College here, the first of its kind to be undertaken at an educational institution in this country.

The series of 10 lectures is being given by Dr. David Mace, secretary of the Marriage Guidance Council. In them he is dealing with such matters as sexual problems and personal adjustment to married life and parenthood.

Most of those attending the course are married but some are single social workers and persons thinking of getting married.

"Great interest has been shown in the course," Dr. Mace said. "People seem chiefly interested in the whole outlook for the institution of marriage, the education of children and how they can prepare themselves for it."

About two-thirds of the students are women.

23 Jap Merchant Ships Knocked Out

Manila, April 17 — (AP)—Philippines-based bombers knocked out 23 ships of Japan's merchant fleet Sunday over the Southwest Pacific, airdromes and ports' facilities at Davao on southeastern Mindanao, it was reported today.

The biggest bag was off the China coast between Shanghai and Saigon, where United States fliers sank or damaged two large freighter-transports and 11 smaller vessels.

Off Formosa they wrecked two large cargo ships and four other vessels, including a destroyer-escort.

Strong formations bombed four airdromes on western Formosa, destroying at least 14 planes on the ground.

On northern Luzon, U. S. 32nd Division infantrymen beat back several night counter-attacks in their slow, three-way drive on Baguio, summer capital of the Philippines.

Adventure in search of SECURITY

In 1845, Hugh C. Baker, a Hamilton mathematician, was one of the first Canadians to do more than wish for security for his family. But there were no Canadian life insurance companies, and no Canadian companies operating in Canada.

The office of the only British company here was in Quebec City—a long way to go to seek protection. Roads were bad, and there was only the beginning of a railway.

But Mr. Baker's determination was to be his. His insurance saved security for himself and his family. Soon in New York was the nucleus of a business which was to become, in time, the largest of its kind in the world.

It was a journey of over 500 miles. After he crossed the American boundary, Mr. Baker boarded a stage-coach and in it jolted day after day across upper New York State. He was a true pioneer of a new way of life.

He finished his journey by river steamer down the Hudson, in New York, he found life insurance already a national force in the United States. As a Canadian, he resolved to help his own countrymen obtain the same security.

Returning to Hamilton he, with a few associates, organized the first of the Canada Life insurance companies. And in the 100 years since Mr. Baker pioneered protection of the people by the people in Canada, millions of Canadians have enjoyed financial security through life insurance.

ENGAGEMENT NOTICE

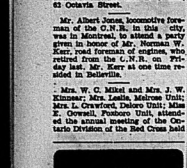
Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Prindle announce the engagement of their daughter, Florence Eleanor, to Flying Officer J. D. Hamilton, D.F.M., of Toronto, the marriage to take place at Christ Church, Saturday, April 21st.

Jamieson Bone left for Ottawa this afternoon. He will be the guest speaker at the annual meeting and dinner of the Ottawa Property Owners' Association.

Mr. Geo. F. Sills, of Golden Valley, Ont., has been spending a few days with his father, Mr. W. C. Sills and Mrs. Sills, 62 Ontario St., and with Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Sills, 63 Ontario Street.

Mr. Albert Jones, locomotive foreman of the C.N.R. in this city, was in Montreal, to attend a party given in honor of Mr. Norman W. Kerr, road foreman of engines, who retired from the C.N.R. on 70th day last. Mr. Kerr at one time resided in Belleville.

Mrs. W. C. Mikel and Mrs. J. W. Kinnear; Mrs. Leslie, Melrose Unit; Mrs. L. Crawford, Delora Unit; Miss E. Gowsell, Foxboro Unit, attended the annual meeting of the Ontario Division of the Red Cross held at the Royal York Hotel, Toronto, on Monday.



Miss Norma Hackett, general secretary of the Women's Teachers' Federation of Ontario, Toronto, in a highly informative address at the Y.M.C.A. here, on Saturday, outlined and defined the many duties of the new Teachers Professional Act which came into being a year ago.

A large number of women teachers from the city, Trenton, Prince Edward County, and Sydney, Thurlow and Tyendinaga Townships, heard Miss Hackett emphasize the interest being taken by the Federation in the advancement of education in the province.

She urged movement to bring about an equality of education throughout Ontario so that all pupils would get the same opportunities of learning and advancement.

The meeting was presided over by Miss Olive Elson president of the Belleville Women's Teachers' Federation. Luncheon was served at the Y.M.C.A.

The speaker was introduced by Miss Faye Young while the teachers' appreciation was expressed by Miss Grace Tucker.

Chapin-Geen Nuptials!

Daytona Beach, Florida, April 11 — Miss Mary Geen, daughter of Lt.-Col. and Mrs. E. A. Geen, of Belleville, Ontario, was united in marriage to Captain Ned R. Chapin, son of Dr. and Mrs. R. F. Chapin of Fremont, Indiana, at the Journey Church, Daytona Beach, Florida, April 4, 1945.

The ceremony was performed by Chaplain William A. McKee, Post Chaplain at Welch Convalescent Hospital, the Army's new reconditioning centre for wounded men returned from overseas.

The bride was given in marriage by Lt.-Commander R. C. Jonas and left as her assistant her sister, Miss Phyllis Geen. Roger Chapin, Radioman, Second Class, acted as best man.

Miss Geen is graduate of a series of courses in the National Board of Christian Education of the United Church of Canada in their head office.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Letter of Condolence to a Hero's ex
"Although I am a stranger to you, your son Phil was a dear friend of mine," and then, in Brendan, for her son, write your words of sympathy and understanding. Your memorial tribute to his fine character, to his kind of gentlemanliness, I am sure that your friend's mother will intinctly understand, and gratefully respond to, your friendly request for a "picture, even a snapshot" of her son.

Gifts For a Shower
Dear Mrs. Brendan,

I've never been invited to a shower before, and now I've been invited to one which, in the invitation is called a "Miscellaneous Shower". Will you please help me by suggesting the kind of gift I should take? M.P.

The "Miscellaneous Shower" gives you the widest choice of gifts for the bride-to-be: for example, anything at the line of household linens (as a breakfast set perhaps, or a bedroom ensemble or hand-towels or guests towels, pair of pillow cases, some kitchen towels); four or six dessert or salad plates, or a sandwich plate; glassware, perhaps a set of fruit-juice glasses or tumblers; a tall drinks, or a medium-sized flower-vase; some gadget convenient for buffet service; kitchen accessories. Any gift for the bride-to-be is appropriate, — your choice depends on your pocket-book and what you think the guest of honor would be welcome.

Mrs. D. Atkins, Elected President Quinte W.I.

The Quinte W.I. held its annual business meeting at Mrs. A. Maguire's home, 199 McDonald St., on Tuesday afternoon.

Reports were given regarding concert at Codlgate on May 15th.

The President, Mrs. A. Greatrix, thanked all for help at all times and kind hospitality of all and gave practical suggestions for next year.

Mrs. H. Murphy conducted the election of officers, the results of which are as follows:—

President—Mrs. D. Atkins.
1st Vice—Mrs. G. Bradshaw.
2nd Vice—Mrs. C. Mitchell.
Sec.-Treas.—Mrs. M. Ryan.
Dist. Director—Mrs. K. Garbutt.
Dist. Representatives—Mrs. D. Atkins, Mrs. G. Bradshaw.
E. Sandercock, Mrs. M. Grills.

Citizenship—Mrs. M. Weese.
Hist. Research—Mrs. A. Mitchell
Home Economics—Mrs. S. Gedes.
Social Welfare—Mrs. E. Sandercock.
War Work—Mrs. H. Grills.

A hearty vote of thanks was given to Mrs. H. Murphy for conducting the election and to all who had assisted in the programs during the year.

Mrs. C. Mitchell, convener for the day presented the following program: reading—Mrs. A. Mitchell; instrumental—Mrs. M. Ryan; reading—Mrs. D. Atkins.

Mrs. Youdale as speaker for the afternoon gave a splendid address on life in Southland College at Battagrea, England, relating many humorous incidents in the life of the student, which was very interesting to all.

Reading—Mrs. Campbell.

The annual report was read by the Secretary-Treasurer, Mrs. G. Bradshaw, and report of war work was given by Mrs. H. Grills.

Mrs. D. Atkins, the new president, spoke briefly asking for the support of all members, and invited the continued success of the Quinte Women's Institute.

Following the meeting Mrs. Maguire and conveners served refreshments and all enjoyed a social half hour.

The W.I. is hoping that as many as possible will attend their concert to help provide funds for the prisoners-of-war.

On Thursday evening, the conveners met at Mrs. H. Grills' home and planned the programs for the 1945-1946 after which Mrs. Grills served refreshments and a social time was enjoyed.

ZION W.M.S.

The April meeting of the Zion W.M.S. was held at the home of Mrs. W. J. Tufts, with fourteen ladies and three children present. The President Mrs. Roy Bird opened the meeting. Mrs. H. K. Denyes led in prayer.

Mrs. Richard Cranston, who was group leader, gave a reading. This was followed by the Devotional led by Mrs. H. Casey, theme, "No Man Liveth Unto Himself". There was a duet by Mrs. R. Sills and Mrs. D. Cranston.

The Worship Service was taken from the Missionary Monthly with Mrs. Percy Ray and Mrs. Ralph Sills taking part. Mrs. Ray gave a reading, "Mothers of Dead Soldiers".

Mrs. G. Ketcheson had charge of the Study Book, "Malay". She was assisted by Mrs. D. Howe, Mrs. Sills and Mrs. Clifford Ketcheson.

A social hour followed. The host-ess was assisted by Mrs. Ketcheson and Miss Orva Martin.

Items of Interest For Women

For Spring: Leg Make-Up!

With warmer, sunnier days ahead stockinged legs can serve any girl's purpose. Whether you're off to golf, or just do a good job by your leg shave! Most important is to shave with a keen stitch. To remove blemishes and small hairs, rub legs with a dry, rough towel. Then, with a soft brush, apply whipped cream lather with your fingertips, working it briskly with a rough wash cloth or brush around vigorously. The more elbow grease you use, the smoother you'll have that satiny-smooth texture you're after. Rinse your legs in cool water and pat dry before pulling on stockings. Cop your hand and pour out enough liquid make-up into the palm of your hand. Starting at the foot, spread liquid with a circular motion of both hands, and work better as it spills then upward strokes. Do work on a limb at a time. When the leg make-up has been applied, smooth lightly with the fingers, blending in uneven spots. Don't attempt to apply a thick coat of liquid or dry or results will be streaky. And remember, if you dress before legs are dry, you'll get spots on the stockings. Stop your hand and pour out enough liquid make-up into the palm of your hand. Starting at the foot, spread liquid with a circular motion of both hands, and work better as it spills then upward strokes. Do work on a limb at a time. When the leg make-up has been applied, smooth lightly with the fingers, blending in uneven spots. Don't attempt to apply a thick coat of liquid or dry or results will be streaky. How to Press a Suit.

Pressing hubby's suit needn't be a problem! First, have a good heat-controlled iron, and cloth (wash rag) dampened with cold water. Begin by brushing suit, paying special attention to lapels of pockets and cuffs. Remove surface spots with a cloth wrung out of warm water and mild, safe suds. Now press trousers over pressing board. Dampen pressing cloth evenly and press around entire top of trousers. Remove trousers from ironing board and iron each leg separately, placing flat on board. Let the original crease guide you. Then turn trousers inside out, place iron with circular motion over inside of leg. Then turn and press outside of leg. Hang your trouser legs together and go over with a cloth wrung out of water. To avoid shine, do not iron with a dry cloth. Finally, hang coat on a heavy board, or if you haven't one, simply fill the upper part of sleeves and shoulders with a rolled Turkish towel before pressing. Now press coat, working from the back. Press reverse of your iron always. To keep after pressing, brush suit vigorously with a clothes brush.

To Clean Playing Cards!

If your favourite deck of cards is in large need of cleaning, there are ways to restore their original color and freshness. First, try cleaning with bread crumbs. Place a large piece of bread in a pie tin, sprinkle with talcum and rub with a soft, dry cloth. Linen cards can be be cleaned by placing them in a bowl with a cloth dipped in gentle, fine-fabric suds that are safe for anything safe in water alone. Very greasy playing cards respond to ordinary camphor spirits. Simply moisten a soft cloth in the camphor and rub lightly over surface of cards.

To Remove Scorch Marks.

Scorch stains are removable! When a too-hot iron leaves that familiar brownish patch on hubby's ebony-white shirt or your pretty blouse—take this simple tip. First, gently rub the scorch stain with a soft, moistened cloth. Then wash in warm water and mild, safe suds. Rinse carefully and if possible hang in the sun to dry.

MUSTARD TREATMENT HELPS LESSEN PAIN OF Chest Congestion

"I have had severe chest colds on three occasions," Mr. L. Goertz of Moose Jaw, Saskatchewan revealed. "The first occurrence was very painful, for I had not learned what to do, but simply suffered with every breath. The second time I got an attack, my mother sent for the doctor, but began before his arrival to apply mustard poultices. She used one part of mustard to four of flour. When the doctor came, he ordered the poultices to be continued. They eased the pain in a short time and helped me recover much more quickly."

Mustard Quick: First Aid for Colds, Too

At the first symptoms of colds or chills, it is wise to get busy with mustard in either poultice or bath form. Mustard helps bring quick, safe relief from the discomfort of colds. Used at first sneeze, it helps to prevent serious complications from developing. Get rid of such infections. Never leave on a mustard poultice for longer than twenty minutes. When symptoms are serious, however, it is wise to call your doctor.

Thousands Find Mustard Helps Alleviate Painful Ailments

All across Canada, many who once suffered anguish from rheumatism, arthritis, neuritis, and neuralgia, have learned to turn to mustard to help soothe relief. Mustard poultices and mustard baths prove time and time again to be a quick way to help ward off needless pain.

Be Sure to Ask for Keen's D.S.F. Mustard

Queen Mary Home, School Club Meets

The April meeting of the Queen Mary Home and School Association was held on Thursday in the school auditorium with a good attendance. The form of a pot luck supper at 7 p.m., followed by the business meeting at 8:30 p.m. the meeting was called to order by the President, Mrs. Wm. Cook. In the absence of Miss Mary Mac, D. Stewart acted as secretary. Mrs. Cook welcomed the new members and extended greetings on behalf of the Study Group formed two years ago. Mrs. R. C. Gay, who had kindly consented to act as convener, introduced Mrs. Cecil Ireland, last year's president of the Queen Mary Home and School Association, who gave a report on the meetings she attended. She pointed out what a large opportunity there was for every Home and School Association to co-operate with the Board of Education and other Home and School Associations in the city. Mrs. Ireland also spoke of the Junior Red Cross and since the last annual meeting of the parent organization. The theme of the convention was "Education for Better Citizenship." Mrs. Ireland concluded by saying that she was glad to attend.

Mrs. Cook then introduced Mr. Bruce Hall and his "Boys" as accompanists, led in community singing. Mr. Hall's selections included a "Song" to the audience, R. Harroger, C. Thompson, Jack and J. Hall, each rendered and enjoyable program of their own. Mr. K. Shortt was then introduced as "Boss" of the "Boys' creation." He was instrumental in forming the Belleville Band in 1918 and Mr. Shortt joined the Band in 1919. He encouraged boys with youth in order to conduct classes, as portrayed in the Band.

Mr. Shortt presented all the instruments for their co-operation in the program.

First aid to the limited wardrobe is accomplished through the medium of a white cloth or chamois, dipped in white suede cleaner to determine for those white suede shoes or pumps and a wide red leather belt which will add a touch of color to black or navy dress for daytime wear.

Pretty, but not too pretty, is what many women want in a dress to wear on a dressy hat. A new color has its place in the scene, of pale beige straw and its very narrow brim of black felt trimmed in front with a huge pink rose.

Couple Celebrate 25th Wedding Day

Mr. and Mrs. F. F. Fralick, Bridge St., Frankford, were tendered a surprise party on Friday evening, April the 14th, 1945, on the occasion of their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary, consisting of their family and friends. Mr. and Mrs. Fralick were married in Belleville by Rev. Alexander Alderdice and received with a shower.

An address expressing the high esteem in which Mr. and Mrs. Fralick are held by their friends was read by Mrs. Fred Reid, and a beautiful bouquet was made by Misses Shirley Mac and Fred Norman.

ANNIVERSARY W.M.S.

The April meeting of the Women's Missionary Society was held in the church with a good attendance. President, Mrs. Roy Thrasher, opened the meeting and Rev. Mr. Mitchell led in prayer. Mrs. Thrasher emphasized the need of prayer in the lives of everyone. Mrs. R. Reid, assisted by Mrs. Ed. Section was then taken and dedicated by Mr. McClellan.

Mrs. L. Hall, group leader, then took charge. Mrs. F. Allens read the Scripture and Mrs. Kelly led in prayer. Mr. R. Reid then gave an address on the Study Book which was very interesting and enlightening.

Mrs. Thrasher closed the meeting with prayer.

The W.A. held its meeting on Thursday at the church with a pot luck supper. The President, Mrs. H. Nelson, opened the meeting. Mrs. Avery led in prayer. Roll was called and minutes of last meeting read. Mrs. Sutherland read the Scripture. Mrs. Nelson read a letter from Mrs. Mac-Donald, Missionary to Trinidad, "The May Treaty Line". Several members spoke briefly on "A Jo. For cards sent to the boys overseas.

It was decided that during the summer, the meetings would be held in the afternoon.

It was decided that on the second Thursday in May, a pot luck supper would be held in the church.

The meeting closed by Rev. Mr. McClellan leading in prayer.

Presentation is Made To Recent Bride

The Forbes Community assembled at the home of Mr. Harry McDonnell on Friday last to honor Miss Gladys Forbes, whose marriage is recently married to George Zebedee.

Many of the bride's friends were present for the occasion. Cards and dancing were enjoyed. Very delicious refreshments were served. Mrs. Harry McDonnell and Mrs. Hughes were in charge of the presentation. They presented to Miss Forbes a Kenwood Mixmaster, an electric iron and a pair of bath towels.

'Scharnhorst' Raid Hero Tells Rotary Cessation of Hostilities Does Not Mean End to Canada's War Financing

"The Canadian public must be impressed with the fact that with the cessation of hostilities the cost of the war will not cease. The man on the street will wonder why it is necessary to conduct Victory Loans when the roar of battle has stopped and it is our job to improve upon him the fact that millions will be needed before there can be any let-up in war finances," C. F. (Pat) Morse, former RAF and RCAF pilot, told the Rotary Club on Monday.

He stressed the fact that there are thousands of young men and women who will have to be fed, clothed and transported home after the war is job which cannot be done overnight. Then there are additional thousands of maimed, wounded and crippled, some of them for life, who must be taken care of for years after the war.

In addition, Mr. Morse said, there must be paid millions of dollars in gratuities and re-establishment credits to returned men and women of all services so they may get the chance of rehabilitating themselves and get the chance to pick up the threads of civilian life where they were left off.

Danger of Inflation

He warned of the danger of inflation. "With the lines of communication which are bound to flow back into the markets there will be a mad buying scramble. Victory Loan will assist in taking away the purchasing power from the public."

The work of the National Finance Committee has been outstanding during the war years, Mr. Morse said and it was never more necessary than at the present time. Victory Loans have placed Canada in a better position, financially, than any country in the world.

The speaker, who is one of the Eighth Victory Loan organizers in the city, has an enviable record in the air services of Great Britain and Canada. He spent five years serving in the aerial arm that made a great contribution toward knocking the vaunted "Luftwaffe from the unchastened skies."

He spoke of the terrible days after the beginning of the war when a handful of gallant RAF pilots fought almost single handed the Hitler legions of the air. He "smelled" something wrong in Germany when there was no talk previous to the war when English speaking people were treated with much hospitality.

Hitch-hiking on trains and wangling his way from Aldershot to Britain to join the RAF, he went on his first "ops" flight in February, 1940, flying old Avro-Ansons, with old guns and a top speed of 130-135 miles per hour.

Terrific Losses

They suffered terrific losses in those days, and I was fortunate to be among the surviving members of my squadron."

Pat Morse related how the world-famous pact of England, his squadron's work for a long period of time, and the sinking of the famous Nazi battleships "Scharnhorst" and "Gneisenau" from Brest, lying at present, were heavily defended targets with the help of flak, coastal batteries and ship fire power. We drew it all in our flight dickies when we had to go down to 7,000 feet. The idea was to keep them from being able to pick us out in distinct outline."

On his last flight when every enemy aircraft was destroyed" he recalled our escort, his own, the squadron had taken off on their own for a dark cloudy sky. "We had no bombsights in those days and had to aim by the seat of the pants."

Flak Brilliant

"There was brilliant flash of flame in the sky in front of us as the squadron leader's plane disintegrated from a direct hit. The plane on our port wing went down in flames. We ran into hell. One of the sentiments in my craft caught fire and my instrument panel was shot away. Of that entire squadron only my own and another ship staggered back to our Scottish base."

"It has often been asked how these men found their way? he went on. "The reason is they worked like mad to get them in repair after our raids then slipped up channel in a hare's leg before we knew it. It is a distinct credit to the RAF to say they did a swell job for it was weather in which no plane should have left the ground. One Swedish squadron went out and hit the ships, but lost nearly all its aircraft."

Money Helped Cause

"Then the equipment started to come and positions shows it was needed. It could not have got there if the people at home in the war plants, and those helping with that money had not been on their job. They gave us the finest equipment in the world and every man overseas appreciates that fact."

The German war machine might crack at any moment, Mr. Morse said, but every man overseas will carry on until that happens. "It is our duty in Canada to see that they are not let down."

He urged every Rotarian to go out and spread their influence to see that every one does his part, so that Canadians can hold high their heads with every other decent nation of the world.

The speaker was introduced by Rotarian Clark Elsmer with Grant Sparling voicing club appreciation. Rotarian Rev. Bert Howard paid an eloquent tribute to the memory of the late President F. D. Roosevelt and proposed a toast to his successor President Harry Truman.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was trying to keep her mind on the brides problem, saying to pop, Well William, at last I met Mrs. Lindrop and I must say with a clear conscience that if I never meet her again it will be quite well be all mine.

I've never even met her once, so apparently that puts me one ahead of you, pop said. What the choice is Mrs. Lindrop and what's wrong with her? he said, and ma said, The wonderful Mrs. Lindrop, the marvellous Mr. Lindrop, that's all I've been hearing from Maud Mere for weeks, and at last I met her at Maud's bridge yesterday afternoon at a little informal tea party, and I'm glad that's over, for land sakes.

Why don't you ask me her for damages, what did she do? pop said, and ma said, I dont mind being disappointed in people, I'm used to that, but after I've heard fifty times how grand and remarkable a woman is the shock is really aggervating.

What the mischief did the woman do, if the question is not too complicated to bare repetition? pop said, and ma said, She's married and has the nerve to tell Maud Heve that I'm tingly of my conversational powers, ma said.

My dear, you've learned the real secret of how to shine in the art of conversation, but I'm afraid it's been lost on you, pop said.

And he got in back of the sporting page and ma didn't have anything else to do but go back to the bridge problem.

Suggests Red Cross Make Survey Of Canada's Health, Welfare Needs

Toronto, April 17 — (CP) — Energy mobilized by the Canadian Red Cross Society in the interests of Canada's post-war development," Major-Gen. G. R. Chisholm, Deputy Minister of National Health, said yesterday in a luncheon address at the annual meeting of the society's Ontario division.

Urging that the organization begin a survey of Canada's needs in the fields of health and welfare, Gen. Chisholm said serious consideration should be given "the question of how the Red Cross can most valuably contribute within the desirbeside framework to Canada's health and welfare."

"If it were possible for every member of the Canadian Red Cross to stimulate locally every branch . . . to go to work on local conditions in and about their own home communities, the face of Canada could be changed within a very few years," he said. "The effect on the health of the people of Canada would be beyond imagining."

Ontario last year subscribed nearly 6,500,000 to the Canadian Red Cross, Society in voluntary contributions, it was revealed.

Efforts of the division's thousands of volunteers were lauded in reports presented by department heads from Ontario branches. The reports followed a luncheon, attended by Premier George Drew and representatives of more than 400 branches.

At the morning meeting, retiring president, Mrs. Arthur W. Mills, presenting a silver-mounted gavel to C. Bruce Hill, the new president, said blood donations in Red Cross clinics throughout the province last year were 866,457, Russell T. Kelley of Hamilton, announced in the chairman's report.

Ontario Red Cross volunteers made 4,091,506 articles to be sent to Europe's war victims, Mrs. J. C. Fraser of Toronto, chairman of women's war work, reported. Dr. Y. K. Greer, Toronto, chairman of Junior Red Cross branches, said more than 1,460 junior organizations raised $139,000 for the society last year.

From peace-time funds, the division has set aside $25,000 for bursaries for university graduates in the field of nursing, Miss F. M. Emory, Toronto, said in her report.

Lt.-Col. J. M. Ferguson of Brantford said the Canadian Red Cross Corps has reached the strength of 2,770 in the province.

The war interrupted the normal expansion of Bell Telephone service. As telephone materials grew scarce, more and more people had to wait their turn. Today, the waiting list is nearly 70,000.

Just as soon as men and materials are again available, these deferred applications will be filled. Work will be resumed on conversion to dial telephones, on rural expansion, on extensions and improvement of present services, on rebuilding our normal back-log of reserve equipment.

Moose Jaw Wins Second of Series vs St. Michael's

Westerners Come Back With 5 to 3 After Loss of First of Series

By ALAN HARVEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, April 17 —(CP)— The first serious Saskatchewan challenge for a Canadian junior hockey championship since Regina Pats won the Memorial Cup in 1926 was taking definite shape today in the wake of a resounding 5-3 triumph by Moose Jaw Canucks at the second game of the current title series against Toronto St. Michael's Majors.

The Canucks lost the best-of-seven series opener 6-3 Saturday but surged back last night to win decisively before 13,500 paid admissions in Maple Leaf Gardens, site of the third game Wednesday.

Working with 31-goive dexterity inside the final minutes after snatching St. Mike's a post apiece in the fourth period, coach Roy Hughley's Western Canada champions assumed command midway through the second on a smart hockey stroke by Frank (Gopher) Ashworth, 17-year-old centre slated for future delivery to New York's National League Rangers. Ashworth finished two opponents out of position and lobbed a low shot into the left corner from 25 feet.

Gaye Stewart

That forward caged Frank Turik's rebound from a scrolling position to put the Canucks in front and never swept back into the lead to stay less than a minute later when Lou Marsh converted Keith Wecker's goalmouth pass.

Ashworth also created most of the spark for Canucks' third-period attack, providing assists for two successful efforts by linemate Clarence (Mark) Marquess. The two scores, both Canucks' third-period tallies, were sandwiched around St. Mike's last counter, a 30-foot drive by Majors' actually put the puck in the net. Stewart batted the loose puck and the goal was credited to Sloan, his fellow forward.

Joe Sadkey opened the scoring for St. Mikes' in the first period and Pyrzal teamed with Doug Dale to send the teams into the second locked 1-1. Pyrzal connected in warm up as the game progressed and produced the first goal after brilliant barrage after Bob Gray drew a tripping penalty early in the third period.

Canuk's View.

In the dressing-room after the game, coach Hughley said he believed the Canucks had the stuff that Chunks could have won the first game with a fair shake in that. He added:

"We outplayed them tonight and we can outplay them here in it. They'll have to play better hockey than they did tonight to beat us."

Moose Jaw played without Gerry Couture, Down three earlier from Saskatoon, Chuiura joined Detroit Red Wings in the Stanley Cup series under the loan-lend arrangement and Ken Mosdell returned to write examinations at the University of Saskatchewan.

Toronto, April 17 —(CP)— Mimi a woman ball player has always been the American Professional Women's League this so said is quite frank in admitting that it does not want "mannish or amazon" types.

Whether playing ability is affected by the participant's chic qualities, is a matter of contention. But the lady pro loop executives probably think so.

The matter came up a few days ago when the league made an offer to Montreal fastball players of an all-American trophy and an all-expense trip to one of the league's cities for Montreal's outstanding player. That player will be selected in a contest during August by a board specially named for the task.

There are a couple of strings attached to the "outstanding player" contest. One is that the player selected must have a two-thirds majority vote of the board; The others include this: "The girl must be of high moral character, distinctly of feminine type. A mannish or amazon type is not eligible."

Commenting on the latter, Myrtle (Mistress) Starr Cook wonders why a girl who sports a boyish bob or lacks the so-called feminine trimmings can't be a good ball player. Mistress Cook is also handling the chance at a pro career. It may be a big break for Nancy, one of the pictures we have seen of the pro outfielders, glamor is the prime requisite.

The loop may soon run strong competition to Hollywood. Some girls may find it easier to play fastball than to learn acting.

Maryland Boxing Commission yesterday suspended Chalky Wright, former featherweight champion and a veteran of the ring, in a ruling at Baltimore's Carlin's Park as the aftermath of his bout with Jackie Wilson in that city last week, the scrap which was originally declared the end of the seventh round by referee Lee Ramsdell.

The Commission, after an inquiry, decided Chalky Wright was "not trying," his end of the purse was declared forfeited and it was announced Wright would be suspended in other state boards that he is out for life. It was brought out at the formal hearing that Wilson suddenly became the favorite in betting odds just before the fighters entered the ring.

Morton and Walker Cooper, brother battery of the St. Louis Cardinals, announced yesterday they had finally decided to ddh storms for the championship opening pending "a reasonable adjustment" of their 1945 salaries, it was learned. They added: "We will not accept less than $15,000 a year."

Promoter Mike Jacobs announced at New York that the Joe Louis-Tami Mauriello fight would be resumed there at Madison Square Garden on May 18 with a 10-rounder at the Polo Grounds between Sugar Ray Robinson of New York and welterweight Jimmy McDaniels of Los Angeles. The Louis-Mauriello bout was held Sept. 20, 1941.

Canadian senior champions at last season, Hayes Steel Rollcats, representing the Hamilton Recreation Association playoffs, swamped Montreal Canadiens 71-41 in their first of the eastern finals at St. Catharines Memorial Arena last night. The win eliminated Halifax Y.M.C.A. in the straight games at Montreal to stack up against the Canadiens. Mates of Hellcats was high scorer with 20 points.

Danny Webb, Montreal Negro featherweight, was another fave of England last night when he decisioned Mel Brown, Toronto, over a eight-round go at Royal Albert Hall. Al Delaney, Toronto, Oct., light heavyweight, was knocked out by Jock Porter of Scotland in the 5th round.

Toronto West End Y.M.C.A. were swept from the floor last night at Fredericton, N. B., as University of New Brunswick entered a 56-26 win over the Ontario contenders in the first game of a two-game total point series for the Canadian Intermediate title and the Canadian Amateur Basketball Association.

With the withdrawal of the New Waterford, N. S. five from Canadian junior hockey championship competition, the winner of the Kitchener-Waterloo series between St. Jerome's College, Kitchener, and Ottawa Glebe will play the New Brunswick champions at Moncton April 23-24, it was announced last night by A. Remick of the C.A. B.A. at Toronto.

FROST DAMAGES CLOVER

Toronto, April 17 —(CP)— Agriculture authorities said yesterday severe frosts in the night of Ontario Saturday night and Sunday morning did considerable damage to clover and alfalfa crops.

Most fields were swamped with minor frost loss, they said.

London, Ont. (CP)— A sharp frost, most of which growers said may not be apparent before harvest time, struck Middlesex county orchards over the weekend causing some damage and giving rise to fears for this year's fruit crops.

The temperature dropped suddenly to 27 degrees Saturday night, lowest point Monday night was 26 degrees.

Hanson Dowell Named Prexy Amateur Hockey

Grants Voted to Amateur Clubs for Each Game of Interprovincial Play-Offs

Toronto, April 17 —(CP)— Hanson Dowell, Toronto, veteran hockey executive, was elected president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association at its annual meeting here. He succeeds Frank Sargent of Port Arthur.

Other executive members, elected were:

Al Pickard, Sudbury, first vice-president; Frank Boucher, Toronto, second vice-president; George Dudley, Ottawa, secretary; Dr. W. G. Hewitt, Toronto, registrar-treasurer.

Dr. Hewitt also was appointed chairman of the rules committee.

The association voted a grant of $100 to amateur clubs for each game of inter-provincial play-offs in which they took part, except Jaw Canucks and Toronto St. Michael's Majors, which each receive an additional $600 grant for the Memorial Cup finals.

It was decided that after, deducting $1,000 from the fund, the association to care for expenses, proceeds of the Memorial Cup game between the C.A.H.A. clubs and the Hockey Hall of Fame to be established in Toronto, the C.A.H.A. clubs will divide 3 per cent of the money left over from the fund will be presented to the Hall of Fame Trustees. If the Hall of Fame plans are complete and sufficient funds are available to proceed with the project.

George Dudley, secretary, said the C.A.H.A. has a membership between 84,000 and, 85,000.

C.A.H.A. Lower Bars for Junior Series Sponsors

Toronto, April 17 —(CP)— The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association in convention here, approved a motion permitting junior branch clubs sponsored by Toronto Maritimes, Thunder Bay district and Northern Ontario branches to strengthen their teams for interprovincial play-offs with three players.

The Association granted junior clubs in Quebec City and Ottawa the same travelling expenses as senior "affiliated" clubs. City clubs are still permitted, however, to carry only five players.

Approval was given payment of "reasonable" expenses to clubs taking part in inter-provincial play-offs and the Association's chairman of the rules committee, Dr. W. G. Hewitt, was appointed to confer with the Maritime junior champions in a play-off next year. Each branch was given the same.

No guarantees will be asked for the lower to levy 15 per cent of gate receipts on all exhibition games being played in Canada.

It was decided that if a club in the branch of the association decides to play in a league under jurisdiction of another branch, it must first obtain the latter's consent.

George Dudley of Midland, secretary, said a suggestion that the Ontario Hockey branch permit Midland to play in the Quebec Senior Hockey League next year will be submitted to the next branch meeting in June. Still played this season in the Ontario league.

The report of the minor hockey committee recommending the grant of $1,800 to each branch for minor hockey purposes be continued.

Dr. W. G. Hardy or Edmonton was re-elected chairman of the International Ice Hockey Association.

TAKES ON MORGAN

When speaking of tough wrestling opposition, the name of Bob "Strangler" Wagner, the Portland Octopus, is invariably linked. Wagner contends he chased Frank Sexton out of Canada seeking a bout for the Pacific coast mythical crown. Now the Portland strangler is away and willing to test wrestling strength with anybody. H.M.C.S. "UGANDA" EN ROUTE TO THE PACIFIC

Canadian sailors serving in the new cruiser H.M.C.S. "Uganda" found plenty of fresh fruit when they went ashore at the historic Saudi Arabia port of Aden, en route to the Far East. The Canadian cruiser H.M.C.S. "Uganda" was honored to have a visit en route to the Far East from a party of native Ugandese, soldiers in the King's African Rifles. The first big Canadian warship retained the name "Uganda" (after the British Protectorate in East Africa) when the ship was turned over to the Canadian Navy by the Royal Navy. The "Uganda" soldiers are seen in front of the ship's crest and motto, "Fidei Predaeque Tenax," a free translation of which means "We stick to our word and our prey." L/Cpl. Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. [illegible]

By SAM GORDON

Experts have different ways of naming trick-taking cards. But there is one thing sure. Any one card will take no more than one trick, no matter what name you give it.

You are sitting north in this pair of partnership hands:

SOUTH
♠ A Q J 7 2
♥ K Q J 5 4
♦ K 8
♣ 4

NORTH
♠ K 10
♥ 10 8 6
♦ A 6 4 2
♣ A 7 5 3

You had the same hand yesterday. From the bidding you were able to figure out what the south hand held. The bidding goes like this:

SOUTH	NORTH
1 S	1 NT
3 H	3 NT
4 H	4 NT
5 S	6 H

Why is your first response in no-trump? All bids follow T-A-N; takeout, assist, no-trump. For a takeout, you have no biddable suit. For an assist, you have no adequate support for a once-bid suit.

Since your first response is in no-trump, why not jump instead of only one no-trump? A jump no-trump promises enough no-trump tricks to help make a game in no-trump. You haven't enough.

No-trump tricks are high cards; aces, kings, queens. To promise a game in no-trump, a player must discover nine no-trump tricks (on occasion, eight may be enough.)

An opening one bid in a suit promises five suit tricks with four high cards (no-trump tricks) among them. So, when you made your first response, you had not yet seen more than seven tricks.

Some players will argue that point. If they have a responding hand with what they call two and a half honor tricks, they will make a jump no-trump response. But they are wrong.

Call two aces and a king anything you like. But would you say they can take more than three tricks? Don't make me laugh.

43 Candidates Nominated For Ontario Election

By The Canadian Press

A survey by The Canadian Press today showed a total of 43 candidates nominated for the Ontario general election June 4. There are however approximately six weeks to official nomination day, May 26.

The low total of candidates in the 90 provincial seats is explained by the suddenness with which the election arose. Premier Drew's progressive Conservative government was defeated 51-36 on March 23; dissolution took place the following day. Late Thursday Premier Drew set the election date for June 11. Last Friday a federal general election was called for the same date. Yesterday, Premier Drew advanced the Ontario date to June 4.

Of the total provincial candidates nominated, 18 have been listed by the Labor-Progressive party, 12 by the C.C.F., nine by the Progressive Conservatives and four by the Liberals. Nomination meetings are being speeded by all parties in an effort to name as many candidates as possible by May 7, when nominations virtually close for overseas service voting. Names of Canadians nominated after May 7 will be cabled overseas. The Progressive Conservatives today announced a list of no fewer than 53 nomination meetings between now and May 2.

At dissolution the Legislature consisted of 38 Progressive Conservatives, 32 C.C.F., 16 Liberals, two Labor-Progressives and two Independents.

AT THE BELLE

AT THE BELLE

"Marine Raiders", Romantic

Starring Pat O'Brien, Robert Ryan and Ruth Hussey, the film deftly blends its love story between Ryan and Miss Hussey with vivid scenes of Marines on Guadalcanal, in a big-scale invasion of the Philippines, and in elaborate glimpses of the rigorous training of "rookie" Marines for jungle combat.

The romantic episodes take place in Northern Australia, where O'Brien and Ryan are sent to recuperate after the "Canal affair" and again, as they are sent back to participate in an island invasion. Said to be the finest scenes of their kind ever embodied in a service picture, these episodes definitely establish the Ryan-Hussey duo as a brilliant romantic team.

Frank McHugh and Barton MacLane head the supporting cast.

"The Falcon in Hollywood"

Murder of an actor on a Hollywood studio sound stage forms the theme of RKO Radio's latest offering in the popular Falcon series, "The Falcon in Hollywood," with Tom Conway in the role of the Falcon, the second feature attraction on the same program.

The Falcon crashes the gates of a motion picture studio, and, in spite of being chased all over the lot by studio cops, comes upon the body of an actor beneath one of the sound stages. The discovery that the actor has invested fifty thousand dollars in the picture he is making, sets the Falcon on the right track but before he gets through two other people meet with violent deaths.

150,000 Fans Expected to See 4th Wartime Ball Season Open, Tight Pennant Races Are Forecast

Largest Crowd Likely to Witness Cincinnati Game With Pirates

By JACK HAND

New York, April 17 —(AP)— Sixteen well-conditioned Major League clubs were ready to open a fourth wartime baseball season today before approximately 150,000 fans.

Both presidents Ford Frick of the National League and Will Harridge of the American League have forecast tight pennant races and there was every indication that neither the Cardinals nor Browns, favored to make it another all-St. Louis world series, would have any cinch.

Luke Sewell's Browns, who had to go down to the last day of the 1944 season before they could shake off Detroit, were to meet the Tigers at Sportsman's Park while the Cardinals invaded Chicago. Cool weather was expected all around the circuits.

Most clubs came up to the barrier without serious injuries.

Some Absentees.

Among the better known absentees were holdout pitcher Ernie Bonham of New York Yankees; first baseman Hal Trotsky of Chicago White Sox who is staying out this year; infielder Pete Coscarart of Pittsburgh remaining in a war job and outfielder Jeff Heath, who signed but then decided not to report to Cleveland.

Largest crowd of the day was expected at Cincinnati where the usual sellout throng of about 30,000 was due to watch the hard-hit Reds open against Frankie Frisch's Pirates.

Brooklyn was counted on for 20,000 against the Phillies, despite the Dodgers' poor spring record and weakened roster, while Mel Ott's New York Giants will test Bob Coleman's revitalized Braves at Boston.

Postponement of yesterday's Presidential game in Washington pushed back New York Yankees' first tilt to today and gave New president Larry MacPhail a chance to open at home against Boston Red Sox. Washington hit the road to Philadelphia for a three-day stand as the memorial game for Franklin D. Roosevelt was rescheduled for Friday at Griffith Stadium.

Cleveland pried off the lid at home with a question-mark team, opposing Chicago White Sox who appeared destined for the second division.

DANCE OF DEATH

By HELEN McCLOY

CHAPTER 31

"Boy was he scared! He thought I was going to give him away! He told this dame—Mrs. Jowett, he called her—to let me go pronto, an' she looked down her nose, an' said, 'Really, Mr. Pasquale. . .' I looked him in the eye and said, 'What about these supper menu cards? Do I keep them?' He positively twittered, 'By all means;'—he was so anxious to get rid of me. I shoved 'em back in my pocket an' forgot all about 'em after I'd shown them to the fellow I had the bet with, an' that's why you found 'em there."

"Why didn't you come forward with this story when Kitty Jocelyn's murder was reported in the newspapers?" snapped Foyle.

"We—ell, would you have done that in my place, Inspector?" The young man started to smile and then remembered his cut lip. "Somehow I've a hunch the big bugs at the university wouldn't be any too pleased about my gate-crashing. And you would never have caught me at all if I hadn't been fool enough to keep those menu cards in my pocket and drink some champagne on an empty stomach at a dance at a hotel last night, and there's nothing I can do to help you. I don't know a thing about the murder."

"That's what you say." Foyle's voice was grim. "But there's nothing to prove your story, is there?"

The young man thought a moment. "There's one thing. If you'll look under the mattress in the bedroom farthest from the stairs on the third floor you'll find an old raincoat. I had to leave it when I went downstairs. I'd like it back when you're through with it."

* * *

Rhoda Jocelyn glanced at Foyle's rather dingy office with impersonal curiosity. Her hand was entirely steady as she took a cigarette from a sandalwood case.

"I see you have found your cigarette case." Basil brought out his lighter.

"Oh, this isn't the one I lost!" She paused. "How odd you should remember a little thing like that!"

"Did you ever find the one you lost?"

"No. But have you called me all the way down here just to ask me about my cigarette case?"

"No, ma'am." Foyle looked at her accusingly. "We've found Philip Leach."

"Oh." Rhoda regarded the tip of her cigarette with undivided attention. Then she smiled again—the fatalistic smile of a gambler who accepts a loss without whining.

"Very well, Inspector. When Kitty first disappeared I felt certain she had seized the chance the impersonation gave her to run away with Phil. Those children believed they had succeeded in keeping their little affair a secret. But they gave themselves away to me every time they looked at each other. That explains everything, doesn't it? Instead of sending private detectives to look for Kitty at the hospitals and mortuaries, I sent them to find Phil Leach—before the wedding if possible. Unfortunately, the detectives were unable to find any trace of Phil. But it wasn't until you came to the house that I seriously considered the possibility Kitty might be dead."

"Why didn't you tell us then that you had believed Kitty was with Leach when she first disappeared?"

"I wasn't at all sure that you were speaking the truth when you said Kitty was dead, and as long as she was alive, I wanted to keep her infatuation with Phil a secret, so that Danine would not hear of it and lose interest in her, or become jealous."

Basil asked. "Did you tell Ann Claude that Leach was a philanderer so she would not take him seriously if he made love to her when she was impersonating Kitty?"

"Naturally. I had to prepare Ann somehow, or she might have given everything away when Phil made love to her. I doubt if she would have been willing to play such a trick on Phil if she'd known he was seriously in love with Kitty."

"Yet Kitty herself was willing to trick him?"

"Oh, no. I don't believe she ever intended the impersonation to deceive Phil. I suppose Kitty thought she and Phil would be miles away on their elopement when Ann was playing Kitty's part at the dance. Unfortunately, I didn't suspect any of this until Kitty disappeared."

"How do we know you didn't plan from the first to poison Kitty and force Ann to take her place permanently? Ann was not entangled with Leach. By threatening to have her declared insane, you might have coerced her into marrying Danine under Kitty's name so you could get your hands on some of his money!"

"Must you bellow, Inspector?"

"Maybe that's the real reason you didn't tell us about Kitty's affair with Leach. You knew that the fact Kitty wanted to marry Leach instead of Danine gave you a motive for murdering Kitty and putting Ann in her place for good. Maybe that's what Pasquale was thinking about when he accused you of murdering Kitty that first evening we saw you. Maybe all this impersonation business was just your alibi. You knew that there was no one who cared whether Ann disappeared or not. Maybe it was really you who induced Kitty to leave the house wearing Ann's clothes after she was poisoned. That's a new twist to murder—getting the corpse to disguise and remove itself before the actual moment of death."

Rhoda crushed out her cigarette in Foyle's ash tray.

"That would do as a plot for a Hollywood scenario, if it weren't a little too melodramatic. I had no need of such an elaborate intrigue to rid Kitty of Phil Leach. I need only have told Phil that she was penniless and the affair would have settled itself."

Rhoda's smile annoyed Basil. He carried the war into Africa.

"Are you aware that Mr. Pasquale takes morphine?"

The lipstick stain on her mouth stood out so vividly that he knew she had turned pale under her mask of powder.

"I—I was never sure. . ."

"Has it occurred to you that he may have poisoned Kitty without your knowing it?"

"Luis?" Her breath came faster. "Of course not! Why should he?"

"Do you know if Ann sent him to Kitty's room to get a wrap while she was impersonating Kitty at the dance?"

"What would Ann want with a wrap?" Rhoda's voice was almost shrill. "She was dancing."

"Then why did Pasquale go to Kitty's suite the night of the dance? Could Kitty herself have asked him for a wrap?"

"Kitty had a fever. She kept throwing off the bed clothes because she was so warm. And she was in Ann's room."

Basil smiled. "Mr. Pasquale is evidently not as accomplished a liar as you, Mrs. Jocelyn. He was seen coming out of Kitty's suite during the dance. He said Kitty had sent him there to get a wrap which he had failed to find. Kitty's suite was empty then, wasn't it?"

"Yes."

"Have you any idea why this ring which Leach gave to Kitty, should have been found in Pasquale's rooms over the coach house?"

Rhoda stared at the ring in Basil's hand as if it had been a snake.

"I don't believe it! She wouldn't have dared!"

"Could Kitty have visited Pasquale secretly? Perhaps she was not such a child as you thought."

"It's impossible! Ridiculous!" cried Rhoda. But her hands trembled as they lay in her lap.

"You got under her skin all right, doc," said Foyle, when Rhoda had gone. "But what she sees in that pale fat slug beats me!" Turning to Detective Duff, he demanded, "Where is Pasquale now?"

Duff consulted a notebook. "He was last seen twenty minutes ago entering the Viviane Galleries on 59th street," he announced.

"O. K." Foyle turned to his desk, piled high with reports on other cases. "Next time Mullens phones in tell him to bring Pasquale down here."

Outside the building, Basil hailed a taxi. "The Viviane Galleries—59th Street."

The Viviane Galleries were just off Fifth Avenue. One show window contained a Rembrandt sepia drawing; the other, a portrait of the English eighteenth century school. An inconspicuous placard proclaimed.

Exhibition of Paintings by Sir Joshua Reynolds And Other Artists of His Period November-December.

Basil remembered now having heard that Viviane was one of those ghouls who never exhibit the work of a living artist. Only after death had limited a painter's production and given his work a scarcity value could he hope for the honor of a show at Viviane's. The gallery catered to millionaires who thought art a much smarter hobby than newspapers, or cancer research.

Basil was on the point of turning away, when the door opened and Pasquale came out. He carried a flat oblong parcel wrapped in brown paper.

"Good morning," said Basil. "I didn't know you were an amateur of Reynolds."

Pasquale's broad throat rippled as he swallowed and gasped and swallowed again. Then he took to his heels and ran.

When Basil caught up with Pasquale, the pudgy artist was panting as if he had run five hundred yards instead of fifty. But panic had given him an unintelligent courage. His right fist shot out wildly in the direction of Basil's jaw. Basil dodged neatly and caught Pasquale with a light blow in the stomach. He collapsed on all fours. His hat fell off and rolled in one direction, topped in another. Something fell out of his breast pocket into the dirty snow with a soft plop.

Basil picked it up. It was a woman's platinum cigarette case inlaid with slivers of dark sapphire—an expensive trifle that did not look expensive.

"So this is the cigarette case that Rhoda 'lost'!" cried Basil.

Pasquale looked at him sullenly and announced, "I'm going to be sick."

When Basil entered Foyle's office, he was carrying the brown paper parcel. He cut the string with a penknife. Foyle looked over his shoulder and saw a red chalk drawing framed in carved, unpainted wood.

"Unmistakably French and unmistakably eighteenth century, isn't it?" Basil laid the picture on Foyle's desk and contemplated the group of seductive nudes with insipidly sensual faces, and bodies as sleek as pink and white seals.

He dug his knife into a corner of the frame. The two halves split apart and white powder dribbled out onto the inspector's green blotter.

"Works of art come into the country duty free. You probably remember a little while ago when the Customs' officers decided modern sculpture wasn't art and was therefore dutiable. But they would pass any sort of antique automatically. If they looked at this particular one at all, they'd be more likely to notice the picture than the frame. And therefore it was a singularly clever way to smuggle dope."

Foyle whistled. "Not the Viviane Galleries! Well, I'll never say anything against psychology again. What put you onto it, doc?"

"Not psychology this time. Just common sense. When a surrealiste artist visits an exhibition of painting as purely representational as Reynolds' more than once, there must be some reason for it that has nothing to do with art. Pasquale might go to a Reynolds' exhibition once to scoff, as Blake, the grandfather of sur-realisme, did. But he would never go twice unless he had some other business there, and I knew he couldn't have any ordinary business with the Viviane Galleries, because Viviane never shows the work of a living artist. When I heard Pasquale had gone there a second time, I went to the place to make sure they really were showing Reynolds all during December. I intended to pass my hunch on to you. But just then Pasquale came out, carrying this picture under his arm. When he saw me, he naturally assumed I knew all about it, and had come to catch him with the goods. He lost his head and ran."

"We must get after this Viviane place. Who woulda thought it? A highbrow joint like that!" Foyle reached for his telephone and instructed the officer commanding the Narcotic Squad.

"There was something else Pasquale had with him." Basil laid the cigarette case on the table. "Rhoda Jocelyn's."

"Then it wasn't lost?"

"No. Rhoda's 'losing' her cigarette case wasn't a blunder at all—any more than Mrs. Jowett's 'mislaying' her glasses."

"And it had nothing to do with Rhoda's smoking too much?" Foyle grinned. "I'm glad you're not always right, doc. I'd be getting one of these inferiority what-do-call-it's if you were. But what did Pasquale want with Rhoda's cigarette case?"

Obituary

THOMAS BERMAN NORTON

After an illness of four months' duration Thomas Berman Norton, 307 Albert Street, died in the Belleville General Hospital late Monday evening, April 16th.

The late Mr. Norton, who was in his 87th. year, was born in Toronto and was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William J. Norton. For a time he lived in Oshawa and for the past thirty-two years has resided in Belleville. On March 29th, 1911 Mr. Norton retired from the service of the Canadian National Railways after having completed 45 years of service. In 1903, he was classed as a locomotive engineer. During the thirty-two years he was in the employ of the railway he discharged his duties in a capable manner and was highly thought of by the officials in the Belleville Division and by his fellow employees. To many friends his death has brought much regret. He was a member of Lebanon Lodge 198, G.R.C. A. and A. M., Oshawa and was secretary-treasurer of the Belleville branch of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. Surviving to mourn his loss are his wife, Ida Norton, one daughter, Mrs. Carol Mair, Detroit; all brothers and sisters: Mrs. R. H. Cadboum, Bowmanville, and Miss Gladys Norton, Belleville.

Resting at the Belleville Funeral Chapel, 307 Albert Street, Belleville Street, until Wednesday morning, then at his home. Rev. Robert Brown of the funeral announcement is made by the family.

Lend-Lease Extension Signed By Pres. Truman

The bill extends land-lease aid to the United States and Britain for 12 months from June 30.

Canada has not been granted and does not receive land-lease assistance from the United States.

The extension was historic for several reasons. Among others, it was the first time a Republican Congress had signed a bill which a Democratic President had initiated. It previously had signed at vice-president and presiding officer of the Senate.

TORONTO STOCK EXCHANGE

Toronto, April 17 —(CP)— The mining groups and the industrials registered moderate gains during the early session today and the trading was quiet. Later on, however, a little higher in volume as 2,150,000 shares for the first time since 1937.

Senior base metals, including Smelters, Noranda, Hudson Bay, were well up for the day and gains were posted by Mining Corporation, Lake Dufault, Wayle-Amulet and Steep Rock. The index for the 30-mine top 5 issues showed a net gain of 90 points to 2.15. Harricana broke to 44 and recovered part of its loss and Duquesne set off about 25 cents.

Utilities, senior oils, liquors and foods were stronger. Industrial Acceptance Corporation preferred 1-3 to 18, Canada Packers added 2-4 and Brazilian firmed 1-4.

RIVER NAVIGATION OPENS

Cornwall, April 17 — (CP)— Navigation along this sector of the St. Lawrence River was officially opened early yesterday when the steamer Canadoc, of the Canada Steamship Lines was locked through the Cornwall canal on her initial trip of the year to Montreal. Several others freighters followed during the day. The passenger steamer Kenora, making date of last year and was one day later than the record season of 1942.

HONDURAS REVOLT 28 GAINING SCOPE

Guatemala City, Guatemala, April 17 — (AP)— Reports in the pro-government Nuevo Diario said last night that a revolt in Honduras was gaining scope and the Revolutionists had captured the towns of Santa Rita and Dulcenombre.

POLICE COURT

Pte. George Asselstine, of the R.C.A., stationed at Brampton and formerly of Belleville, today was fined $50 and costs or three months after pleading guilty to a charge of theft before Magistrate F. W. Wills.

Inspector J. G. Hayes informed the court that Asselstine and Gnr. Spencer, both of Belleville, had obtained the sum of $36.52 and obtained that amount from James Tinkiss of Belleville. Gnr. Spencer is now in the reformatory and Asselstine is in the army here this month. He has been in Belleville since leaving the service. Asselstine is to Mr. Hayes, stated Inspector Hayes.

"I would be quite satisfied with a probation providing restitution was made," stated Crown Attorney H. C. Donnan. His Worship gave Asselstine two weeks in which to make restitution. The accused was then turned over to Lieut. W. J. Thompson, R.C.A., of Brantford, to be returned to his unit.

Hugh Johnson, Belleville and formerly of Winnipeg, pleaded guilty to the theft of a gold locket and a fountain pen. These articles were recovered by police after having been taken from the premises of Mrs. Ross at 30 Rowsell Street, stated Detective Sergeant Lloyd Wills of the city. The returned articles is small and the accused is now working on a farm he is of more value to the country there than in jail," remarked Magistrate Wills, as he meted out the six-months suspended sentence. Costs amounting to $23.50 were ordered paid.

Following charges of Terrence Nott, Allen, and R. Sanford, both of Belleville, were bound over to keep the peace. Odriscoll Construction of disorderly conduct brought convictions against Mortimer McLean and Ray Hickson, both of the Mountain View R.C.A.F. station. Fines of two dollars and costs were paid before court convened.

ALLIES CONTROL 100,000 SQUARE MILES IN EUROPE

Paris, April 17 — (AP)—United States 12th Army Group headquarters today estimated that the Allies in the west had overrun 63,000 square miles of Germany and that the Russians had occupied 36,000—a total of 100,000 square miles. That left the Germans only 94,000 miles of their homeland.

SEARSE STOLEN AT HAMILTON

Hamilton, April 17—(CP)—Thieves here last night stole a hearse from in front of the Canadian National Railway station. The hearse was last seen on the Queen Elizabeth Highway, heading toward Oakville. Police gave chase, but were forced to abandon pursuit when a tire blew on the police car.

It was believed the thieves sought four new tires with which the hearse was equipped.

DESERTING ESCAPES DEATH, SENTENCED TO 7 YEARS

Toronto, April 17 — (CP) — The Court of Appeal today reduced to manslaughter the verdict of guilty of murder by an Assize Court jury against Leslie Harkins, 34, of Cowansville, Que., and reduced his sentence from death to seven years imprisonment.

LITTLE BURMESE AND BRITISH PRIEST

Padre Joseph Heaven of the R.A.F., of Bromham Road Methodist Church, Bedford, plays with a Burmese baby in a village near Monywa, where he found 40 Burmese Christians who were evacuated from the Methodist mission compound and who have been told that Padre Heaven held the first Methodist service in that part of Burma for three years.

Mess Room Chatter Of Canada's Airmen

With the R.C.A.F. Overseas, April 17 (CP)— First aid to damaged American heavy and medium bombers and fighters is a little known aspect of international air operation on the Western Front.

It is a common sight at advanced airfields in Holland to see a Flying Fortress, a Liberator and a couple of Mustangs parked among the Typhoons and Spitfires flown by R.C.A.F. and R.A.F. men.

"Not having the necessary spares for American machines we can't do a complete repair job ourselves," said Sqdn. Ldr. Skedding of Ottawa, commanding officer of one R.C.A.F. repair and salvage unit.

"But we can find out the full extent of damage and let the U.S.A.A.F. know so they can bring the right equipment. And we take first aid measures to prevent the damage getting any worse. The R.A.F. Regiment supplies a guard to protect secret equipment and keep souvenir hunters away."

Repair and Salvage looks after the American mechanics while they are on the field.

FO. C. A. Lynde of (320 14th St.) Lethbridge, Alta., has been made a member of the Order of the British Empire for risking his life to save his unconscious pilot from a burning aircraft.

The plane burst into flames just after landing, when the undercarriage collapsed. Flying mates saw the wreck in time to see Navigator Lynde grumble out of the top hatch onto the port wing. Then he crawled back into the blasting plane to bring out his pilot, a New Zealander, who could not free himself from his harness.

Lynde was badly burned about the back, legs and arms and now is at a rehabilitation centre in Britain.

Typhoon fighter-bombers have been waging a ding-dong battle with the German convoy creeping up the Norwegian coast. The Nazis push repair work at night and the planes blast new cuts in the lines by day.

In two missions to one area west of Munster the City of Ottawa and City of Hamilton squadrons made 18 interdictions along lines they cut on previous occasions.

Most spectacular results were scored by FO. Adam Saunders of Mt. Tamworth, Que., whose company saw his bombs score a perfect hit on a junction in the village of Darfeld, among a number of stationary railway cars.

Another MK-262 was brought down over the Ruhr by FO. Nicholson of (1187 106th St. E.) Calgary. He flies with the City of Winnipeg Bear squadron and was on a fighter sweep when his unit when the enemy was sighted.

Nicholson fired a three-second burst from 300 yards and "smoke poured out and pieces flew off the starboard wing."

His squadron commander saw the plane crash into the ground.

Learned to Shoot In Her Spare Time

Wyoming, Ont., April 17 —(CP)— There aren't many family squabbles between Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Barnes of this town east of Sarnia. Mrs. Barnes holds the Dominion indoor rifle championship and "we don't get into any arguments unless I have the ammunition," says her husband prudently.

Pretty, blonde Mrs. Barnes, 32-year-old mother of two small daughters, won the 1944 championship in matches conducted by the Canadian Small Bore Association with a score of 1197 out of a possible 1,200. She holds the championship jointly with four men.

Mrs. Barnes has been handling a rifle for less than two years. Five months after she started shooting, she was individual women's champion of Canada, a title she has held for two successive years. One year later she won the open title.

"I had no idea I could shoot," she explains with a laugh. "They needed somebody to fill in on one of the teams so they asked me. I had nothing much to do with my spare time, so I thought it would be fun. I never dreamed I would be so successful."

Her marksmanship has helped make the Wyoming rifle club one of the best known in the country.

S. H. Thompson, secretary and instructor of the Wyoming club says she is a crack shot because she is naturally clever and a good student.

"It doesn't take brawn to make a good shot," he says, "only brains, a good eye, and application."

Change of Ontario Election Date Gets Mixed Reception

Ottawa, April 17 —(CP)— M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. National Leader, said the switching of the Ontario general election date from June 11 to June 4 would result in distracting the attention of the "many women overseas" because it would be "impossible" to organize the overseas vote in the length of time now allowed.

J. H. Blackwell, Social Credit House Leader, described the change as a good political move on the part of Premier Drew.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King's office said there would be no commenting on Mr. Drew's announcement of the change in date.

There was no immediate comment forthcoming from Progressive Conservative circles.

Mr. Coldwell said Premier Drew "evidently hopes that this will react in his favor but he is proving himself simply a politician who places the welfare of his party ahead of the interest of Ontario and the Dominion."

He said Premier Drew's action would increase his (Mr. Coldwell's) difficulties personally, and added:

"I will be absent in San Francisco and I would have liked to have taken some part in the Ontario election. It will not make much difference to the result. Whether we or the Liberals or the Progressive Conservatives win, it is deplorable that the result in one province will be used to influence the vote all over Canada."

Mr. Blackmore commented briefly:

"It's good political strategy on Mr. Drew's part. As far as what happens to the people of Ontario is concerned, they are a sovereign community and have a perfect right to do what they please. He may be depriving the soldiers of their vote but it's his responsibility."

Letter From Eire

By F. H. McGREGOR
(Canadian Press Correspondent)

Dublin, April 17 —(CP)— Canada is the only country which has steadily increased the value of its exports to Eire during the war years. In 1944, last year for which complete figures are available, it was second only to Britain as a source of overseas supply.

The prospects of increasing this trade, in peacetime, seem good.

In 1939 Canada sent Eire goods worth £1,467,000 ($5,867,000) but in that year Eire had grown to £6,017,132, ($24,068,000.) The business fluctuated during the war years, exports to Canada in 1944 were only £2,126, and it might be expected that Eire will try to make trading relations more equitable once peace returns.

While Britain still retains top-place as a supplier of goods to Eire, her shipments in wartime have dropped by almost half — from £32,500,000 to £17,240,00 — while those from the United States have increased from £22,179,000 to £32,407,000 in the same five-year period 1939 to 1944.

Any doubt about the part Rivet Aluminum played in Portsmouth Harbor during the Battle of Britain was set at rest when it was announced that the Rivet Company had been rewarded by the Admiralty for its "great work" in Rivet and the United States.

The agreement was reported in official circles here as the first peacetime contract to be signed between governments ultimately many be recalled with Canada, Newfoundland and Britain.

From Rivet's viewpoint the important part of the agreement is that American aircraft will not be over Eire in either direction with-out landing and it therefore seems likely that Foynes will be first and last port of call for all east and west bound American aircraft.

Americans Edge Closer to Baguio

Manila, April 16.—(AP)—American troops edged closer to the Philippine summer capital of Baguio today.

The U.S. 14th Corps converging through the rugged Benguet Mountains from three directions on Baguio, were within about three miles of the city limits at the nearest point.

Fourteenth Corps troops occupied another small island, Cagayancy, off the southeastern Luzon coast and further secured the entrance to important Lagaspi Harbor.

Philippine-based bombers continued their South China Sea blockade, sinking or damaging seven enemy ships. They sank another freighter and damaged shore installations in raids on the Hong Kong and Canton areas and along the French Indo-China coast.

Heavy bombers swooped down on Japanese convoys in the Dutch East Indies, sinking two freighters and possibly a third. Four others and a destroyer and gunboat were damaged.

2,500 Workers Of Tire Co. Strike

Toronto, April 17 — (CP) — Approximately 2,500 workers of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co., Ltd. New Toronto, went on strike Monday after failure of last-minute negotiations Monday morning between company officials and Local 232, United Rubber Workers of America (C.I.O.)

The employees had reported for work as usual after Matt Drummond, president of Local 232, had announced the Union's negotiating committee would meet Company officials to attempt a satisfactory settlement of the grievance.

Strike action was delayed while the negotiations proceeded but by mid-morning the workers were called out.

Union officials said the dispute arose when the company stopped girl workers on the fourth floor of the plant from partaking refreshments during the afternoon rest period.

BREADNER RETURNS

Ottawa, April 17 —(CP)— Air Chief Marshal L. S. Breadner, who retired April 1 as Air Officer Commanding-in-Chief, R.C.A.F. Overseas, landed yesterday at nearby Rockcliffe Airport, R.C.A.F. Headquarters announced. He had succeeded overseas by Air Vice-Marshal G. O. Johnson.

"... where the heart is!"

SITTING by the fireside at home—digging in the garden for fun—lazy weekends just fishin'—these things mean comfortable, pleasant living, the kind of living your man overseas is dreaming of, fighting for. Make sure these simple, pleasant things exist for him when he comes back. Remember that it is possible for them to exist only if his dollar is worth a dollar!

By protecting his dollar, we help to protect his future. That's why we must realize NOW the dangers that lie in careless, unnecessary buying. Never buy two where one will do. Buy only what we need. We must support rationing and price control and encourage others to support them, and we must avoid ALL dealings with black marketers.

These are the rules. If we break them, we can be certain that we will start our country —his country—on the spiral of inflation. Prices shoot sky-high. Wages try to catch up, and never succeed. You may pay a dollar for 30 cents worth of goods, and this means your dollar—your soldier's dollar—is worth only 30 cents.

There's no limit to inflation, and there's no stopping it once it starts. So, let's make sure OUR boys will come back to a protected dollar—a dollar that will buy a full dollar's worth of goods. Let's keep up the fight against inflation, every day, in every way we can, so that our men overseas can look forward to pleasant, satisfying living . . . the Canadian way of life.

Make this Pledge Today!

I pledge myself to do my part in fighting inflation:

By observing rationing and avoiding black markets in any shape or form;

By respecting price controls and other anti-inflation measures, and refraining from careless and unnecessary buying. I will not buy two where one will do, nor will I buy a "new" where an "old" will do.

By buying Victory Bonds and War Savings Stamps, supporting taxation, and abiding by all such measures which will lower the cost of living and help keep prices at a normal level.

GERMANY BISECTED, CZECHOSLOVAKIA INVADED RUSSIAN ARMIES CAN SEE BERLIN BURNING

Third Offensive South of Stettin Opened, Report

Battle for East Approaches To Berlin 'Reaches Climax'

By RICHARD KASISCHKE

London, April 18 (AP)—German broadcasts declared today the battle for the eastern approaches to Berlin had "reached its climax," with the Russians only 16 or 20 miles from the capital, and that the Soviets had launched a third offensive south of Stettin, aimed at linking with the Allies on the north German Plain.

Front dispatches to Moscow asserted the Russians could see the fire burning, but did not specify that any offensive was underway.

Nine Russian armies are smashing toward Berlin, the Germans said, described Red Army gains through the strong hedgehog defenses in the blasting of the outer northeast of the Bomb-shattered city.

The enemy declared Marshal Stalin had thrown in a third offensive arm, a "flanking drive" northwest of Stettin, intending to also in between that Baltic port and Berlin, and join the western Allies north and west of Berlin. This drive has assumed great dimensions, the broadcasts said.

Expand Surge

The Germans claimed Marshal Ivan Stalin's armies had expanded his surge across the Neisse river southeast of Berlin to a 40-mile front, and was nearing Cottbus, on the Spree River 35 miles southeast of Berlin. Moscow has not confirmed any of these three enemy-reported drives.

Capt. Ernst Von Hammer declared the Russian armies were striking toward Berlin and "hundreds of tanks are rolling over the paved-up highways" to the city. He said he reached its climax.

Trabbrook said the Russians had pushed south from Wriezen and west from Seelow, where they were to be less than 30 miles from greater Berlin, and astride main roads to the German capital. Berlin, he added, is hitting very slow a main road from Seelow to Moscow, and less than 17 miles from Berlin. A deep penetration south of Wriezen also was reported.

3-1-3 Battles Troops Used

Trabbrook declared 2,500,000 Soviet troops were attacking toward the capital, with 3,000 tanks, artillery guns and 1,800 mortars first used in the war after being stored up in the last 24 hours.

"Tomorrow or the day after one of the bloodiest battles of this war will develop on the gates of the Reich Berlin," the Agency added, while propagandists called on Berliners to "use the bloody days" to defend the city.

"History has singled out Berlin to be a breakwater of the Russian tidal wave after having stood up for years to Allied air onslaught," one declared.

Moscow dispatches said Soviets in Czechoslovakia had sighted the ancient battlefield of Austerlitz, where Napoleon defeated Russians and Austrians in 1805.

Head Toward Sprembers

The German Transocean Agency said one of two major spearheads in the Neisse River sector was headed from Muskau toward Sprembers in the Spree River. The other was said to be aimed through Niesky, 11 miles northwest of Gorlitz and 45 miles east of Bautzen.

A junction of Russian and American forces at Torgau, on the Elbe, many would cut the Berlin defenders off from the south, and would put into the enemy's Berchtesgaden retreat, reported.

The Germans said the Red Army was clutching at Berlin from the northeast, as one spearhead in one column that pierced the Oder west of Zehden was reported driving with tanks to the main Berlin-Stettin highway. They were capturing Hohenfinow, the DNB said.

In addition, German troops made steady progress in an order of the day, Marshal Stalin announced the fall of Elsterndorf, oil-producing centre 26 miles northeast of Vienna. Other Red Army elements drove toward Brunn (Brno) in Czechoslovakia.

A Moscow communique announced liquidation of 130 Germans remaining on the Sanland Peninsula of Eastern Prussia except those in the escape port of Pillau.

TRUMAN URGED TO DELAY MEETING WITH ALLIED HEADS

Many Prefer Conference Held After San Francisco Parley

Washington, April 18 — (AP) — President Truman is being urged to delay a meeting with the heads of major Allied states until the San Francisco conference has acted on a world security organization.

Although Mr. Truman said at his final news conference yesterday he would be happy to talk soon with other members of the big three many in Washington felt that any such concluding conclave might better be postponed. Mr. Truman also has announced great dimensions of the broadcasts said.

BRITISH, RUSSIAN BOMBERS COMBINE TO BLAST BERLIN

453 German Planes Destroyed Tuesday And Other Units Hit At German Shipping

London, April 18 (CP) — More than 750 United States heavy bombers battered rail targets in western Czechoslovakia and southern Germany today while 600 other aircraft escorts raided airfields in the same areas in another ruinous blow by the dominant Allied air forces.

Canadian Halifax bombers struck Heligoland, German fortress island in the North Sea, guarding the approaches to Emden, Bremen and Hamburg.

During the night, Berlin was attacked by the first so-confirmed double blow from British and Russian bombers. Other night-flying Halifax formations of many types railways into Czechoslovakia and airfields in southern Germany.

Where the targets of the American assault were not identified immediately.

It was the third straight day of bombing by the fighter fleets which have completely shattered the Luftwaffe's defenses and debris, left naval force.

Even after smashing through the protecting screen the bombs fell wide of one carrier, causing no damage. Other carriers were not shot down and others were chased off.

The British pilots expressed disappointment that they couldn't get a crack at a sizeable Japanese force.

Combat air patrols were kept busy repulsing Japanese attempts by Japanese planes to reach the fleet off the east coast of Formosa.

A total of 17 snoopers were shot down.

Against Sakishima Group

"The initial British Pacific fleet attacks March 26-27 were against airfields with the view to a potential staging point of the enemy strikes against Okinawa," the admiralty spokesman said at Okinawa, 250 miles northeast. For two days, just three airborne groups were launched and struck.

One reason for the scarcity of Japanese aircraft was the fighter umbrella established by the fleet's planes from dawn until dusk. When the bombers and fighters were not attacking airfields on the Sakishima and Miyako islands, aircraft circled the fleet. Admiral Rawlings said Japanese who might have tried to get to the fleet.

Lt.-Col. Ronald Hay, 30, of the Royal Marines, the Air Group Leader, was killed at the first day's sortie of any Japanese reaction. He is a veteran of the Norwegian campaign and the invasion of Norway to the Mediterranean and Southeast Pacific.

Lt.-Col. Hay's successor, Lt.-Commdr. Gray, said: "We have been flying over Malta in peacetime," he reported: "So far we have been able to do just what we like over there."

Wing Cmdr. Bader, Legless RAF Pilot Freed From Prison by Americans

Paris, April 18. (AP)—Wing Cmdr. Douglas Bader, famous legless R.A.F. fighter pilot, has been freed from a German prison camp, it was disclosed today.

The airman who won renown during the battle of Britain, had three escaped from German camp that was recaptured each time by captors finally took his artificial legs away from him.

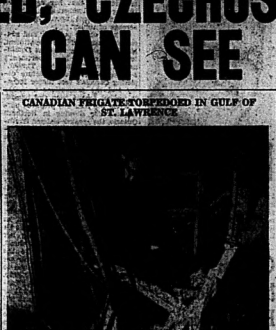
Bader became almost most of his fame as the leader of an all-Canadian fighter wing overseas. The R.A.F., was taken prisoner when his plane was forced down in Le Paid over German-held territory on August 9, 1941.

The date of his release and the place were not given but it was thought he was captured in France.

Bader was credited officially with shooting down 15 enemy planes up to the time he was captured. He had been awarded the D.S.O. and bar, the D.F.C. and bar and the C.B.E.

In June, 1940 the British-born Bader took over the All-Canadian squadron which had been battered during the Dunkerque evacuation and finally led them through some of the fiercest and numerically-unequal battles ever fought in the air.

Bader lost his legs in a flying accident before the war when he was regarded as one of the best stunt fliers in Britain. After many attempts, he persuaded the R.A.F. he could manipulate a plane with his artificial legs, as well as most others with one leg missing. His record showed he was right.



Wing Cmdr. Bader, retired pilot, Jack Mickelson of Toronto, who was shot down and also captured, believed killed, dropped one set of supplies with his Prince for Bader after the Wing Commander's capture.

No Word of Col. Merritt

Toronto, (CP)— Mrs. Cecil Merritt, wife of Col. Cecil Merritt, Canada's Five V.C. winners in the war, said today her husband was in Switzerland. Mrs. Merritt, 29, Wing Cmdr. Douglas Bader, legless R.A.F. ace, whose liberation was announced today, but she has received no word from Col. Merritt himself or her husband also has been freed.

Col. Merritt, Bader, Merritt, and Maj. Gordon Rolfe, of the Calgary Tank Corps each made three unsuccessful attempts to escape from prison camp and the letter two were at large four days on occasion. No word has yet been received of Rolfe's release.

Lt.-Col. Merritt won his V.C. at Dieppe where he was captured by the Germans.

In a daring raid far up the Gulf of St. Lawrence last autumn a German U-boat torpedoed, and seriously damaged, the corvette Trillium. Here H.M.C.S. "Moose," 73 was the first attack in the river since 1942. Three ratings were killed and five were injured.

Frigate Magog Damaged By Torpedo in St. Lawrence; Three Killed, Three Injured

Ottawa, April 18—(CP)—German U-boats ventured far up the Gulf of St. Lawrence last autumn in a series of their attacks on Canadian river shipping and succeeded in damaging the Canadian frigate Magog and a Canadian merchant vessel, Navy Minister Macdonald disclosed tonight.

Three men were killed and three injured in the explosion of the Magog, but there was no loss of life in the merchantman. Both ships remained afloat and were taken to port for repairs.

The Magog was torpedoed near Pointe des Monts, Que., which lies on the north shore of the St. Lawrence River about 200 miles below Quebec City, while she and other Canadian naval vessels were escorting a convoy of merchant ships upriver.

No Date Given

The announcement did not say where the merchant ship was hit and gave no indication when the attacks occurred or whether they occurred on the same day.

One officer and four ratings were mentioned "in dispatches for their highly meritorious efficiency in carrying out their duties after the blast. They are Lieut. (E) S. F. Larson, Sidney, B.C.; CPO. J. G. L. McKinney, Oshawa, Ont.; Chief Stoker Norman Howes, Saskatoon; P.O. N. J. Sisel, Newport, P.E.I.; and ERA (Third class); V. G. Hammond, Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., and Montreal.

The citations accompanying the awards told how the officer and men had shown devotion to duty, skill and disregard for personal safety in helping repair the damage to the Magog so she could be towed to port.

First Since 1942

The U-boat attacks were the first in the St. Lawrence since the summer of 1942 when 20 merchant ships, including the Canadian Pacific liner Princess Joan and the Canadian Corvette, Charlottetown, were sunk in the river and gulf. One other merchant ship was attacked in 1942 in the river and broke up while efforts were being made to salvage her.

The torpedo which struck the Magog was believed to have been fired from a submarine's "underwater" distance away. Ships of the escort obtained "contacts" with anti-submarine detection gear and attacked with underestimated results.

The torpedo tore great watertight bulkheads and compartments were flooded with oil and water. Two of the three men killed were doing "lookout duty" and the third was standing near where some wreckage landed.

ROYAL NAVY UNITS NEUTRALIZE MANY ENEMY AIRFIELDS

Fight off Persistent Air Attacks in Combat Debut in Pacific Theatre of War

By MORRIE LADENBURG

Aboard a British Fleet Carrier Leaving Formosa, April 13 — (Delayed) — (U.P.) — British task force struck hard to neutralize Japanese airfields on Sakishima Islands and northern Formosa and fought off persistent enemy air attacks in its combat debut in the Pacific.

We were on schedule tonight after two straight days of raids on Formosa which showed a swift adaptation to carrier warfare in the Pacific by the veterans of clashes with the German Luftwaffe in icy northern seas.

For British carriers it was the most continuous offensive operation to date. The attacks lasted 3 days against Sakishima and Formosa and brought destruction to at least 80 planes.

Fishing at Sea

The fleet was fueled at sea.

The Japanese from Formosa, exceeded only once — before dawn this morning — in penetrating the fleet defenses of the powerful British naval force.

Even after smashing through the protecting screen the bombs fell wide of one carrier, causing no damage. Other carriers were not shot down and others were chased off.

The British pilots expressed disappointment that they couldn't get a crack at a sizeable Japanese force.

Combat air patrols were kept busy repulsing Japanese attempts by Japanese planes to reach the fleet off the east coast of Formosa.

Yanks in Leipzig, 7th Army Clears Half of Nuernberg

Capture of Magdeburg Secures Anchor on Elbe

By JAMES M. LONG

Paris, April 18 — (AP) — The U. S. 3rd Army blasted Germany today, invading Czechoslovakia.

As Lt.-Gen. Patton's troops crossed the Czechoslovak frontier, the U. S. 1st Army stormed to within 4,000 yards of the centre of surrounded Leipzig and the U. S. 7th Army cleared half the West Ahrau city of Nuernberg.

All along the front, Gen. Eisenhower's armies were gathering strength for the final drive eastward to meet the Russians.

The four through assumed proportions of the greatest victory of the war, even more costly to the Germans than the defeat at Stalingrad. Already 300,684 prisoners have been taken from the industrial trap and 50,000 more were expected before today. The enemy has quoted but 212,600 in killed and captured at Stalingrad, one of the decisive victories of history.

The U. S. 9th Army captured Magdeburg (134,300), securing a firm anchor on the Elbe River opposite Berlin. The industrial and communical centre was the 30th largest city of Germany before bombs and shells reduced it to smoking ruins.

More Geographical

The halving of Germany was of more geographical than immediate military importance, bombed and enemy still has circuitous contact with the north and south Germany areas through the mountains of Czechoslovakia.

Censors would pass only the bare report that Czechoslovakia was entered.

(Presumably, the invasion was in the Plauen area, where between the 90th and 26th Divisions last week reported within four miles of the frontier.)

The British 2nd Army fought through the Bremen suburbs and advanced to within 20 miles of the greatest port of Germany. It quickly set a wide break-through of German lines before the lower Elbe.

The U. S. 1st Army likewise expanded its bridgehead east of that river before Berlin, 45 to 53 miles away, and fought through the streets of Magdeburg.

163,000 Taken

Allied supreme headquarters announced 2,055,575 Germans had been captured in the west since D-Day (June 6), 48,000 yielded yesterday to rip the April total above 275,000.

Infantry and armor of the 1st Canadian Army fought forward to within two miles of the Zuider Zee at some points, and Canadian troops in the other half body were slowly burning the area north of Utrecht into a shambles.

Gen. Crerar's men were advancing toward the Zuider Zee between Rotterdam and Utrecht. Perhaps 1,000,000 persons were cut off in The Netherlands.

The enemy maintained a 36-hour service out of Harderwijk, menaced Zuider Zee port, seeking to evacuate his trapped troops north of Ijsselmeer, Yanks into the hook of Holland and the Amsterdam area.

Close Cigarette Arc

Hails and Dessau were falling to the U. S. 1st Army, which was closing up the southwest portion of a gigantic arc around Berlin. 32 miles distant at the nearest 1st Army spearhead.

Chemnitz was under frontal attack, though 3rd Army troops after its commander refused a surrender ultimatum. Other 3rd Army troops were four miles from Czechoslovakia and the Germans said their army corps already had been virtually severed, that the western front no longer existed as such, and that Germany's southern and northern commands now were separated. Hitler's troops were about 30 miles from Dresden and 75 from Russian lines.

A German trap in the Harz mountains was reduced to about 175 square miles, half its original size, by U. S. 1st and 9th army gains.

Hundreds of miles behind the enemy lines, Allied troops were mopped up the mouth of the Gironde estuary, pressing the last Germans barring access to Bordeaux, important Atlantic Rear Admiral Michaelis, commanding at captured Royan, surrendered. Hitler's troops were pushed back into action in the maritime Alps, where the French 27th Alpine Division captured several peaks and moved brief near the Italian border.

Stuttgart, the only south west-ern city held by the French army which was rolling up the last of the Nazis' Atlantic wall fortress. The Poilus moved 26 miles southwest of Stuttgart.

Canadians Complete Liberation Of Northeastern Holland

By ROSS MUNRO,
(CP War Correspondent)

With the 1st Canadian Army, April 18 (CP Cable)— Forces of the 1st Canadian Army today completed the liberation of northeastern Holland while Canadian tanks far to the south reached within two miles of the north shore of the Zuider Zee.

Tanks captured Putten, on a coast road seven miles southeast of the Zuider Zee at a 13-mile thrust north from Barneveld. Canadian infantry advancing west from Barneveld linked up with the tanks.

Other columns were probing the outer defences of the Grebbe Line at the very advanced towards Amersfoort.

The German confusion resulting from the sweep of Canadian armor from the Ijssel River to the coast increasing. Some enemy troops are evacuating from Harderwijk, Zuider Zee port six miles north of Putten, sailing in fishing boats for Amsterdam. At the same time other Germans fleeing by sea from northeastern Holland are arriving at Harderwijk.

"Typhoons and Spitfires of the R.A.F. No. 84 Group are lashing a field day attacking shipping in and out of the small port.

Ernie Pyle Killed in Pacific Area; President Truman Expresses Sorrow

Washington, April 18 —(AP)— Ernie Pyle is dead. The noted little war correspondent, beloved alike of persons and servicemen, was killed Tuesday on Ie Jima, a small lightlying off Motobu Peninsula of Okinawa.

His death was announced by Maj.-Gen. Clayton Bissell, chief of staff Dent Truman issuing a statement of condolence.

Mr. Truman said Pyle was killed instantly by Japanese machine-gun fire while standing beside a regimental commanding officer.

In his tribute to the 44-year-old reporter for Scripps-Howard Newspapers, who covered the war in Europe before going to the Pacific early this year, President Truman said:

"The nation is quickly saddened again by the death of his countrymen.

"No man in this war has so well told the story of the American soldier, sailor and merchant fighting men wanted it told.

"More than any other man he became the symbol of the ordinary American in arms doing so without complaint, with humor, with his genius that the mass and power of our military and naval effort was never obscured the men who made them.

"He wrote about a people in arms as people still, but a people moving in a determination which did not need proclamations as a part of power.

"Nobody knows how many individuals in our forces and at home he helped with his writings. But all Americans understand now how wisely, how warm-heartedly, how well he served this country and his profession. He deserves the gratitude of all his countrymen."

Pte. MacDonald Arrives Home Minus a Leg

The beaming faces of his parents smiling a welcome to him as he stepped off a hospital train at Kingston on Tuesday was the best sight Private Douglas MacDonald of Herchimer Avenue had seen in over three years.

This three-three year old veteran of Italian campaigns lost a leg in the seven fighting in defiance of the year and was invalided home aboard the "Letitia" last week with other veterans of the European theatre of battle.

Son of Mr. and Mrs. Cameron MacDonald.

He left his position with the Wray Furniture Shops here in early 1942 and enlisted in the army. He went overseas three years ago and was wounded in Italy. He was transported to the Lazark and Rentbew Scottish with which he was serving when severely wounded by mortar fire.

Born in this city he received his public school and collegiate education here. A sister, Mrs. Thomas Walker of Milton, also survives in Toronto County.

Private MacDonald has been given thirty days leave and will report to the Canadian Army at the expiration of that period.

Other district soldiers arriving from the Mediterranean on the "Letitia" last week with other veterans of the European theatre of battle.

Immediate Start on Riverside Drive Recommended at Meeting Of Property Owners at City Hall

Plan to Extend Drive North to Dundas Street From Hill Now Considered.

In the relatively large turn out for the past 18 years when the property owners met at City Hall on Monday night to hear the proposed Riverside Drive improvement plan, the majority of those present were in favor of the city proceeding with the construction of the Riverside project. It was also decided that the road be extended to Dundas Street from Hill Street, according to information brought forward at the private meeting held in the Council Chamber, explained by Regional Planning Committee Chairman Alderman Clarence Clark.

Will Not be Extended.

Suggestion that extending the Riverside Drive northward along Front Street to the Dundas Street at present site of the fire hall fall by the way, it being deemed that parking facilities in the area would be greatly curtailed if the road was extended. Also it was considered to be the best plan for future development of the area.

As at the previous meeting, however, the Belleville Hotel Association was represented by Mr. Ernest entrance passing through the driveway immediately in front of the hotel building. It was feared that considerable damage to trucks and other heavy vehicles would result from stopping and starting.

Property Offer Property.

The alternative to the two north entrances was considered and the suggestion that the Fruit Merchants' property be purchased by the city and the entrance be made from Front Street entrance to the drive to be constructed. This would be directly south of Bennett's barber shop. It was decided to interview the owners of the fruit business with view of acquiring the needed property.

Chairman Clapp told property owners present that after being tabled for the past 18 years the Riverside Drive project, if it were started immediately, would be completed in 1950. While City Engineer Charles Mott estimated that the $60,000 already earmarked for the development of the drive would be the entire job, he said, he was confident that the project could be completed for considerably less than that amount.

Plan Explained.

Mr. Arnold Thomson indicated that development of the drive was the only plan of the city's master traffic scheme for expanding being on Dundas St. "Development of the Riverside drive, if only for the present, is a step in the right direction," he said.

Opening of the proposed roadway came up for considerable discussion with many present considering the plan planned for the future. Sufficient taking into consideration the fact that the present traffic flow thought a walk was needed on both sides of the roadway. This would also be needed if business is developed along the street.

Question of entrance and construction of a usable roadway was deemed by Mr. Clark as being the logical start of the roadway could be moved south as the years go into immediately. He also recommended in his motion that the actual site of the north entrance be left to the discretion of the committee in charge. The motion carried almost unanimously.

Pte. G.M. Pollack Dies of Wounds

Private Goldwin M. Pollack whose wife, the former Pauline Stairs, resides with her parents Mr. and Mrs. Nasen Stairs, 176 Church Street, has been officially reported dead from wounds received while in action, Mrs. Pollack received the Ottawa cable confirming the news on Tuesday morning.

The late Pte. Pollack was born in Minto, New Brunswick from which his parents reside. He received his education there and upon leaving school joined the Carleton And York Regiment in 1940. He went overseas two and one-half years ago and after training in England he is reported to have landed in Italy where he had seen sustained heavy action during the time of being fatally wounded. He was twenty-four years of age.

No details were given of the action, but letters are expected to follow.

LEAVE BERLIN IN PANIC

Malmo, Sweden, April 18 — (AP) —Many high Nazi party members are leaving Berlin "in panic," travellers arrived yesterday from the German capital said. They also reported that the rumble of artillery in the east also can be heard distinctly in Berlin.

MAY ENTER CABINET

In the whirlwind of rumor flying up about political changes in Ottawa, the name of Hon. Paul Martin, Essex East, Minister of Pensions and National Health, above, was linked with a possible appointment to a Senate vacancy or to Finance Minister Abbott's portfolio of Labor in the Truman cabinet.

Carmen Frost Heads Sidney P-C Association

The Sidney Progressive Conservative Association held their annual organization meeting in the Sidney Town Hall, Monday evening, April 18th, with Mr. Osmond Frost presiding. Officers were elected for the ensuing year were:

President, Carmen Frost; First vice-president, Alex. Turner; Second Vice-President, Mrs. Harry Carscallen; Frank Woods.

The Ladies' Progressive Conservative Association held their annual meeting in the Sidney Town Hall on the previous night. Officers were elected for the ensuing year as follows: Honorary President, Mrs. Arthur L. Hicks, ex-Mayor of the County; Mrs. Carmen Frost, Chairman; Mrs. Ireland of Trenton, Secretary-Treasurer.

The keen interest being taken in the forthcoming Provincial elections was evidenced by the large gathering. Mr. Frank Foote of the general committee of the Ontario Legislative Assembly, during the past eight years, addressed the meeting and a new member, Mr. L.A.C. F.F. Allen, Sidney; Mr. F. H. A. Carleton, Sterling; Mr. J. Wilson, Wellington; Mr. Ross Graham County and Mr. Clem Ketchabaw.

F.O. B. Donnan Home on Furlough After Full Tour

Overseas for the past two years and veteran of 30 operational flights with the R.C.A.F. following the outbreak of war, Flying Officer Byron "Buster" Donnan, 21, son of Lt.-Col. and Mrs. Albert Donnan of this city is back in Canada enjoying a well-deserved 30-day furlough.

At the completion of his furlough he will report to Trenton where he hopes and expects to be discharged from the service. A graduate of Albert Collegiate, he enlisted in the Air Force when 18 and trained at Trenton, Moncton, and at Rivers-ville where he won his pilot's wings.

Expressing himself as being extremely fortunate during his entire 30 trip operational tour, F/O. Donnan related that his crew had encountered very little trouble with his ship having been "holed" on one occasion by flak. Although he had been forced to take evasive action on more than one occasion, he sighted, his craft had never actually been attacked by enemy fighter aircraft.

Praises His Crew.

He attributed this to the keen observational powers of his crew members. "Germans fighter pilots are just as anxious to keep living as you are," he stated. "If you show by evasive action that you have sighted them and are prepared, German pilots are not too anxious to come to close quarters especially when they know they will run into the concentrated fire power of a heavy bomber gun."

The hull of his aircraft had been "holed" by flak but once, and on this occasion none of the crew members was injured. During his operational tour of bombing enemy targets the Belleville pilot has flying Stirlings and Lancasters.

Completing his operational tour he did instructional work in England for several months, flying Wellington and Hurricanes.

He has two brothers in the Air Force, Flight Lieutenant Bruce Donnan is on the reserve list after completing training as a navigator while Steward is completing his training as a Lancaster pilot overseas.

TO MAKE PLANS KNOWN

Montreal, April 18 — (CP)—Hon. P. J. A. Cardin, federal cabinet minister, stated here last night that within a few days he would make known his decision in the coming campaign for the Federal election June 11.

Ontario's Forests Most Valuable Natural Resource

Speaking at the regular Thursday luncheon meeting of the Kiwanis Club here, Mr. A. R. Peace, of Toronto, Ontario Forest Service, declared that Ontario's forests are the most valuable natural resource in the province, that her agricultural industry, valuable though it is, is not as important as the forests.

Mr. Peace, speaking extemporaneously and without notes, illustrated his address with the use of lantern slides. Commencing with a picture depicting Canada's vast timber production by sea and the picturesque methods employed, the speaker showed pictures from five hundred feet in the air of the forests of Northern Ontario, the devastation caused by fire, showing in the pictures the methods employed by the Ontario Forest Service to prevent fires.

Wood Not an War Out.

The speaker commented on the belief that the world was on the way out of wood, and that the use of wood was being replaced by the use of other materials. He showed pictures of a new development of the use of wood, Plywood, which he declared was more than twice as strong as steel of the same weight. Plywood is now being used in the construction of aeroplanes, automobiles, and many other articles.

Wood Not Exhausted.

The speaker emphatically stated that wood was not exhausted, and that the forests of Ontario were being replanted and protected from fire by the Ontario Forest Service. Pictures showing the methods employed in the planting of trees were shown.

Mr. Peace was introduced by Kiwanian Ken Hamilton, who was in charge of the meeting.

FRIGATE MAGOG

Life Saved by Gun

"I was standing on the gun platform when the explosion occurred," said Able Seaman Ralph Hill, 21, Winnipeg. "Part of the deck lifted and I was thrown in the air. I saw my life vest was on the gun platform, so I went back to get it. I got it, but when I went to put it on I found it was torn to shreds. I was knocked to my knees, and dazed."

What I remember most distinctly was the shower of bits of concrete from the roof of the gun platform. They were all over me. I guess they were what cut my life vest to shreds."

Warner suffered a flesh wound in the leg. Injured with him was RA. Harold Robertson, 20, Preston, Ont. "I was just leaving the electrical store," Robertson said. "I don't remember anything of what happened, but I do know that I came right through a steel bulkhead and landed in the galley. I was dazed, and I don't know how I got there. I was also knocked around me. And although I was injured I figure I'm lucky to be here."

Bad Close Escape

Almost as remarkable was the experience of Able Seaman Ken Clow, Toronto, who was in his workshop when the first explosion occurred. "The explosion ripped several waterlines," he said.

"Rising Temper"

The engineer officer and his assistant were below with a party and braced the bulkheads with timbers. "The water was rising, but fortunately took a nine-degree list which kept it away from us and the other to correct that and performed many other duties before abandoning ship. I was the last of the ship. They and their men did their duties splendidly. I owe my life to their own danger. Our ship was then a total wreck."

HMCS Trentonian, under command of Lt.-Cmdr. F. E. Hill, of Saint John, N.B., was on her way to Halifax for assembly by coming by and taking the survivors off the Magog within minutes of the explosion. Trentonian's complement includes Surgeon-Lieut. Commander Ian Mitchell, assistant her medical officer, Surgeon-Lt. Lorne Cartwright, of Ontario Que., to look after the injured. Picked up by Corvette

The survivors, being under tow when Toronto detected what she thought was a submarine contact and she stopped her tow at once and dropped depth charges. Nothing was picked up by a corvette and was

Retail Merchants Will Oppose Efforts To Instal Parking Meters in City

At a largely attended and representative meeting of the Retail Merchants' Division of the Chamber of Commerce held at the Chamber of Commerce rooms Monday night it was unanimously and emphatically decided to oppose any effort to instal parking meters along Belleville's principal business thoroughfare.

Among those in attendance were five members of the City Council, and the managers of Belleville's three theatres, Messrs. George J. Forhan, manager of the Belle; W. J. Fawcett, manager of the McCarthy, and Thos. A. Mascaro, of the Capitol.

The Aldermen present were John J. Trudeau, who is also president of the Chamber of Commerce; W. Lorne McDougall, vice-president of the Chamber of Commerce; Fred Chamberlain, Chas. L. Hyde and Clarence R. Clapp.

Among the managers and other representatives of mercantile establishments at the meeting were: J. V. Doyle, Fred S. Farmer, F. J. Fisher, T. A. Tucker, Enos David, R. Shannon, D. T. Martin, W. Wise, Geo. T. Woodley, B. J. Black, A. L. Hill, Elgin Ford, G. C. Brett, F. C. Miller, R. M. Mitchell, P. W. Geen, E. W. Dickens, W. J. Doyle, J. G. Galloway and F. R. Wotten.

Mr. Galloway, in his opening remarks, stated that as Chairman of the Retail Merchants' Division of the Chamber of Commerce he had received many requests from the merchants to call a meeting to give consideration to the proposition before the City Council to have parking meters installed in the business section of Belleville. He wished to give everybody an opportunity to express his opinion whether favorable or unfavorable to the proposition.

Mr. Geo. T. Woodley, veteran representative of one of Belleville's oldest retail business, gave the key note address to the meeting. He began by stating he was very much opposed to adding another restriction to business. He felt sure that this innovation and the imposition of tolls would drive people away from Belleville. "We now get business from points as far away as Kingston, to the east, and Cobourg to the west, and everything was going well," he said. "Our Chief of Police and the police department were doing a good job. They used plenty of common sense and discretion in carrying out their duties and instructions with reference to parking."

It was his opinion that "when outsiders came to Belleville to do business we ought to send them away happy for they leave a lot of money here. In placing these meters on our principal business street," he said, "it was equivalent to the putting up of a notice 'Stay Off Front Street.'"

He was talking to a farmer from near Madoc since the report came out in the paper that the installation of meters was being considered. The farmer said that if he had to pay tolls to do business in Belleville he would do his trading in Madoc where no tolls were imposed. Mr. Woodley went on to say that if these meters produced a revenue of $5,000 a year that would be a mere trifle compared with the half million dollars in trade that would be driven off to surrounding towns and cities.

Mr. Enos David stated that the imposition of tolls invariably caused a feeling of irritation. He felt that way himself whenever he motored into the city of Montreal. It wasn't the amount of the tolls but the nuisance of it that offended people. "We might get a small revenue from these devices but there was no measuring the amount of damage that would be done to business." He was opposed to introducing it on trial even for a year. If they were installed here for a whole year the damage would be done and much of that business could never be regained. He had been talking to Mr. Haugham, general manager of the Retail Merchants' Association of Ontario, and he advised strongly against having anything to do with it.

Mr. B. J. Black, another veteran merchant, stated that he had been doing business in Belleville for forty years. Front Street was too narrow as it is. The introduction of parking meters, which had to be placed 18 inches in on the sidewalks, would take up about 25% of the usable width of the sidewalk and make it more narrow and congested still.

Mr. Geo. J. Forhan, manager of the Belle Theatre, and for a long time a resident of Belleville, said he had been talking to some of their rural patrons and they were unanimously opposed to this levying of tolls for parking in Belleville. His company had purchased the theatre not merely for the accommodation of the people resident in the city but for the entertainment of those in the surrounding country as well and as a matter of fact sixty per cent of their patronage came from outside Belleville.

For their accommodation the company had provided a commodious parking lot. In conclusion Mr. Forhan said "what we have we want to hold." Mr. Forhan's statements were endorsed by his fellow managers, Messrs. Fawcett and Mascaro.

Ald. McDougall, in opening his remarks, stated it seemed that everybody at the meeting was against the proposition but he had talked with a number of merchants and citizens and farmers who expressed an opinion favorable to the installation of meters. The Council did not think of going into this as a revenue producer but as a means of regulating the traffic and helping out a difficult parking situation. When he went to Toronto he had to pay 25c to have his car parked. It was his opinion that once the meters were installed and tested that nobody would object. The City of Sudbury had installed the system in 1940 and he had a letter from that place which stated that the merchants and the police force were now favorable to meters.

Ald. Chas. Hyde stated that he had been over with a party of Kiwanians at Watertown and had been impressed by the efficiency of the meter system which seemed to meet with favor there, but since he had come home and given the matter further consideration he had changed his mind and would oppose the installation of meters in Belleville.

Mr. Court Miller, manager of the McKeown Drug Store, said that in his opinion meters would be a constant source of irritation. They would be like the tolls that used to be collected on the bay bridge. These tolls did not amount to a great deal for any individual but they kept a lot of business from coming to Belleville and this city spent $30,000 to assist in the purchase of that bridge and to free the bridge from tolls. In his opinion there were very few who would favor this and he felt that at least 20,000 people who come to trade in Belleville would be irritated and strongly opposed.

Mr. Ernest Dickens of Dickens and Son, said that one man had informed him that he was not progressive because he was opposed to parking meters. He could not see, however, how the narrowing of the sidewalks, already too congested, on Saturday nights especially, would be benefited by being made still narrower than they were at the present time.

Mr. Percy Geen, proprietor of Belleville's oldest retail business, said he was definitely opposed to the introduction of meters here. Belleville was known as a friendly town. In his opinion 40% of the general retail business done in Belleville came from outside the city. There were better roads leading to Peterborough, for instance, and Peterborough is now drawing a large volume of business from the Bancroft area and from Campbellford and Marmora. If these meters were installed and the outside places had no meters business here would suffer more greatly still.

Mr. W. J. Doyle, of the John Lewis Company, said that after all these years there was only one city in all Canada that had introduced parking meters. Conditions in Sudbury were altogether different from what they were in Belleville. Sudbury had a large population within the city but the surrounding country was barren rock and there was little rural trade done there. "What we have we want to hold," said Mr. Doyle.

Ex-Ald. F. R. Wotten said he saw no reason for this proposed change.

Mr. J. V. Doyle, proprietor of Doyle's Drug Store, said he couldn't understand how any Council could be in favor of such a move. He didn't see how this change would increase the parking space in the slightest degree. At Toronto, where they had made an exhaustive inquiry, their investigations showed that the parking space would be reduced by 15 per cent if the meters were installed. Toronto for that and other reasons turned the proposition down.

Ald. J. J. Trudeau intimated that he had been giving much thought to this proposition and had come to the conclusion that the installation of the meter system was not in the interest of Belleville. It was true the city had a parking problem and a serious one but was making an endeavor to solve it by the development of the Riverside Drive. Peterborough was a great rival of ours for retail business and if the shoppers who were now coming here were irritated large numbers of them would certainly go to the other city. He couldn't see how it would help in any way whatever. The city of Toronto, which had blocked repeated attempts on the part of the company to get installations into that city, had looked into the proposition from every angle and had rejected it decisively.

Ald. Clarence Clapp said he had favored the installation of the meters but the members of the City Council, he knew, did not desire to assume the position of dictators. In view of the feeling expressed at this meeting he would now oppose the installation of meters. The merchants of Belleville certainly didn't want it and the City Council, he did not believe, would make any attempt to force this on an unwilling public.

Ald. Fred Chamberlain, in a brief statement said he was opposed to the introduction of meters. He didn't think the city should do anything here to interfere with the buying public who came to Belleville to do business. He thought there should be better supervision of the lots where cars were now parked. They should be better lighted.

Practically all of those present expressed opposition to the introduction of parking meters. Towards the conclusion of the meeting a motion, moved by Mr. W. J. Doyle, and seconded by Mr. B. J. Black, was unanimously carried to request the City Council not to introduce or instal parking meters in Belleville.

London Letter

By FRANK LOWE

London, April 17 — (CP) — Policeman Sam calls himself "London's St. Peter" — he guards the gates to No. 10 Downing Street.

Beneath the well-padded, slow-looking exterior of this policeman with 30 years experience is the answer to every would-be gate crasher and the muscle necessary to make his answers stick.

But this custodian of Prime Minister Churchill's privacy is a human man. His biggest complaint is that servicemen from Canada and the United States are barred from having a good look at No. 10.

Sometimes, if no one's around, he takes a soldier by the arm and leads him up the little street and lets him peer at the dingy, unimpressive, 4-storey home of Britain's Prime ministers.

"It wouldn't hurt them to let the boys have a look," he says, "After all, what could they do? Besides me and my mate at the gate here, there's another copper at the door, a soldier in that there sentry box, a couple of armed plain-clothes men in that arch across the street from the house, and another copper in the house itself."

Despite the importance of the job, Sam is not fond of the post. He points out that the sun never gets into Downing Street except late in the afternoon when it creeps down from the closed-off, back end of the alley almost to the doorstep of No. 10.

"But there's no heat in it then, and in winter this here beat is bloody torture. Eight hours of standing here is enough to give a man his death."

It's a dull post, too, he says. In peacetime, when crowds often marched from Trafalgar Square to No. 10 to present petitions or throw stones it was different.

But with the war on those things don't happen so often.

SPANISH CENSORSHIP LIFTED

Madrid, April 18 — (AP)—Foreign Minister Jose Felix Lequerica announced yesterday that all censorship of foreign correspondents in Spain had been eliminated and that news now might be sent freely from this country to the outside world.

PATTON, HODGES, PROMOTED

Washington, April 18 (AP) — President Truman nominated Lt.-Gens. George Smith Patton, Jr., and Courtney Hicks Hodges to be full generals.

Gen. Patton commands the United States 3rd. Army and General Hodges, the 1st. Army in Germany.

NETS BRONZE-EDGE SWORD

Stockholm (CP) — When a Lake Vattern fisherman was hauling up his nets one morning he found a rusty sword caught in the meshes. The sword, well preserved, was double-edged and about two feet long. It has been found to date back to the Bronze Age.

Goering's Luftwaffe

Where was Goering on Monday when 1,913 German planes were destroyed on German airfields by Allied bombers? This is the greatest loss in a day in all the history of air battles. When the British knocked out of the sky over Britain and the Channel on September 15th., 1940, about 180 airplanes that was the greatest blow up to that time. Latterly German air losses have grown to immense proportions. In the past ten days it is estimated that more than a quarter of the present available strength of the Luftwaffe was destroyed.

Goering put his Luftwaffe forward as one of the weapons of Hitler's aggression and possibly he thought the most important one.

Since then how have the great Goering and his Luftwaffe been beaten into nothingness!

When Britain shot down the planes of Goering and Hitler on the 15th of September, 1940, and Hitler desisted—that marked probably the turning point of the war. Since then the Luftwaffe has not been able to repeat what it had previously done. But remnants of the Luftwaffe still made it yet an important part of the service to be prepared for. But since D-Day it has shrunken. The Nazis in fear of the coming end took to thoughts of modern "miracles" as they called them, some kind of weapon like the rocket or something else that could turn the tide of war the Germans had already lost. But such things do not win wars. Trust in something happening to swing the tide is not the way to recover the lost past.

There is but one gigantic air force—the Allied air force, made up of the air forces of Britain and America, hovering over Nazidom—in the world. For Japan has found out too that the Yankee airmen can shatter planes of Nippon at an alarming rate.

Long since has passed the glory of the airmen of Potsdam and Tokyo.

Britain's Tribute

Britain officially on Tuesday paid its homage to the greatness and humanity of one of the truly great men of the ages, the late President Roosevelt, as in the sanctuary of St. Paul's Cathedral and in the halls of Parliament in Westminster the British people's sense of loss in a truly great man and friend in time of need was voiced in a solemn service of memorial and tribute was paid before the lawmakers of Great Britain.

One of the supremely great men of this age and of all time in the life of the world has gone. Their Majesties the King and Queen and members of the Royal Family, Prime Minister Churchill, and all ranks of the people of the land and United States service men and women stationed in the Old Land, joined in the memorial in the Cathedral while in the Commons Mr. Churchill, deeply affected by the loss of one who had been a member of that inner circle of the three great Allied leaders, expressed the Empire's grief at the passing of the great American. He called Mr. Roosevelt "the greatest American friend we have ever known and the greatest champion of freedom who has ever brought help and comfort from the New World to the Old."

Like a friend that understood, the British leader said that he had noticed at Yalta signs that his friend was ailing and that when they parted at Alexandria, he "had an indefinable sense of fear that his health and strength were on the ebb."

Mr. Churchill saw in Mr. Roosevelt the statesman, man of affairs, and war leader and his reaction was the utmost confidence in Mr. Roosevelt, in his upright, inspiring character and outlook and he voiced his "personal regard and affection beyond my power to express today."

In words coming from his great heart, rendered lonely by the death of his friend, Mr. Churchill spoke feelingly of the world's loss, "It is a loss, indeed a bitter loss, to humanity that these heart beats are still forever. There is no doubt that the President foresaw the great danger closing in on the pre-war world with far more prescience than most well-informed people on either side of the Atlantic." The British leader named the late President as one who "died in battle harness like his soldiers, sailors and airmen, who, side by side with ours, are carrying out their task to the end all over the world. What an enviable death was his!"

In his greatness the late President had his sympathies, Mr. Churchill said, "there was never a moment's doubt in this war upon which side his sympathy lay. He never lost faith in Britain."

The Prime Minister paid tribute to "the extraordinary measure of assistance" which Mr. Roosevelt devised, "called lend-lease which will stand forth as the most unselfish and unsordid financial act of any country in all history."

And remindful of the task that still remains to be finished he spoke of President Truman as a "successor who comes forward with a firm step and sure conviction to carry on the task to its appointed end."

The ties which bind Britain and the United States will endure. Mr. Roosevelt in the bounty of his nature and the clearness of his vision was on the side of Britain and Russia and the other United Nations. Prime Minister Stalin has voiced the deep feelings of himself and the British people on the loss of the American President and the free world knows that Mr. Stalin's reaction to the noble spirit of Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill is the reaction of the truly great to the truly great. The people of the United States in their sorrow and loss have the knowledge that in the hearts of freemen all over the world there is a keen sense of loss in Mr. Roosevelt's passing.

German Names

As the Allied armies advance into Germany they enter more and more communities the names of which are familiar to Canadians by reason of their duplication in this country, it is noted by The Brockville Recorder and Times.

One of the latest of these is the city of Osnabruck, after which a well known township in the County of Stormont is named, not because there is any close connection between it and Germany, but because Frederick, Duke of York, son of King George III, owned the German Osnabruck and George III was on the throne when the Canadian Osnabruck was named in 1787.

If the cross the county border into Glengarry, we will also find the Township of Charlottenburg, which similarly bears the name of a well known community in Brandenburg. The German Charlottenburg, and thus its Canadian namesake, commemorates Sophia Dorothea Charlotte, daughter of George I of England, who became the wife of Frederick William I of Germany.

Churchill As Symbolism

(Montreal Gazette)

There is a fitting symbolism in the spectacle of Churchill crossing the Rhine in an assault craft. Teutonic fury, that has three times within the memory of man burst upon the west across that fated stream, has once more been driven back behind its barrier. But this time the barrier has been breached and war is moving over it toward the heart of Germany. There is an essential rightness in the picture of Churchill standing on that farther shore, contemplating the ruin of Hitler's Reich.

"Is There a Way We Can Help?"

When Vice-President Truman asked Eleanor Roosevelt, just told of the death of her great husband, what he might do for her, she replied: "Tell us what we can do; is there any way we can help you?"

What a magnificent example of courage and greatness! Here was no blind grief, nor self-pity, nor weak hysteria, but the acceptance of trial with disciplined resignation and above all with a sense of duty.

Eleanor Roosevelt has had her critics. None will deny her greatness of soul and spirit in this hour of testing.

POST-WAR DREAM

Not the way they live in Spain;
Not the way they live in Rome!
This they want, with peace again:
All the old-time joys of home;
Children on their way to school;
Winter gay with jest and song;
Summer-time, the swimming-pool;
Steady work the whole year long.

Not the streets with beggars lined;
Not the alley-prowling boys!
Home again, they hope to find
Freedom's long familiar joys;
All the holidays of old;
Care and comfort for the ill;
Fire against the winter's cold;
Chance for genius and its skill.

Not those lands with ruins scarred,
Torn with many an ancient hate,
But the little flower-filled yard,
Youngsters swinging on the gate;
Plenty when the table's spread;
Friends to welcome at the door—
These, when all is done and said,
Make the world they're fighting for.

Marines Think Army Boys Good But Not in Class with Themselves

By ERNIE PYLE

OKINAWA (by Navy radio) — The bulk of the battle for Okinawa is being fought by the Army —my old friends, the doughfoots. This time the marines had it easy, and by the turn of circumstance the army is the one that has the job to do.

But my self-assignment on the Okinawa blitz was to write about the marines and that's what I continue to do. I landed with the marines, crossed the island with them, and have been living with them amidst fleas, mosquitos, goats and a few Japs, hiding under bushes. So naturally I want to tell you about them.

Marine Corps blitzes out here have all been so bitter and the marines have performed so brilliantly that I had conjured up a mental picture of a marine that bore a close resemblance to a man from Mars. I was almost afraid of them myself.

I did find the marines confident, but neither cocky nor smart-alecky. I found they have fears, and qualms, and hatred for war the same as anybody else. They want to go home just as badly as any soldiers I've ever met. I found them good, human Americans.

They are proud to be marines They wouldn't be in any other branch of the service. Yet they are not arrogant about it. And I found they have a healthy respect for the infantry.

One day we were sitting on a hillside talking about the infantry. One marine spoke of a certain army division—a division they had fought beside—and was singing its praises.

"It's as good as any marine division," he said.

"What was that you said?" a listener cut in.

The marine repeated it and emphasized it a little. Another marine stood up and called out, loudly:

"Did you hear what he said? This guy says there's an army division as good as any marine division. He must be crazy. Haw, haw, haw!"

And yet other boys chimed in, arguing very soberly, and sided with the one who had praised the army division.

• •

Before I came into the field, several marine officers asked me to try to sense just what the marine spirit is, just what causes it, and keeps it alive.

In peacetime when the Marine Corps was a small outfit, with its campaigns highlighted, and everybody was a volunteer you could understand why marines felt so superior.

But since the war the Marine Corps has grown into hundreds of thousands of men. It has been diluted, so to speak. Today it is an outfit of ordinary people —some big, some little, some even draftees. It has changed, in fact, until marines look exactly like a company of soldiers in Europe.

Yet that Marine Corps spirit still remains. I never did find out what perpetuates it. They're not necessarily better trained. They're no better equipped and often not as well supplied as other troops. But a marine still considers himself a better soldier than anybody else, even though nine-tenths of them don't want to be soldiers at all.

• •

The marines are very cognizant of the terrible casualties they've taken in this Pacific war. They're even proud of that too, in a way. Any argument among marine units is settled by which had the greatest casualties.

Many of them envisioned the end of the Marine Corps at Okinawa. If the marine divisions had been beaten up here as they were on Iwo Jima, the boys felt it would have been difficult to find enough men of Marine Corps calibre to reconstitute all the divisions.

They even had a sadly sardonic song about their approach to Okinawa, the theme of which was, "Goodby, Marines!"

• •

The boys of my regiment were continuously apologizing to me because this started out as a mild campaign. They felt I might think less of them because they didn't show me a blood bath.

Nothing could have been farther from my mind. I was probably the happiest American over here when things turned out for us as they did. I told them that kind of campaign suited me. And without exception they came back with the answer that it suited them, too.

I heard it said so many times that it almost became a chant —

"If they could all be like this, we wouldn't mind war so much."

So you see, marines don't thirst for battles.

I've read and heard enough about marines to have no doubts whatever about the things they can do when they have to. No marine need ever apologize for anything.

The marines are O.K. for my money, in battle or out.

Citations Given For Awards Made To P.E. Co. Men

Citations covering awards of gallantry to two Prince Edward County army personnel for gallantry in action overseas have been released by the Department of National Defence at Ottawa. The citations are for the award of the Military Cross to Captain William L. Graydon of Picton and Kingston, and the award of the Military Medal to Pte. Bernard Neil May, of Cherry Valley and Bloomfield. Announcement of both awards have been made previously.

The citations follow:

Captain William Lawson Graydon, M.C.

"On August 27, 1944, during the final stages of the advance on the Gothic Line, the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment was ordered to attack. There were known enemy positions to the right that threatened the advance. Late in the afternoon, Capt. Graydon, in command of "A" Company, was ordered to clear these positions, destroy the enemy and hold the ground to enable the rest of the battalion to attack.

"Captain Graydon had over 1600 yards of open ground swept by machine gun and mortar fire between him and his objective. Moving with the leading platoon he went from section to section encouraging and exhorting his men. Though the withering fire seemed to concentrate on him personally, he displayed tremendous courage and coolness. As he neared his objective he moved to the fore and personally led the charge that drove the enemy from their holes. Consolidating his ground he held it for thirty-six hours despite concentrated enemy mortar and shell fire and frequent attempts at infiltration. Though he lost twelve men, including a platoon commander and four section leaders, he never wavered and when the battalion attack went in he gave invaluable support.

"His sterling example in moving under the heaviest fire from man to man whether in the open or in slit trenches, inspired his company to an indomitable courage. His valor ensured the success of the whole operation and earned for him the respect and admiration of all ranks."

Private Bernard Neil May, M.M.

"On August 27, 1944, during the advance to the Gothic Line, the squadron of tanks supporting the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment came under heavy shell fire. They reported several serious casualties.

"Despite the fact that the enemy was concentrating mortar fire along with shell fire on the tanks, Private May, driver of the regimental aid post jeep, calmly drove into the midst of it. While picking up the casualties he suffered a shrapnel wound in the arm.

"Ignoring this wound completely he carried on and evacuated one load of wounded. Several casualties had to be left behind and the enemy seemed to intensify his fire on the area. Refusing to have his wound dressed and with a remarkable coolness and great courage, Pte. May ran the gauntlet to the wounded again and brought them out.

"This private soldier has driven the unit's regimental aid post stretcher jeep in every engagement since the battle for Ortona. Whenever there were wounded to be brought in, regardless of enemy fire, he has gone out and, with the same fearlessness, steadiness and devotion to duty has brought in casualties. On this occasion his display of courage, well above the dictates of duty, was an inspiration not only to all of his comrades in the unit but to the British tank personnel who were supporting his unit."

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

GREEN, BROWN OR GARNET RED IRON

I have derived wonderful benefit from taking your iron blood tonic. I take a small tablespoonful with breakfast daily. When travelling recently I could get only green iron and ammonium citrate. Is there a preference for results? At home our druggist has brown scales or garnet red scales or granules. (C.S.E.)

The garnet red transparent scales or granules of iron and ammonium citrates, which dissolve readily in water to make a garnet-red clear solution, contain slightly more iron than the green scales. The dull brown scales or granules are garnet-red scales that have oxidized from long-standing exposed to air. There is little practical difference between the garnet-red scales or granules of iron and ammonium citrates and to thin transparent green scales or granules of iron and ammonium citrates.

Instructions for preparing and taking the home made iron tonic are given in the booklet "Blood and Health." For a copy of the booklet send a stamped envelope bearing your address, and inclose a clean dime. If you stick anything on the dime it will come back at your expense for cleaning.

The correspondent evidently takes his iron with breakfast more or less the year around. I can't imagine why. If iron is going to do any good it should suffice to take it for six or eight weeks in the year. Once the blood is up or nearly up to standard strength (in red corpuscles or in hemoglobin—iron coloring matter that carries oxygen) the one-quarter of a grain of iron present in the ordinary everyday foods in the Canadian diet should be enough to supply the body's requirement.

If the anemia in this instance is due to (1) small frequent bleedings, externally or occult such as the bleeding of internal piles, gastric ulcer, or (2) destruction of blood by the patient's favorite pain-killer or "sedative" dope, or (3) habitual domestic or occupational exposure to such poisons as carbon monoxide, lead, arsenic, bensol or aniline, taking iron or other medicine is like pouring water on a seive. The remedy for such anemia is correction of the cause of the bleeding or change of habit or method of work with a view to preventing further poisoning. It may not be easy for pain-killer or sedative addicts to stop using the "harmless" dope. But sooner they break the habit the better for health and life expectation.

As indicated, the healthy body requires about one-fourth of a grain of iron a day. If it seems inconsistent to take perhaps twenty or thirty times that much iron daily as medicine, remember that most of the iron so taken is not assimilated—and it makes little difference whether the iron taken as medicine is of animal or vegetable or mineral origin, organic or inorganic—it all goes through the same chemical changes in metabolism anyway.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Shall I Feed It To You?

I want to try the non-surgical drainage of the gall bladder described in one of your booklets. But I'm not sure whether the glycerin and elixir of lactated pepsin come ready mixed or are to be mixed by myself, and I don't understand whether it is 3 ounces of salts or three ounces after the salts are dissolved in the water. (L.C.)

Answer—First dissolve the salts in the elixir of lactated pepsin — all the salts that will dissolve in three ounces of it. Then mix the solution with one ounce of glycerin, and you're ready to institute drainage.

Likes Tar

For the last several months I have craved the smell of tar, and keep a small piece of tar soap near, so I can smell of it occasionally. At the age of 16 I had whooping cough and I at that time had the same craving. Could this be a vitamin deficiency? (Mrs. B. C. Y.)

Answer—It has no significance, so far as I know. Harmless to indulge the craving as much as you like.

To Beat the Pants Off

Please find ten cents and stamped addressed envelope inclosed. What are you training for? (M.K.)

Answer—To beat the pants of ONE on the bowling green. Oh, excuse me, I'll send you the pamphlet "Training for Diabetes"—and please do not be annoyed with me if this is not what you wanted.

JACK ROBINSON!

The earliest known reference to the expression occurs in "Evelina," published in 1778 by Fanny Burney, who wrote: "I'd do it as soon as say Jack Robinson."

In 1785, an English antiquarian named Francis Grose declared the saying originated "from a very volatile gentleman of that appellation who would call on his neighbors, and be gone before his name could be announced." This improbable story smacks of the type of etymology that derives "apothecary" from "a pot he carries."

In 1846, James O. Halliwell asserted: "The following lines from an old play are elsewhere given as the original phrase:

A warke it ys easie to be done
As tys to saye, Jacke! robys on."

The second line, it is supposed, means "As 'tis to say, Jack! robes on."

Although many authorities regard the popular saying as a corruption of this old verse, the "old play" has never been identified.

John Bartlett in his "Familiar Quotations" asserted that the current expression is said to be derived from a humorous song written by a London tobacconist named Hudson who lived in Shoe Lane during the early part of the 18th century. Hudson, said Bartlette, was a professional song-writer and vocalist and used to be engaged to sing at supper-rooms and theatrical houses. But this theory is disproved by the fact that "before you can say Jack Robinson" was proverbial long before the period when Hudson is supposed to have lived.

Canadian Legion Proposes To Build Headquarters and Bus Terminal on Firemen's Park

Plans Have Been Drawn That Will Also Include Large Community Auditorium

Initial moves to fulfil a long-felt need in the city of Belleville and at the same time provide a service for returned veterans are in the stage of completion by the local branch of the Canadian Legion, which proposes construction of a combined "headquarters" Legion building and community centre on what is known as Firemen's Park, Front and Dundas Streets.

At the present stage the city council has been approached by the local branch of the legion with view of acquiring building rights on Firemen's Park, detailed sketches of the proposed construction have been drawn, and plans are now under way for a campaign to raise funds for the purpose of building the proposed concrete and steel construction with plans drawn by W. A. Watson, local architect.

Speaking at a Kinsmen luncheon on Tuesday, Flt. Lieut. E. L. Dawson, of the local branch of the Canadian Legion, reviewed the background of the Legion and its service league.

WINS EMPIRE MEDAL

Junior Cmdr. Mary Spencer Churchill, 21, youngest daughter of British Prime Minister, has been awarded the Medal of the British Empire (military division.)

Its program was said to be service to the returned man and to war widows and he declared it to be a duty of the Legion and of the citizens of Belleville to provide services needed.

Stresses Need For Building.

Stressing the need for Legion members to have a home prior to the time the returned men return to Canada and their rehabilitation into civilian life, Flt. Lieut. Dawson pointed out the need for the building's completion prior to the end of the war. The building should be completed and ready to start functioning in assisting rehabilitation of service personnel at the time of demobilization, he said.

He pointed out that funds were needed and outlined the financial campaign, which would be started following the completion of the 8th Victory Loan. Added to the Legion's financial committee will be two representatives each of the three local service clubs, Dougall Marshall and H. Wright, who were appointed as Kiwanis members to the committee, it was learned last night.

Parade For Every Phase.

Indicative of the close study which has gone into the plans of the Canadian Legion Building is the fact that provision has been made for every phase of Legion work as well as providing service to the community, both from a point of transportation facility and from the standpoint of entertainment.

According to present plans the building will be of U-shaped construction with overall dimension of 140 feet in length by 80 feet in width, the building will be constructed around the United Empire Loyalist monument at Legion and facing Front Street south of the Dundas Street entrance. The building will be of partial two storey construction with the concrete auditorium in the rear rooms, while on the second storey would be complete kitchen facilities.

The south wing of the building would be the auditorium ball with a seating capacity of around 600. This would be used for dances, meetings, entertainments or other uses.

Proceed Under Canopy.

Buses entering the bus terminal from Dundas Street would proceed under a canopy north of the ticket office where passengers could enter under cover. Buses proceeding south on Front Street would continue on past the old fireball property and after reaching a line parallel to Dundas street would turn east to enter under the canopy.

A three cornered island in the park and situated to the north of the terminal would outline the entrance to the building both from Dundas Street and from Front Street.

Although no estimate as to the total cost of the proposed structure was given, $90,000 will be needed before construction commences. Authority has been given to conduct an intensive financial campaign following conclusion of the forthcoming Victory Loan. Collection of funds would be entirely in the hands of the financial committee comprised of Legion members, representatives of service clubs and certain responsible citizens and subscriptions would be accepted only by these committee members.

Scrambling to make a Will when danger threatens is probably better than not making one at all but the preparation of such an important document should not be left to the confusion of a last minute rush.

Making a Will is something that can easily be attended to before emergencies arise. This duty should not be neglected. The logic and advantages of appointing a Corporate Executor and Trustee are obvious and well recognized.

All that is needed to get the job done, and done well, is to ask us to help you plan your Will, which we shall gladly do without charge. You can then have it drawn in proper legal form, naming The Royal Trust Company your Executor and Trustee, and the Will and file it with us for safekeeping.

Navigation Opens For the Season At Picton Harbor

Picton, April 18—Navigation was opened here Saturday with the arrival of the C. S. Line freighter Winnipeg. Canned goods were loaded for points east. Capt. E. J. Patterson was welcomed by Reeve R. L. Wagar, who presented him with the traditional silk hat and a box of cigars.

The Day.

A tag day was held in Wellington, Picton and Bloomfield, Saturday. Proceeds are to assist in refurnishing the Salvation Army citadel recently damaged by fire. The sum of $961 was turned in by the tagsters, Adjutant D. E. Strachan reported.

Held Memorial.

The Church of St. Mary Magdalene was filled Sunday afternoon when a Memorial service was held for the late President Roosevelt. Rev. W. G. Hope Swayne, the rector conducted the service, that is used in memory of those in the services who give their lives. The Anglican burial service was also used. A surplised choir led in singing of hymns. There was no eulogy. Members of the Rotary Club attended in a body.

Recovering.

Mrs. W. Weinbanks received word yesterday that her husband, Lieut. Carman Welbanks, who was reported seriously ill in Italy, is progressing and has been removed from the hospital to a rest camp. Lieut. Welbanks was injured in an accident while riding in a jeep. Lieut. Welbanks suffered broken ribs and the lung was punctured. He has been overseas since 1940.

Plan For Victory Loan.

Plan For V-E Day.

Mayor F. E. Nicholson yesterday announced plans of local businesses to be observed on V-E Day. In the event of cessation of hostilities in the European theatre between 12 o'clock midnight and 1a.m. o'clock in the morning, that day will be observed as a public holiday. The word is received between 10 a.m. and midnight, she' following day will be observed as a holiday. If these holidays should fall on a Saturday or Sunday then the following Monday would be observed as a public holiday.

Whenever the holiday is observed, a public service of thanksgiving is to be held in the armories at three o'clock.

Merchants plan to have thanksgiving services on the nearest Sunday.

Bowling

wing of the building would be the bowling alleys with spectator seating facilities, ticket wickets, lunch bar and offices, while on the second storey of the wing would be the Legion auditorium. Public rooms, before now situated beneath the city hall would be moved to the Legion building. Bus terminal waiting room would be 30 x 30 feet.

At the closed end of the building with western elevation would be the public rooms, while on the second storey would be complete kitchen facilities.

The south wing of the building would be the auditorium ball with a seating capacity of around 600. This would be used for dances, meetings, entertainments or other uses.

Proceed Under Canopy.

AS TOMMIES CAPTURED ARNHEM

British Tommies mopping up in historic Arnhem blast away at German snipers in the final stages of the clearing of that city on April 14. Arnhem was subjected to a terrific bombardment before the final assault was begun on Friday, which was the 13th—an unlucky day for the Germans.

Brings Home as Wife German Girl Who Aided His Escape From Camp

Sheffield, Eng., April 18.—(CP)—Flt. Sgt. Donald Moore, 26, Sheffield, escaped from a German prisoner-of-war camp and presented England with a nice problem of international relations when he brought back as his wife the German girl who helped him escape.

The airman and his fiancee intend to live here and advised people who have been heatedly discussing the matter in "letters to the editor" columns to mind their own business.

But most of these people seem to believe the airman did the right thing.

Moore's story is that when he escaped from the camp he was picked up by the fiancee's German girl friend, who had him in the attic of her home and later got him to Poland in civilian clothes she stole.

He arranged to meet her in Poland and when she arrived they were married.

The girl, who arrived in Britain aboard a troop transport said all British service wives aboard the transport were "extremely helpful and friendly" and added that she intended getting work here as a children's nurse "as the job she did in Germany until" was dismissed for being an anti-Nazi."

Typical of the reaction to newspaper stories was a letter from Mrs. Genders" of Leeds who wrote:

"... As long as he is a good wife what's the odds if she comes from 'Timbuctoo?'" One columnist thinks Moore's marriage to Georgeina Nelson of the Bundy Gymnastic, fitting advertisement of all the letters he had received "56 per cent were for the marriage, 42 pct. flat against it."

Moore's mother said that as long as her son loved the girl and the girl would make him a good wife, she would welcome her "although I was shocked when I first heard the news and the idea took some getting used to."

LOVE LAUGHS AT WAR

Cupid not only laughs at locksmiths but at war, too, it seems as well, as witness Mrs. Donald Moore, pictured here as she appeared as Georgeina Eng., wearing a complete of formalities which would permit her to rejoin her husband, she is German. Her husband is Sergt. Donald Moore, of the Royal Air Force. He was shot down in Germany and captured. She helped him escape from the German. They were married in Cracow, Poland. Now she is waiting to go to the home of his mother at Norwood, Sheffield.

TRENTON

Unknown Youth Rescued From Trent Canal

Trenton, April 18 — An unknown lad of about six years of age was rescued from the Trent Canal, near Dam No. 1, on Saturday, by Archie Williams, Water Street.

Williams told police that he was waiting for minutes on the bank of the canal and three small boys were playing nearby. First thing he knew was a loud splash, and looking, saw the boy struggling in the water. Without hesitation he dropped his fishing pole and jumped into the water.

He had difficulty in getting the child up over the cement wall after taking him from the water, as there was no ladder handy. Immediately the boy was released he disappeared with his other chums and was in such an excited condition that he was unable to give his name to his rescuer.

Although Williams is only 16 himself he is a powerful swimmer, having been born inside the canal. Attendance Not Good.

Red Cross attendance was very poor on Tuesday at the work rooms and it is hoped this is only temporary as there is plenty to be done in order to fill the standing quotas.

A donation of $10 was received from St. George's Anglican Ladies, also a beautiful quilt from the Red Cross workers at Wooler. Miss Fanny Brereton in receipt of two most appreciative letters from lads in the service, one of whom

Polish Troops Within 10 Miles Of Bologna

Rome, April 18 — (AP) — Polish troops of the British 5th Army, sweeping up the Po Valley, advanced today to within 10 miles of Bologna, mighty German anchor in northern Italy.

Allied 5th Army forces also fought slowly closer to the big Italian art and industrial centre from the south, battering their way through enemy troops entrenched in scores of caves, tunnels and pill-boxes along the mountain highway from Florence.

Other 5th Army forces have advanced north of Argenta on the extreme right, cutting the German off from this strongpoint in the Argenta Gap, the key to Ferrara and the Po Valley.

The Germans were still holding out in Argenta, but they appeared to be trapped, with Allied troops astride the railway 1 mile more than a mile north of the town.

The bridgehead over the Marina Canal, next water barrier to Ferrara and the Po Valley, was enlarged and strengthened with new casualties inflicted on the Germans.

Polish troops who had led the advance north of highway 9 fought their way two miles north of Castel San Pietro.

Pushing out from captured Medicina, 14 miles northeast of Bologna, Indian troops reached the Canal Di Medicina, four miles to the northeast. West of Medicina New Zealand troops blasted their way 4,000 yards across a maze of water obstacles to reach the Gaina canal on a two-mile front.

Italian troops two miles north of the Sillaro River were chasing the Germans from one hill position to the next. They captured 1,000 prisoners in the last 24 hours.

2,280 JAP PLANES LOST IN MONTH AROUND OKINAWA

Guam, April 18 — (AP) — More than 2,280 Japanese planes have been destroyed by British and American carrier, land-based and anti-aircraft gunners in the last month in support of Okinawa operations.

The toll was announced today amid indications that Japan's fierce air attacks on the American invasion armada off Okinawa shrinked the enemy's supply of planes and pilots.

The planes were knocked out of enemy air fleets attacking the Americans on and off Okinawa, and also in British and United States carrier raids on the Ryukyus and the Japanese main islands.

Pilots from task force 58 shot down the greatest number — 1,900. Land-based aircraft, anti-aircraft guns and planes flying from escort carriers accounted for 380. British carrier planes covering the south-ern flank shot out 84.

Destruction of the Japanese air force has averaged 95 planes a day from March 18 through April 17.

This toll does not include planes shot down by Superfortresses or by escorting Mustangs from two Jima. In one recent Tokyo raid, B29 gunners alone shot down or damaged 180 aircraft and escorting fighters added 37.

Infantrymen on southern Okinawa were within 10 miles of the enemy artillery duel four miles north of the capital of Naha, while U. S. marines edged closer to the northern beaches through small pockets of Japanese resistance.

Ten-square-mile Ie Island off the west central coast of Okinawa was virtually in American hands.

Fight Rages Again

Manila, April 18 — (AP) — American soldiers fought inside the Japanese stronghold of Baguio today as an Allied communique announced the end of more than 1,000 civilians from the summer capital of the Philippines.

From a base on the northwest outskirts, four miles from the centre of the ruined city, U. S. 32nd Division troops encountered heavy fire from guns dominating the approach. The battle increased in intensity as the Japanese indicated they intended to defend every foot of ground to the limit.

Heavy rains, heralding the approach of the wet season, hampered movements.

Igorot Mountaineers were credited with saving many of the 7,000 civilians, mostly Filipinos.

The Igorotes guided them singly, in groups and even in a mass delivery of 800 persons, over secret mountain trails to the American lines.

Many, the Igorotes and refugees said, were too sick or starved to complete the four-day journey. The trail was dotted with graves.

British Forces Near Airfields

Calcutta, April 18 — (AP)—British forces advancing southward through central Burma have reached a point only 26 miles from the rich Irrawaddy-Chindwin valley on the east bank of the Irrawaddy River, Southeast Asia Command headquarters announced today.

The announcement said two British columns had effected a junction on the motor road from Meiktila to Kyaukpadaung, 34 miles south of Pakokku. Japanese forces were reported resisting stubbornly, however, north of the highway in the Mount Popa area, 30 miles south-southeast of Pakokku.

WEDDINGS

BURNESS—HASTERPSON

The marriage of Ila Della Masterson, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. T. Masterson, of this city, to Pilot Officer Murray Johnston Burness, R.C.A.F., youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Burness, of Campbellford, was solemnized recently at Avenue Road United Church, Toronto, the Rev. Dr. Hunnisett officiating.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a particularly lovely afternoon dress fashioned in powder blue, hat of flowers misted with veiling, in matching hue and white shoes. She carried a bouquet of orange was of pink carnations.

The bride's attendant, her only attendant, was wearing a charming pastel blue ensemble and dainty flower hat. She wore a corsage of white gardenias.

Pilot Officer Murray Johnston, of Toronto, was groomsman.

Dinner was served at the King Edward Hotel, Toronto, Daffodils and red roses were the theme of the table. The orchestra at the dinner party in the King Edward was led in honor of the newlyweds, "Always", "Because", and "I Love You Truly".

The bride's mother chose for the occasion a navy blue ensemble with tonning accessories and corsage of Whitmore roses.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, on the return of the bride and groom to Belleville.

The bride will stay with her parents and the groom will return to resume his duties with the R.C.A.F.

HUBBS—MIKEL

A pretty wedding was solemnized on Monday, April 10th, at the Manse Noon in Colborne United Church parsonage, when the Rev. George Hunter united in marriage Eva Evelyn Agnetha Mikel, second eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Mikel, of Consecon, and Malcolm Lloyd Hubbs, youngest son of Mrs. William Hubbs and the late Mr. Hubbs, of Bethany.

The bride looked charming in a floor-length gown of white georgette over taffeta and a hand embroidered fingertip veil sent to her from a friend in Italy. It was caught with a halo of lily of the valley and blossoms. She carried a bouquet of American Beauty roses and fern.

The bride was attended by her sister Miss Marion Mikel, who wore a street-length ensemble of rose crepe accessorized with lace trimmings. Her hat was white straw studded with shoulder length veiling. She carried a bouquet of Lady Ashton roses and fern.

Mr. E. Hubbs attended as groomsman.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the White House, Brighton, to twenty-five relatives and friends. The many gifts received by the bride's mother who had acted as matron of honor, were accessories and corsage of pink roses. The groom's mother was wearing a two-piece gown of black crepe, having accessories and corsage of orange of Talisman roses.

For travelling, the bride donned a navy tailor-styled tailored suit and accessories in the same shade and corsage of pink roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Hubbs left by motor for Toronto, Niagara Falls and Rochester.

On their return, they will reside on the groom's farm near Redmonville.

Mrs. William Hubbs, of Redmonville, entertained at a reception in the evening of April 6, in honor of her son and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Hubbs. Twenty-three were present.

Mrs. John Gehan Elected President Of Tweed C.W.L.

The annual meeting of the Tweed C. W. L. was held in St. Carthage's Hall, recently. Very Rev. Dean Culliname opened with prayers and the League prayer and Mrs. Oscar La Valles presided.

Correspondence included letters from various diocesan convener. Mrs. James Trish, Smith's Falls, literature convener, asked all reports be completed and forwarded before June. She also announced the establishment of an annual scholarship of $200 to be used within the diocese. Mrs. R. F. McGrory, Prescott, diocesan treasurer, gave information and financial reports regarding various annual reports and obligations of regional officers. Congratulations were also received from Mrs. M. F. Strickland, Smith's Falls, announcing the annual Retreat for League members to be held at Notre Dame Convent, Kingston, also from Mrs. T. Coughlin, Ottawa, regarding Council fund. A receipt of $10 as a donation to their recent drive was received from Ottawa.

The annual report was presented by the secretary, Mrs. Gerald Thompson. This showed a very successful year with a favorable balance on hand.

The retiring president, Mrs. Oscar La Valles, was presented with a Rosary by Mrs. Norman Champagne, on behalf of the League in appreciation of her untiring efforts during her term of office. Mrs. La Valles graciously thanked the ladies for their gift and also for their splendid support.

Mrs. Dorian Bealey then acted as chairman for the election of officers for the coming term. Mrs. Gerald Thompson made choice of the members for the new executive. The convention declined to duty in accepting the presidency, despite a multiplicity of duties, and with inspiration to every member present. With such a leader, the League may confidently anticipate continued success in the future. Another newcomer to the executive is Mrs. Chas. Dion, who will prove to be a valuable director and treasurer. The complete slate of officers is as follows:

Chaplain, Very Rev. Dean Culliname; Past President, Mrs. Oscar La Valles; President, Mrs. John Gehan; First Vice-President, Mrs. Norman Champagne; Second Vice-President, Mrs. Matt. Cassidy; Third Vice-President, Mrs. Fred Rivers; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Chas. Dion; press convener, Mrs. A. B. Craigen; Red Cross convener, Mrs. C. J. Quinn; convener of literature, Mrs. Abrams, Mrs. Fred Rashotte; Mrs. Louis Mayew; Mrs. Aloysius Trudeau, Mrs. Malicka Cassidy, Mrs. Wm. Rivers; committee to visit the sick and new members, to collect fees, etc., in their respective, districts, Mrs. Jos. Gehan, Mrs. Jos. St. Rivers, Mrs. A. Dion, Mrs. N. Champagne, Mrs. Chas. The April meeting of Johnstown W.A., was held at the home of the President, Mrs. Earl Harry, on Wednesday. The program consisted of hymns, several readings, two musical selections by Miss Anna Grant, a sketch entitled by the hostess and a brief business period. It was decided the next meeting would be Thanksgiving Day to be held at the home of Mrs. Glen Stickle. Contents of the travelling basket were disposed of and very delicious refreshments were served by the hostess.

Career Girl's Beauty Hints

Evelyn Keyes enjoys bathing long walks.

By HELEN POLLETT

IT IS NO trifling matter, this business of keeping fit for the job. Uncle Sam tells you what you should be doing, but do you do it? Do you mind your diet, getting your quota of vitamins and minerals, also? Do you find time for outdoor exercise, so necessary for health, beauty and good looks too? Do you sleep eight hours, awaken refreshed? Good for that and you'll know whether you are being a good girl or not.

The modern girl must have exercise or she will develop the condition of the sedentary office worker. How she sits is important. The wrong posture, continued month after month, year after year, will gradually change the contour of the feminine shape, and not for the better. Also, it will affect the health.

Sitting Posture.

If you sit with the chest contracted, spinal column carrying the wrong curve, lung action and o'clock every afternoon you will have developed a fatigue that your girl is no fun and you feel as old as the hills. The hunnessed pillow that is a "support" for the back. When you join the family circle for that you're as cross as two sticks.

The chair should be of such height that the feet will rest firmly and comfortably on the floor, the knees bent. It should be deep enough to accommodate three-fourths of the length of the thighs, fitting on the edge of the seat across the upper third of the body forward, and invites rounded shoulders and a protruding tummy.

Avoiding Double Chin.

The typist must form the habit of sitting erect holding her head high, her shoulders down, and she will take on fiddle strings and an extra chin that spells disaster. Also the neck muscles aren't on the job of supporting the head—which weighs about eighteen pounds, by the way—they become like washed out elastic and lose resiliency.

The sagging bust is often the result of poor posture muscles and tissues that have kept the human form give way to a state of inertia.

BEAUTY By HELEN JAMESON

Personality in Dress

It's fun to match in the fashion parade. It keeps up the spirits and starts the circulation. But even in the parade one doesn't want to look exactly like everybody else. There's nothing very exciting about standardized dress.

A woman of discernment individuality, good taste and a keen sense of humor will say:

"All right, Madame Fashion. I thank you for your offerings. If I look them over and accept what makes an appeal, I've given a lot of thought to color and line, two interesting subjects, don't I know that's nothing very exciting about standardized dress."

Some foolish women believe that with enough money they can go on costly dry goods, expensive coiffures and have done to the limit—a little do-dads that contribute to appearance but not to style. Don't be well. The wise woman knows better. She is chosen for her poise and self analysis. What satisfied many women may not please her at all. She has studied her personality individually in dress. She has made a study of passing styles, knows what freaky hats and queerly-cut garments have done to the feminine contingent. What she seeks is verve and distinction.

Time was when women looked like so many paper dolls; they all wore the same hats, coats and suits.

Don't be afraid to be different, my paper friend. Of course you still mustn't be different in a passe way; drab colors, and you feel drab.

Women who cling to old styles because they fancy they are becoming are remote from the mode. They forget that what is out of style is no longer becoming; that is particularly true of the ruffles. What one must do is to size up prevailing fashions, adjust them to one's type, figure and activities.

The short skirt is smart. It's cute on the young things, and on slender well-formed women. But there should be a limit to short dresses. When a woman of sixty or seventy displays her knees, sports enacted legs that are no treat to the eye, she is out of her picture. Looking at the wrinkled face and the grey hair one wonders why she doesn't do better. That adds to her attractiveness. Let her dress be short, but not five inches below the knee and she looks like a fool in her teens. With less display of legs, there will be a greater display of taste.

One woman can use heavy eye shadows and appear interesting and attractive. Another with less exotic type, will just look silly with dark eyes and lashes. There can be no set dress-and-beauty formulas for the sisters.

It all comes down to this: be yourself. Develop the fine sense by using the full-length mirror; in plain words, use your head.

If you have a fine figure don't fear, fight it. Gay colors have a fascination effect upon one's life. Wear

Drink DELICIOUS VI-TONE it builds you up!

The Marry Go Round

Husband—Before and After Taking. The very first sign of summer is a girl in a flowered garden-hat. The second is a man carrying home a new set of garden tools and a can of oil for the lawnmower. The third is Daddy putting up the fly-screens. A married man is one who can tell his wife whether or not her new hat is becoming (if she asks him), without bothering to glance up from his newspaper. He has all the answers—"Fine!" "Nice." "All right, Honey!"

The Biggest Race Problem, says Cynical Sybil, is the race a man puts up when he thinks a girl is trying to catch him—object matrimony!

Considering the way two young people save and struggle to get a home together before they marry you would never imagine they'd be so sure as the Curfew Law which forces them to get into it by midnight, would you?

I have sometimes wondered if that marrying parson down yonder didn't really have something when he concluded every wedding service with "I now pronounce you man and wife—and may God have mercy on your souls!"

The Perfect Husband says Cynical Sybil, is the one who makes himself scarce when little ray of sunshine around the house all day Sunday, but his wife is broken-hearted because he has to go back to his office on Monday morning. He's a combining of a rara avis; so if you have one, treasure him!

When Joy Beal is sad always wants to lay it away in the casket of memory with flowers, tears and a last rites, but a man doesn't care how or where his dead romances are buried, just so they STAY dead.

Courtship is into a hasty marriage in order to forget an unhappy love-affair, or to escape a foolish entanglement is like running in front of a truck in order to dodge a taxicab. But that's what so many men do in war-time.

Marriage will never be perfect until we stop trying to make it an "ideal," and begin trying to make it a square deal.

U.S. HORSE RACING BAN CONTINUED

Washington, April 18. (AP) — There will be no lifting of the ban in the United States on horse racing, the midnight curfew or the throwout in the "foreseeing" future, President Truman said today.

He added that he had some reservations had, in his opinion, been good for the morale of the country.

RESCUED FROM CAMP

Stockholm, April 18 (AP)—Hyrind Bergqvist, Bishop of Oslo, was rescued from Internment in his home Monday night by twenty Norwegian Patriots who overpowered the Swedish Press reported yesterday. The Bishop had been a prisoner for three years at Asker, outside of Oslo, after he protested the quisling government's Youth Policy.

Sees Women as Asset In Consular Service

By ADELAIDE KERR
(Canadian Press Writer)

New York, April 18.—(AP)—Look into the Port York British consulate any day and you will see history in the making in a corner.

Stately gray-haired Miss Mary Hastings, acting vice consul and the first woman career trade officer to reach that rank, often title holds the word "acting" because England is making no fresh appointments to her foreign service during the war.)

Miss Hastings, clear-skinned, grey-eyed and fresh from Oxford, does not mean herself when she says that she is making history. But her boss knows it.

Said Consul-General Francis Evans, his dimensions quite the other day:

"Some time ago Anthony Eden said that the principle of the employment of women in the foreign service by the higher grades is accepted by the government. This appointment while not a big step in itself, presages a new role for women in the British foreign service. Women have something to give this service as a nation. In the matter of welfare and the tactful handling of many social problems, they are particularly capable. Many people come to the consul for help and advice, and the British consulate has come to the relief of distress, women have a less formal and more sympathetic approach to the problem of human relationships.

In Commercial Work.

"Women should also be valuable in commercial work. Our future, our very existence hangs on our foreign trade and the consular service usually aids its nationals in introducing their products to foreign countries. England produces a lot of things—pottery, textiles, linens, to name a few—which are of interest to Americans. Women in the consular service, who would understand the point of view of those potential buyers, could be of great service to the producers, would be of particular value in the consular economic work. We'll start her at that one of these days."

Right now Miss Hastings is working in the general department of the consulate, dealing with passports, travel questions, notarial matters and general inquiries. She was born in the Malay States where her father practiced law. She returned with her family to England for schooling while still a youngster. At 18 she entered Somerville College at Oxford and for two years studied modern languages. Thereafter she applied to the Civil Service Commission and took an appointment to foreign service, entered the consular service in London last August and at the first of the year came to America. At the end of a year's foreign service, she will be entitled to various Oxford degree.

Miss Hastings, quiet-mannered and self-possessed, will be 21 in June and in a sense typifies the young British woman on war service.

What does her generation want to do in the post-war world?

"I don't know—I'm sure yet," she said gravely. "I don't think they would want to be a part of the Civil Service as they are. One thing I feel sure of they have a feeling that they have the right to everything going and as far as their own lives are concerned they want the right to decide".

Bid Farewell To Residents

3RD SIDNEY

3rd Sidney—A farewell gathering was held on Saturday evening, April 14, for Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Saylor and Mrs. Palmer, who have sold their farm and are leaving in the near future to reside in their home on the Belleville Road.

Mr. Fred Woodcock acted as master of ceremonies, extending regret at the loss of Mr. and Mrs. Saylor and Mrs. Palmer from the neighborhood, and also extending a welcome to Mr. and Mrs. Bellamy and Mrs. Hollinger, who had moved in that week.

Mr. Saylor responded.

An address of appreciation was read by Mrs. Everett Rubick, on behalf of the community, Mr. and Mrs. Saylor and Mrs. Palmer were presented with a walnut occasional table and tray.

During the years they have lived on the 3rd of Sidney, where they came as bride and groom 23 years ago, Mr. and Mrs. Saylor have taken an active part in the community and social life of the community. Their home has been the centre of many social gatherings. Floral tribute was paid to Mrs. Palmer, who has been living with her daughter for the past two years, and who with her many fine qualities has endeared herself to everyone.

Mr. and Mrs. Saylor and Mrs. Palmer will be greatly missed from the Sunday School, Church and the Women's Institute, and the Aikens' community where they have proved themselves worthy citizens.

Canadian Colonel Admits Knees Shook During Interview with Hun C.O.

By DOUGLAS AMARON
(CP War Correspondent)

With the Canadians in Groeningen, Holland, April 18 — (CP Cable) —The Canadian Colonel who commands Les Fusiliers Mont-Royal said today his knees were shaking when for 10 minutes he discussed surrender terms with the German garrison commander at Groeningen.

The Canadians fought for two days through the streets of northeastern Holland's largest city and by noon yesterday the German defence was becoming disorganized. Close to 2,000 prisoners had been taken and most of the city was overrun.

The adjutant of the German garrison came to the Canadian lines and told the 25-year-old commander of the F.M.R. that his colonel wanted to talk business. The Montreal colonel, a private in his unit five years ago, agreed to go to the garrison commander's headquarters.

"Mad Jimmy" as the French-speaking officer is affectionately known to his officers, said: "I am not ashamed to say that I was frightened. I went into the building with my hands in my pockets to impress the Germans. There were about 100 officers and men there. I walked up the stairs and my legs were shaking. A German full colonel was there and I saluted him smartly and he saluted back. I lighted a cigarette but didn't offer him one."

The F.M.R. commander told the Germans that the Canadians had captured four lieutenant-colonels earlier in the morning.

The German commander couldn't believe that these other senior officers were prisoners so the F. M. R. colonel offered to drive him to Canadian headquarters so he could see for himself. He agreed to this and after a chat with the German lieutenant-colonels, he said he would surrender.

Organized resistance in Groeningen ended 12 hours sooner than the Canadians expected and casualties were much lighter than anticipated. The F.M.R. and the South Saskatchewan Regiment, of Estevan, who cleared the heart of the city, had one man killed between them. The wounded were not numerous.

'Barbarous and Appalling Atrocities' By Japs Cited in McArthur Report

Washington, April 18 — (AP) — The Japanese were accused of "barbarous and appalling atrocities" during the defence of Manila in a report by Gen. MacArthur released by the United States War Department.

A summary of the report, which said it was based on documented evidence and sworn testimony, charged that babies were "repeatedly stabbed and slashed with bayonets, even in their mother's arms; women and young girls were violated . . ."

The report was issued as Brig-Gen. Carlos P. Romulo went before the House of Representatives to recite a grisly account of Japanese atrocities in the Philippines.

Hundreds of persons, the MacArthur statement declared, were soaked and soaked in gasoline "or encircled with blazing fuel."

"Survivors report that the Japanese mocked and laughed at their victims," the statement added.

Daily to Reveal Deeds

The report was issued by the war department with the explanation that such "heinous" acts are normally considered improper for detailed disclosure but that the department had a duty to reveal to the United States and the world "these deliberate atrocities."

Many instances of alleged atrocities were cited:

"Men between the ages of 16 and 50 were ordered seized and shot down. Execution parties moved from house to house with hand grenades, and torches. Hundreds were packed into dungeons to perish of starvation and suffocation."

Proofs Furnished

In an address before the House of Representatives, Gen. Romulo, Philippine Resident Commissioner who recently returned from the Islands, presented as part of his task officially collected affidavits and photographs. He said they provided proof "of the complete destruction of Manila, and the premeditated, systematic massacre of its civilian population under orders of the Japanese supreme command."

"Manila is dead," Romulo asserted, "and Tokyo must die — not in reprisal but as a defence measure necessary to insure Pacific peace."

"No human dignity is left to the pitiful carcasses that sicken the air over the ruins of a city that was once the pride of the Orient," Gen. Romulo said. "They are but evidence, rotten and indivisible in death of loyalty between two worlds. The men and women and the babies who died with them, were butchered under orders of the Japanese command because as Filipinos they represented loyalty to America."

BIG CROWDS ATTEND

New York, April 18 — (AP) — A total of 101,593 fans attended yesterday's eight opening games of the major league baseball season, a drop of 18,743 from the 121,336 who turned out for seven games on opening day a year ago. The biggest gathering, 30,009, was at Crosley Field, Cincinnati, for the Pirates, Reds clash.

SEVEN TEAMS AFFILIATE IN BASBALL LOOP

Belleville Baseball League Names Four New Faces to League Executive, All Experienced Heads

Seven clubs definitely affiliated with the Belleville Baseball League President Jack McVeigh announced today. The teams associated with the return of the diamond game in Belleville include—American Optical, Brown's Bread (Juniors), Corby's A.C., Reliance and Stewart-Warner-Alemite in Belleville, Bata A.C., and "Doc" Empson's Latta "Combines".

Secretary Ernie Summers announced from an executive meeting the names of four local men to the league executive, being Walt Gerow, J. N. Yanover, W. J. Dennis and Principal Wm. Turner of the B.C.I. & V.S. all experienced baseball executives.

The league voted to open their season on May 24th and all local games will be played at the new Alemite Field on Pine Street, obtained through the courtesy of L. A. Young, general manager of the Stewart-Warner-Alemite Corporation. The league will erect a new backstop and bleachers along the third and first base lines for the comfort of baseball fans. President McVeigh informed the league executive a campaign to raise funds for the operation of the league's business would be made in the near future in an effort to restore baseball to its former position in the sporting life of Belleville.

Cy Young was named umpire-in-chief and each club was requested to submit the names of two qualified umpires and an experienced scorekeeper to act at all games. Walt Gerow was named chairman of the rules and playing committee, while J. L. Irwin was named honorary vice president of the league. When completed the new Alemite Field is expected to be one of the most modern and up-to-date baseball plants in Eastern Ontario with many modern innovations to be afforded the game.

JUAN ZURITA TO DEFEND TITLE

Mexico City, April 18 (AP)—Making his first title defence since he beat Sammy Angott for the crown more than a year ago, Juan Zurita of Mexico City risks his N.B.A. lightweight championship tonight against Ike Williams of Trenton, N.J.

A near-capacity crowd of some 30,000 is expected to watch the scrap in the Mexico city building. On this basis, with ringside seats priced at $20, promoter Sam Rosoff estimated gross receipts at $100,000.

Zurita remained the favorite. His speed was expected to help him counter Williams' punching power. Although over the weight limit of 135 pounds during most of his training, scaled 134 yesterday. Williams weighed 133.

Sports Roundup

(By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.)

New York, April 18. (AP)—When Rookie Red Lanfersieck of Toledo Mud Hens got is only chance at the plate in a recent practice game against Dyersburg, Tenn., army team, he was hit by a pitched ball. . . .Red Refused to take his base, insisting on a chance to hit. When he won that argument, he clouted a triple . after the inning ended the pitcher, Lieut. Jim Payne came to the press bench and exclaimed: "Hey, you guys aren't going to let him get away with that, are you? I apologized for hitting him, but don't think that entitled him to hit the next pitch for three bases". . . .

New Orleans boxing writers and fans are arguing whether Bernard Docsuen, 17-year-old welterweight sensation, should be required to fight more than six rounds. In some states he couldn't even get a licence at that age.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By FRED KERNER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Toronto, April 18 (CP)—Thanks to Canadian boys in the R.C.A.F. that little island nation up in the North Atlantic, Iceland, has become very sport conscious.

The boys in the air force who have been to Iceland claim it was a tough posting, but according to a recent letter written by Flt. Lt. Alf Parkes to Bill (Moncton Thanscript) Hutchison, it doesn't seem to be so bad after all.

According to what Alf says the island is sport conscious, with skiing taking first place. The runs are mountainous and one must be an accomplished skier—or else. Incidentally, Alf wasn't accomplished enough. Soon after he wrote about Iceland's sport activities he fractured an ankle and pulled several tendons in his knee when he attempted to ski over a bed of lava.

The R.C.A.F. has supplied the boys with plenty of equipment and has outfitted three ski lodges on the island. Next in line of popularity is hockey—as if you couldn't guess. (We imagine a few odd scores are settled when officer teams play other-ranks squads.)

The main rink is on a pond in the heart of Reykjavik and the puck game has attracted swarms of natives. From all appearances hockey has taken there and it may not be many years before we hear of organized loops on the island.

Another ice game that the flying laddies have introduced to Iceland is the ancient and respected game of curling. And with a huge gymnasium set up containing all the necessary equipment there is hot competition among boxers, badminton players, basketball teams, floor hockey teams and what have you.

Who said life in Iceland was dull?

Credit's Due:

From a very modest beginning the Maple Athletic Club of Edmonton has developed into an organization which wields a potent influence on the lives of many of that city's young citizens.

The club grew out of the original Edmonton Boy Scout League which was reorganized in 1930 and though the war years have had their effect, the club has been able to operate successfully ever since. During the season just ended, the club sponsored 11 hockey teams that gave 160 boys playing experience—an effort worthy of the highest commendation.

Odds-and-Ending:

Ken Charlton, gridder and puck star from Regina, is being mentioned as a possible with Chicago Black Hawks next season....Angelo Torti, of Brantford, Ont., turned out with St. Louis Cardinals for a pitching tryout....A new six-team ladies fastball loop has been formed on the Pacific Coast, with a pair of teams each from Portland, Seattle and Vancouver...Hamilton's football Wildcats are considering sponsoring a junior grid loop this fall.

Service Dept.

Brig.-Gen John J. Phelan of the New York Boxing Commission has just received word that his stepson, Lt.-Col. Richard Mattern died on Saipan, April 5. . . It's Hal (Merriwell) Wagner now at Camp Blanding, Fla, where the former Red Sox catcher is on duty at a prisoner of war base camp. Fresh off a furlough, Pte. Wagner played on a Jacksonville Victory League game and socked a homer to break a tie in the ninth inning.

DEATH RATE OF WOUNDED REDUCED TO ONE PER CENT

Toronto, April 17 — (CP) — The death rate of wounded men has been reduced from 15 per cent in the First Great War to one per cent in the present conflict, Dr. F. W. Routley, national commissioner of the Canadian Red Cross Society, yesterday told the Ontario Division at its annual meeting.

BALTIMORE NEEDS MOUND HELP TO BE REPEATER

Cleveland Indians, the Parent Club, Have Already Helped in This Respect

By HUGH TRADER, Jr.
(Baltimore News-Post and American Sport Writer)

Baltimore, Md., April 18—(AP)—Chances of Baltimore Orioles—1944 Little World Series winners — for repeating this year depend on the amount of mound assistance they receive from the parent Cleveland Indians.

The Tribe already has optioned Bobo Palica and George Mooks to the Birds and the former could be one of the loop's leaders, a potential 20-game winner to take up the pitching slack caused by Red Embree's graduation to the American League. Palica won 14 games last season and he wasn't with the Orioles the first month of the campaign.

Lose Seven Players

Despite the loss of seven regulars from last year's cast, the team will have good hitting and fielding strength. Absent is the regular outfield trio of Howie Moss, Stan Benjamin and Felix Mackewicz, but the Orioles have good replacements.

Jim Tropea, coast guard dischargee, a left-handed sticker, hits to all fields with power, and is a ball hawk. Joe Mellendick, formerly owned by Washington and a top hitter with Chattanooga until he injured his leg two years ago, has looked impressive in camp. He was one of the strongest throwing arms in the league.

That still leaves outfielders Pat Riley, a holdover; Al Barillari, a promising hitter from Wilmington; and Eddie Subol, former army sergeant who has more power than anybody in the club.

The infield has three regulars from last year's championship club. Bob Latshaw, clever first sacker, is back with little Kenny Braun at short and Frank Skaff a fixture at third.

Behind the plate is Sherman Lollar, regarded as the loop's No. 1 catcher. He is one of the club's outstanding hitters and last year led all the catchers in the league in runs batted in.

Then there is Ralph (Red) Kress who, in spite of his 38 years can still play lots of baseball, and anywhere on the field. Red served as Burleigh Grimes' coach at Toronto last season.

What's Doing in Sport

(By The Canadian Press.)

Canadian senior basketball title contenders are rapidly getting to the finals. At St. Catharines last night the Merritton Hayes Hellcats beat Montreal Georgians 82-42, to take the eastern title in two straight games, in which they amassed a scoring margin of 165-83. Hellcats guard Bob Gauchet gave a brilliant individual scoring display to net 42 points.

The western senior final is between the Union Jacks of Raymond, Alta., and the Vancouver representatives. Last night at Raymond the Union Jacks entered the western final with a 44-31 victory over Winnipeg St. Andrew's, their second straight victory.

In the intermediate ranks University of New Brunswick took the Canadian title at Fredericton last night by beating Toronto West End Y.M.C.A. 49-47. U.N.B. had won the first game 59-24 and thus took the round 108-71.

The semi-finals of the Dominion juvenile playdowns finished at Montreal last night where Montreal Y.M.H.A. beat Pembroke Zephyrs 76-27, winning the round by 144-59.

The hockey Maple Leafs leave Toronto today for Detroit where they hope to finish the Stanley Cup final in the fifth game Thursday night. Leafs lead the eight-point series by 6-2, fashioned on three victories against one defeat. Coach Hap Day said last night he hopes Leafs will "finish the job" Thursday.

At New York the city director of Selective Service, Col. A. F. McDermott, announced last night that R. (Sugar) Robinson, acknowledged uncrowned king of the welterweights, has been found physically fit for military service. Robinson had been discharged from the army last summer and has since resumed his fistic career. He was called up for re-examination and he may be taken back in the army in the May quota.

Ray. Mack, Cleveland Indians' second baseman for five years, yesterday was inducted in the army at Cleveland. Mack played part-time ball last season but did not report to the club this spring. He has been employed in a war plant.

The official starting list for Thursday's 49th annual Boston marathon was increased to 88 yesterday. One of the last to be added was Silas McLellan of Noel, N.S., the 11th Canadian to enter this year's race. Only former winner entered is Johnny Kelley of West Acton, Mass., who scored in 1935.

NEW CANADIAN

Wilbur "Toar" Morgan, the U.S. Marine from Tennessee who knocked off 34 Japs before being wounded himself on Guadalcanal in the opening days of the Pacific war, is now residing in Lindsay. He married a lassie from the Scugog River town and likes being referred to as a Canadian. However, Morgan is in a difficult spot tonight at the Hume Arena when he meets Bob "Strangler" Wagner, the Portland Octopus, in the semi-final go of a three-bout wrestling card. The principle bout is a return match between Nanjo Singh and Red Vagnone following a draw match last week. This time ample time is given these two top-ranking grapplers, as the time limit has been extended to 90 minutes. Collins meets Dempsey to open the show.

Paul Derringer, Cubs — Stopped world champion St. Louis Cardinals with seven hits in Chicago's 3-2 triumph.

CASUAL COMMENT by K.J.C.

Vell, could he?

Two Jews were in business together, Cohen and Rosenstein. The latter had been getting drunk of late and letting business go by the boards. So Cohen threatened—"The next time Rosenstein comes in drunk I'm going to shoot him". So he put a pistol in his pocket and settled back to wait for his partner. Pretty soon Rosenstein came in, pretty drunk as usual. Cohen pulled the pistol in Rosenstein's face.

Rosey blinked and said — "How much for the gun you want?"

"Now, I ask of you, why for should I kill a man when he talking beesness?"

Here We Go Again—

Seems the rules committee of the Canadian Amateur (?) Hockey Association held a pow wow in Toronto the other day at which the time-honored practice of changing the playing rules was again brought up. Whenever the players, referees and sometimes the fans begin to understand a new code of playing rules, invariably the rules committee decide it's time for a change, which brings up the question: "will hockey ever set up a uniform set of playing rules and let them stand?"

The C.A.H.A. moguls now propose to eliminate the centre red line altogether and reduce the present 60 centre ice area from 60 to 36 feet. They claim this will "give the defending team increased space in which to manoeuvre."

(It was only a few seasons ago they were trying to open up the game in order to have more goals scored. Rather inconsistent, what?)

Tom Lockhart, of the United States Amateur Hockey League, says they tried this new plan and it was accepted as "an improvement". All of this is fine but why not draft playing rules once and for all and instruct officials to enforce them? Every other competitive team sport played has a uniform set of rules, which are abided by and not changed every season. Hockey would increase its popularity by adopting a similar program instead of continually confusing all concerned by the constant changing of the rules.

The suggestion also included removal of the red penalty shot lines and an increase in the area behind the net from 10 to 13 feet. The goal line would be extended across the rink and substituted for the penalty shot line in the rule covering icing the puck.

This would mean that if the defending team shot the puck the length of the ice, it would have to pass their opponents' goal line instead of the penalty shot line before being considered "icing."

Around the Town—

AB. Bert Noakes, who did a turn at pitching ball for Belleville and later joined the House of David before the war, is home enjoying a 42 day furlough . . . Bert has been at sea with the Canadian Navy for upwards to two years and hopes to get in the odd ball game in the City League while home, but local ball clubs shouldn't hasten to sign the elongated righthander as he's slated to rejoin his shipmates the latter part of May . . . Executive members of the Ladies Softball League are satisfied at least three local senior gals' team sponsors will be willing to foster girls' softball among the teen-aged school lassies in order to assist in the replenishment of material for years to come . . . 'Tis rumored Johnnie Bawden will pitch for the SACO "Marines" next summer, thus eliminating Skipper Max Peoples' worries, regarding the loss of Jim Hunter . . . For those interested in men's softball the Belleville Softball League will hold its annual meeting and election of officers at the AAJMAA Club tonight . . . This conclave should be over in time for the boys to take in the return bout between Nanjo Singh and Red Vagnone at the Market St. sports palace . . . Never missing a bet, Promoter Frank Tunney signed this pair to a rematch over the 90 minute route tonight.

Remember when—

Glamorous Kid McCoy of the boxing world, committed suicide five years ago tonight to end an amazing career in which he was everything from a hobo to a millionaire sportsman, including middleweight boxing champion of the world, movie actor and convict. Married nine times, three of them to the same woman, he crowded a lot of life into his 66 years.

Questions and Answers—

A reader wants to know if an indoor foot runner can travel 440 yards faster than a swimmer can travel 100 yards? . . . The answer is yes, but it would be a lot closer than most folks might suppose... Yale's Allan Ford set a free style swimming record of 49.7 last March while Runner Roy Cochran set an indoor record for the quarter at 48.2 that has stood for the last 3 years . . . And here's still another poser . . . Can an eight-oared rowing crew travel four miles faster than a runner can travel the same route? . . . Again the answer in yes, with reservations . . . It depends on the strength of the river current . . . Don Lash set an American record for the four mile run of 19:17.3 . . . That is lower than the best time registered in the Harvard-Yale boat race on the four mile Thames River course at New London, but several Poughkeepsie regatta winners have bettered 19 minutes on the faster Hudson River course.

BERLIN, GOAL IN ALLIED RACE

Battling fiercely to establish their bridgeheads across the Elbe river, Ninth Army spearhead troops are fighting on Berlin. Of all the Allied armies now in the west, the Ninth appears to be the one that will reach the German capital first. In the north, the Canadian First Army has established a bridgehead across the Aller river and is pushing on to the Berlin-Second Army heads for Hamburg. The U. S. First Army, battling below the Ruhr, is near Leipzig and a possible junction with the Russians is driving from the east. The American Seventh Army is pushing toward Nuremberg. The French First Army is advancing west of Stuttgart.

LESSON NO. 038
By JOHN GORDON
The Kibitzer

The world abounds with no-trump hounds who do not wait to know that when you have a suit to bid, that suit you first should show. Slip into this deal, South:

NORTH
♠ A Q J 2
♥ K 3 2
♦ 4
♣ 6 5 4
WEST	EAST
♠ 5 4	♠ K 10 9 8
♥ 9 8 7 3	♥ 10 5
♦ Q 9 8	♦ 6 5 3 2
♣ J 10 9 6 2	♣ K 7 5
SOUTH
♠ 7 6 3
♥ A Q J
♦ A K J 10
♣ A 3

The bidding should go like this:

SOUTH	NORTH
1 D	1 S
1 NT	2 NT
3 NT	Pass

Although Ochead prefers to open that sound hand with one no-trump. Even with a biddable suit, he bids no-trump with a balanced hand.

Such an opening would be wrong, of course. But why start off by bridge player is stubborn, no argument seems to change him. In this case, however, any opening would end at three no-trump.

What, then, with such an opening lead of the club Jack. When dummy with the good seven, declarer has only seven clinch tricks with two clubs, two top diamonds, two top hearts, and a top spade.

By finessing spades and diamonds, he can develop in each of those suits. But while operating on those finesses, opponents are plugging away at their club suit. Sounder that.

When east wins with the club king on first trick, it is a temptation to try that trick. But declarer should hold up. His hope is that east may run out of clubs after two rounds of that suit.

When, east wins with the king and returns a club, south wins with club queen and leads a spade. If loses to east who is now void in clubs. So the club suit is still protected.

Thereafter, south can take the diamond finesse without risk, even though the diamond finesse loses, south can run enough trick before losing any more club tricks.

The purpose of bidding is to land an optimum contract. Bidding that dangerous suit when he gets in trouble, south cannot arrest you for that kind of a holdup.

AT THE BELLE

Marine Raiders—Romantic

Latest romantic duo to reach the screen is that of Robert Ryan and Ruth Hussey, who handle the unusually appealing love interest in "Marine Raiders," RKO Radio's stirring picture of the famous Corps. They share starring honors with Pat O'Brien in the film now on the Belle screen.

Falcon in Hollywood

The debonair sleuth, The Falcon (portrayed by Tom Conway) is on vacation when murder once again engages his attention in RKO Radio's "The Falcon in Hollywood," the second feature attraction.

Crashing the gates of a movie studio in pursuit of a beauteous film actress, The Falcon discovers the body of an actor on one of the actine stages. In spite of being hampered by studio cops motion picture producers and directors who want to get on with their picture-making, The Falcon runs the murderer to earth and pins two murders on him.

Hedy Lamarr—"The Conspirators"

Warner Brothers' latest dramatic account of romance, adventure and violence, with a background of neutral Lisbon in a World War II town, next at the Belle Theatre. The film is "The Conspirators" and it stars Hedy Lamarr and Paul Henreid.

Lisbon, Portugal, made fascinating and dangerous by the lure of refugee and spies from a war torn continent, makes a dazzling backdrop for this timely picturization of romance and adventure. Besides Hedy Lamarr and Paul Henreid who supply the love interest in the cast, further exciting shinister characterizations to the various parts are done by screen veterans in international intrigue—Peter Lorre, Sydney Greenstreet and Victor Francen, appropriately cast as shadowy members of the European underground. Clever, too, is the youthful Warner starlet, constellation an effective portrayal of a Portuguese fishermaid who provides succor to the hunted Paul Henreid. Joseph Calleia and Edward Cianelli are also in evidence as scrupulous Portuguese police official and trouble-burdened Portuguese General, respectively.

St. Louis Browns Knock off Hal Newhouser of Detroit To Feature Baseball Opening

Ninth Time in Succession Beverly Cox Has Won an Opening Day

By JACK HAND
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

Nine straight opening day victories for St. Louis Browns was the record hooks today as a companion piece to their 1944 feat of copping a first American League pennant.

Luke Sewell's gang took up where they left off a year ago by knocking off Detroit, a habit that paid big dividends in winning their first flag when they did it 19 time in 22 starts.

Hal Newhouser was the victim of the Brownies' 7-1 uprising as Big Jakiski allowed only six well-scattered hits.

Chill weather held the Sportsman's Park turnout to 7,438 4,187, smallest in the 43-year-old war-like story throughout the big league opener the eight opener drew only 101,895—considerably below the 1945 mark.

One-armed Pete Gray, the most publicized rookie of the off season, came into the action for the Browns with a single and was credited with handling a drive for a catch by Roger Cramer.

Standout individual performance of the opener was turned in by New York Yankees' first baseman starting his first full season in the big show. Dorrey belted two homers in his debut as Yankees won 5-3 over Red Sox.

Lloyd Kalkovich, ex- foot first baseman, set a new league standard for pinch hitters as the Cubs' he committed three errors in the same seventh inning.

The Boy's Hobby

Frankie Kilroy of Hinsbergh pridded the day's entire during the game with Cincinnati, up by the Reds 1-0 in the second inning. Kilroy's mother came united and he asked and received permission to leave school to Ziggie Sears, Pitcher Bucky Walters' didn't have to go to the park to see the game, run ball to Jim Russell but it was all clinallowed.

Bill Voiselle of the Reds into the game with a base-loaded situation in the fifth inning and struck out the side, before 30,000, the day's biggest crowd.

Hal Ott set six new records while his New York Giants were defeating Boston Braves 10-5 before 34,000 with the same club. Ott broke a record held by Babe Ruth when he led in a run, drew a walk, slammed a long double, scored on an extra base on a long single.

Bill Voiselle, Reds' rookie hurler is the first pitcher of the season but picked up wild No. 1 over Al Javery, South Carolina rookie. Catcher Joe Mack and Chuck Workman hit for the circuit.

Veteran Curt Davis and rookie Willis Sandford teamed up for Brooklyn's 2-1 victory over the Phillies. Davis allowed eight hits and came through with a homer. Sandford allowed five hits.

Joe Kuhel and rookie George Fisha each connected safely four times in Washington's 10-7 massacre of Philadelphia's Athletics. Newsom, ex-Yankee, allowed five hits.

Timely Chicago hitting combined with Cleveland defensive misters, gave Thornton Lee the verdict over Chief Reynolds in a 5-2 game played before 30,000 at Cleveland.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was smoking to himself in his private chair and I was starting to do my homework feeling against it, and I said to pop, Av heck, pop, I have to memorize a darn poem, and it's hard as anything, because if you just leave out one word, it changes the whole sound.

That's a very good observation, it proves you are already developing an appreciation for poetry, pop said.

People without any role for poetry can leave out words, or even sinses, and never notice the differences, if you had a real appreciation of poetry you'd see poetry in everything, and they'd be one of the happiest of mortals. Every little poem from a sonnet on down would be transformed with a new beauty. For instance you would be seeing poetry right at this moment in the very fact that you have to memorize a poem, he said, and I said, aw, gimminy, pop, how could it?

By the way, a beautiful thoughts, pop said. You would think so yourself if you knew words, words. They flutter and fly like birds. And so to every little word I say, you should be just what I call attention.

Standing all right but still not making me feel like doing my homework, pop, I said. Can you suppose I tried it and it came out the wrong way, suppose it came out the way it sounds like Ziggie Sears. Pitcher Bucky Walters' didn't have to go to the park to see the game, run ball to Jim Russell but it was all cinallowed.

HARDY VISUALIZES "WORLD SERIES" FOR AMATEURS

Would Involve Teams From Canada, U. S., Britain and Scandinavia

By EDDIE LEE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, April 8—(CP)—Mockeyite Dr. W. G. Hardy of Edmonton, confessed sports enthusiast and lawyer's post-war future, today visualized an amateur "world series" involving teams from Canada, United States, England and Scotland.

Plans for the scrip will be formulated next fall by the International Ice Hockey Association, annual hockey international governing body which Dr. Hardy heads.

"It such a world championship series can be arranged, it would surely be flown from the various parts of the world to take part," Dr. Hardy told The Canadian Press in an interview.

Canada, United States, England and Scotland were already represented in the international association. Other nations would be added as developments dictated.

Dr. Hardy said he expects to see "great development" of hockey after the war, and is preparing to put forward raising of Canada for players was already prepared.

Transfer Fee

"The Association proposes to allow not more than one player from any one club in Canada to transfer to any club outside the country without consent of the club and the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association in which it is located.

He sketched this blueprint of hockey's post-war future:

Ten Canadian clubs operating on the U. S. Pacific coast. An amateur one-league in Canada to match Chicago area. The Michigan-Ontario League to provide the home front. Minnesota and North Dakota league, plan to operate. Attentions were also being given to organization of clubs in Scandinavia in connection with officials in Edmonton for a European tour. Canada's team will give any opposite across the border Tuesday.

In Europe, England and Scotland took an average of 60 Canadian players, Dr. Hardy said. Over There were two all-Canadian teams in Paris — Les Rapides and Les Voltigeurs.

Open to Retards

Discussing undeveloped growth in the British Isles and Europe, Dr. Hardy said:

"A great deal of hockey has been played in Scandinavia and Switzerland. Belgium and Holland have had a few games, but Germany has shown little interest and it seems likely that a large part of the country will be out of ice for a number of years to come."

Dr. Hardy said he was concern; ill self with relationships between six members — at present the C.A.H.A., Canadian representatives of the U.S. and the British Ice Hockey Association, and the International Olympics on player transfers. Unless these are settled, Canada will be stripped of players."

FROM BRITAIN SPORT SHORTS

By ALLAN NICKLESON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, April 11, (CP) — Freddie Mills, world light-heavy boxing champion, left the country and the British light-heavyweight championship was frozen until his return.

Freddie, a physical training corporal in the R.A.F., left for Paris to expects to be abroad at least three years on service duties. The posting was unexpected. Mills had hoped to sign the Gunnish Boxing Board of Control.

Mills' departure upset principally the plans of Bruce Woodcock, northern England light-heavyweight champion who stood out as the one British who might have beaten the champion. It was plain that in boxing skill Woodcock rates well above the blubber-and in all his last fights during the last two years he stopped each of his opponents inside half-dozen rounds.

Mills and Woodcock, a 175-pound Doncaster railwayman, both are 26 and never have met in the ring. But when Mills returned he vowed to take Mills' title until the champion's return. For food Mills, a two-pick star, for children was Woodcock's chief rival. Jack London.

Woodcock, 26-year-old former steelworker from the dockyard district of Rotherham, was scheduled to defend his bantam bookings in fight Mills in a return match. The two met last year in the finals of the tourney for British and Empire heavyweight titles and Woodcock, a veteran who had waited years for a title bout, gained a first round knockout. The 5-round decision in a battle that showed the best in the team's of world championship material.

SWEDISH CHILDREN LUCKIEST IN WORLD

London, April 18 (CP) — The Royal Commission on Population asked Mrs. Alva Myrdal, Swedish sociologist, to come to London and give evidence and she told them that children in Sweden are the luckiest in the world.

Herself the mother of three children, Mrs. Myrdal said Sweden has found "the natural desire to have children and has made it a society friendly to children."

Mrs. Myrdal gave hints for boosting the birthrate was started in Sweden, she testified. Important men their wives treated with interest and deference by the public as heroes before and after started, pushing baby carriages for the first time in Sweden's history.

Housing was Friday No. 1 for children and 12,000 special "family houses" were built with extra rentfree bedrooms. The state rebated 36 per cent of the rent for families of three children, 40 per cent for children of four and 70 per cent for large families.

For food the state gave two-price system: food for children was cheaper than food for adults. Maternity bonuses were made universal.

Instead of saying married women have the right to work, Mrs. Myrdal said, Swedish reasoning is that "working women should have the right to marry and have children."

Veterans May Buy Farm Property To Value $6,000

VETERANS MAY etc. WPA

Ottawa, April 18 — (CP) — Discharged servicemen who wish to buy farms or small holdings under provisions of the Veterans Land Act may use up the full $6,000 provided under the act for the purchase of land and buildings, veterans department officials said here.

The officials said that changes made in the act by an order-in-council which is due in the Commons last Friday apply to those who wished to buy either a farm or a small holding. The order-in-council became effective immediately.

Prior to passage of the order, the act provided that a veteran could only spend up to $4,000 for land and buildings and $1,300 for stock and equipment. As a result, each of the order in council is responsible for financing of his own stock and equipment to the total of the $6,000 limit placed on land and buildings.

The majority of land and buildings cost $5,400 there would be only $600 remaining for stock and equipment. Previously, with the limit of $1,300, for stock and equipment remains, even should the cost of land and buildings be $4,300 or less.

NEW ANGLE TO JAP TRICKS

In Israel, Rantura, April 18—(AP) — Japanese tricks on civilians in the heat of the last days of Okinawa battle probably will be holders when they have been using since Guadalcanal, said Gilbert Seldes, writer and critic.

The Japanese dig a hole, cover over the top and camouflage it. Inside, crouching numbers of Japanese hide, with a spy explosive charge strapped to their backs or portable gun to rumble over. When the machine is overhead, the Japanese explode their charges, hoping to blow everything sky high — including themselves.

CHAPTER 12

"Suppose we ask him?"

When Pasquale saw the cigarette-case, he didn't, dash, he cried "Don't tell Rhoda!" Tears stood in his eyes. "She'd never understand."

"Why did you steal it?" demanded Coyle.

"It wasn't really stealing, you know." Pasquale looked at the ingenuousness of "Shot after said everything she had was mine."

"Then, why did you take it, without telling her?"

"It isn't paint without morphine and it cost a lot. I wasn't sure Rhoda would be willing to spend money for it so I never told her. At first, in Cannes, she gave me a bit of money now and then, and her friends bought my paintings at good rates. But Rhoda hadn't so many friends in New York as in Europe. Those she had, didn't seem to want my paintings. Rhoda herself was running short of money and she said I'd have to wait until Kitty married Danbre before I got any from her."

"Morphine is more expensive in New York than Cannes, but I had to have it, so—I began taking things—things that no one would miss particularly, like gold and quartz push buttons for bells and electric lights. But I only got enough to buy a few ounces of it. It doesn't last me very long, especially when it's diluted, with bicarbonate of soda, as it is. Viviana's. The night of Kitty's dance I had a real chance to get something worth while. Everyone else was too busy to notice what I was doing. I slipped into Rhoda's suite and took the cigarette-case. Then I went into Kitty's room and took that diamond ring you found in my room later.

"After I had pocketed the ring, I took the cigarette-case to Viviana. That devil, Viviana, wouldn't take the case. He said I'd have to pawn it—or sell it, and bring him the money. But, I didn't dare sell it or take it to a pawn shop while I was being watched by the police.

"For days I suffered the tortures of the damned. I didn't know any other place in New York where I could get morphine. This afternoon I went back to Viviana's and said, 'There's a detective outside trailing me. If you don't give me the stuff at once I'll go outside and tell him you've a cache of drugs.' He gave me a framed picture and told me there was an ounce in the frame. I swiftly agreed to that now, you won't send me to prison will you?"

"Have you ever studied chemistry, Mr. Pasquale?" inquired Beall.

"No. Why do you ask?"

"I merely wondered if you drank half a Kitty's cocktail at the party, because you knew beforehand that the morphine would make you immune to thermoil?"

"How could I have been absolutely sure of that? I knew that morphine would make me immune?" Pasquale's face broke to a screen of petulance. "You know I wouldn't make a practice like that. Why do you keep hounding me with these ghastly insinuations?" His full, heavy breasted, "I'm going to have a victim, so after Nicholas Danbre had him why he'd broken his rule about never talking to reporters or being photographed! And him why he took such a risk, seeing everyone he was in love with Kitty!"

"Well, wasn't he?" barked Foyle.

"I thought so, when we were all at Cannes, and so did Rhoda. But I'm not so sure now. I suppose you thought Danbre was going to say anything about marrying Kitty right off, and Rhoda and Rhoda couldn't call his bluff?"

"Why did he come to America if it wasn't to be with Kitty?"

"Ah!" Pasquale's smile was suddenly sly. "I'd give you a little hint. A week or before Kitty's dance, Rhoda said I went to the hotel where—Danbre is staying for supper. I—I didn't leave until late. The streets were deserted except for one or two cars—and one of them was at the entrance to the one's apartments where Danbre has his suite. There was a man in it. I—I think it was Don Esteban Dolcoe, Philipe Beautrey y Cordoba, Minister of Foreign Affairs from the Republic of San Fernando."

"So what?"

"Why—I'd do all the thinking for you? Surely you have seen the miniature and you know there is trouble in South America between San Fernando and Monteriorica. Isn't it possible that Danbre's real reason for coming to America was to aid the San Fernando government a secret formula for some new gas or explosive? If the San Fernando people came to see Danbre openly in London, where he lives and where he knows him by sight, the Monteriorique government might have got it and sent some spy to steal the formula."

"Pasquale was retitled by Foyle's smile. "International spies do exist."

"So do research chemists. What country would employ a spy to steal a formula nowadays, when a first-class chemist can reproduce a gas or explosive won after the latest fellow starts using it?"

"But time counts in war," remarked Beall. "Possibly Monteriorique wants the stuff before San Fernando starts using it. In that case, San Fernando might try to hide the very existence of the thing by getting Danbre to stage negotiations in New York, where their representative can see him without attracting attention."

"And where does Kitty Jocelyn come in?"

"Well..." Pasquale looked sensitive; his pinky varnished nails. "Danbre had to have some other reason for coming to America, hadn't he? Suppose Kitty was a sort of ironclad? Suppose Danbre broke his rule about never being interviewed or photographed because he wished every one to know about his alleged affair with Kitty? Seem quite useful to him dead as alive. Perhaps more useful. The Occidental News Service sent out a story about his offering a reward for the missing diamond. He was interviewed with a radio photograph of Inspector Foyle. After the press conference with Mr. Danbre, The Occidental serves a lot of South American newspapers."

"Hm..." Foyle was growing interested in this new guy, you saw was Colonel Esteban what's-his-name?"

"Oh, yes. I was born in San Fernando. I've known Colonel Esteban by sight ever since I was a boy."

When Pasquale was led away, Foyle looked at Beall.

"I've we've got that up from any other angle? I'd have taken it seriously, but somehow — Pasquale as the guilty one—I don't do it."

"I hardly know. Danbre had only to ask the English government for a little discreet police protection, and his formula would have been as safe as it could be. Why was it necessary to come to America and destroy Kitty and Rhoda?"

"Search me! I've been wondering why Pasquale took all the ring he stole and not the cigarette case."

"Possibly because the ring was more incriminating. It had been stolen from a murdered girl. His subconscious seems to have got rid of it as soon as he learned Kitty had been murdered."

Foyle pondered. "This blunder business! Seems to be anywhere so far."

"No, and yet—I have a—well call it a hunch, that the key to the mystery lies in one of the blunders, the Pasquale fingerprints," we have discussed already."

The telephone rang.

"Hello? What? Missed him!" The Inspector was terrible to behold. "You—you've let a murderer the instrument back into its cradle!"

"Danbre's given us the slip!" he raved. "He got in a fit of rage with his secretary, and that very fat Colonel Esteban was talking about—Colonel Esteban, by the bye, head I had trailing him bopped a cab and lost sight of him in a traffic jam within a block of the Occidental. Instead of—he called the hotel—but they say they don't know where Danbre has gone, though the Colonel has been there and left Sergei in possession."

"The Minister's secretary?" Beall repeated. "And the American Shell Company has a plant in New Jersey."

"Oh, lord, that's so!" Foyle grinned. "Shell Petroleum Corporation owns with a garrison of company guards and enough political influence to gum the works. If he's gone to earth there, we'll never see him again. You can't get Danbre for a guy with all that dough. He hasn't a—any more points!"

"Everybody has at least one point," Beall said.

"Why? What's Danbre's?"

"Pride! I think it's about time I had an interview with Sergei."

Beall dined comfortably at home. If Danbre's secretary was at the American Shell company's plant in New Jersey, he would not be back until morning, and Beall did not like to disturb Sergei's dinner hour. The telephone directory would be a tactical error.

After dinner, he killed time by glancing at the evening paper, finally fell on the story press news:

"Stanion, N. J., Dec. 14.—(by Occidental News Service). "Three men were killed and five others injured this morning when an explosion occurred at the American Shell Company's testing grounds near here today. Windows were broken within a radius of six miles."

Beall jumped up. "Park Avenue past Grand Central until he came to Danbre's police. Sergei opened the door. "Mr. Danbre is expecting me," Beall announced.

"Good evening." Beall spoke in Russian. "May I come in?" Sergei gasped and blinked at him. "Come to see Mr. Danbre? Mr. Danbre has gone into the drawing-room?" Beall let the way and Sergei followed. "Mr. Danbre is not—" Sergei murmured.

"The grandfather was Vassily Krasnov, the composer."

Sergei's face lighted with interest. His surly manner changed suddenly to one of easy cordiality. "Not really? When, I was a young man I often heard Krasnov conduct his own symphonies. A gifted man, they said."

The light faded slowly from Sergei's face. "You are Krasnov's grandson and we meet here. I do not understand." You look very American to me..."

"I am, my father was American and I was brought up over here."

"You speak Russian," Sergei literated, "and you must have understood everything that was said in your days?"

"Everything. Tell me, just what relation are you to Nicholas Danbre?"

"The silliness was troubled only by the dismal sum of traffic. Then Sergei said, "How did you know?"

"There's a certain resemblance—allowing for the difference in age. The manner toward you told me the rest. Only family hate can be so intense."

A spasm of distress crossed Sergei's face. Beall went on, "Your hands are scarcely the hands of a peasant or worker, and you speak like a gentleman. Are you a relative?"

"I had an English governess, and I was at school for a—"

"Are you Danbre's cousin? Or perhaps his elder brother?"

Sergei shook his head. "I am his father."

"His—father!" Beall knew only too well the Victorian respect a Russian child has for parents and sons and grandsons.

"It should not be difficult to understand," Sergei smiled. "After all, why shouldn't I tell you? But talk with Kitty? For this reason, a member of the family, I feel as liberty to offer it to you."

He filled a glass and handed it to Beall, his dignity quantity blended with politeness.

"Nicholas Danbre is my illegitimate son," he went on, calmly. "Have you ever heard that in Russia the nobility—a century there was a custom that an illegitimate son should take his father's name without the title? Nicholas, like other old traditions, it lingered in some of the more backward country districts until the end of the nineteenth century. As I was, you my full name is Sergei Petrovitch Radanine. Therefore my illegitimate son, Nicholas, was known in his native village by the last two syllables — Danbre. It is characteristic of him to cling to that name, when he could easily have changed it to—Some time after Ilfa. His luxuriates in his bitterness."

I WANT 2,000 PEOPLE TO TRY SYNTONA FOR ONLY 25 CENTS

SUFFERERS FROM STOMACH TROUBLE, WEAK KIDNEYS, LAZY LIVER, NERVOUSNESS AND GENERAL RUNDOWN CONDITION

EVERY PERSON who suffers can have a special introductory bottle of SYNTONA to try for ONLY 25 CENTS.

Read this offer below. Do this in your own interest.

The new and scientific medicine, known as SYNTONA, has helped so many people whom the remedies of the past knew personally. Therefore I will offer the first 2,000 people, for 25 cents, to send me before the 25th day of April, a bottle of SYNTONA. They will be benefited well keep on using it. Offer is limited for Friday and Saturday of this week only.

Science brings us methods of preparation which are so amazing that we are using this famous medicine in the treatment of Stomach Trouble, Kidneys, Liver, Nervousness and Rundown Conditions.

What It Is!

This is no pills or pill, nor is it a powder, or medicine of any kind.

SYNTONA is an advanced medical compound of 12 of the finest medicinal herbs, and has one a habit-forming drug. It is taken before meals and mixes with the food in one's stomach, thus helping in a natural way that nature intended. Its mission is to stop gas and sour stomach, bloating, and belching. At the same time SYNTONA helps to strengthen the kidneys and relieves headaches, bladder irritation and backache.

NOW, whether SYNTONA will help you as it has helped thousands during the past few years, is a matter of opinion, but why not—realistic to be sure—but in trying it what it has done for others, it is surely a mistake not to try it for oneself, especially at such a little worth. This introductory offer is good Friday and Saturday ONLY. Just read the rest of this announcement and act at once. Be fair to yourself and your family.

What It Will Do!

SYNTONA will circulate your bowels and tone your stomach. It will relieve that terrible feeling of gas and sourness.

It will bring out awful gases and constipation (frequently from one dose) which may have been inside of you a day, may be causing untold days of misery with headaches, dizzy spells, nervousness and generally downcast, tired feeling.

IT WILL relieve that nerve acid condition which causes that awful sour stomach, sweat and clean, and give grand relief from acid rejection, bloating, sour stomach, shortness of breath and dizziness.

IT WILL improve your appetite and promote proper assimilation of food, for SYNTONA and SYNTONA only, is the only medicine we know of that is scientific in its action and that contains all of the medicinal properties that may have been combined to justly remedy BACKACHE, SHARP PAINS and BINDING AT NIGHT.

It will make your liver more active, thereby relieving pale or bilious-looking skin and sick headache.

It will relieve that rich rheumatic and neuritis pains, by ridding the system of those awful poisons that cause the matter.

IT WILL clean up skin eruptions caused by the impurities in the system, which cause the sallowness or "muddiness" that is due to sluggish bowels.

SYNTONA will make your stomach sweet, your liver active, your kidneys clean and your whole system feel like a new person. In fact, a DIFFERENT person. Why be that way longer than you may have left in YEARS.

SYNTONA is a scientific medicine, and is guaranteed (especially for the first dose) which may have been inside of you a day may be causing untold days of misery with headaches, dizzy spells, nervousness and generally downcast, tired feeling.

IT WILL relieve that nerve acid condition which causes that awful sour stomach, sweat and clean, and give grand relief from acid rejection, bloating, sour stomach, shortness of breath and dizziness.

VON PAPEN IN FRANCE

Paris, April 18—(AP)—Franz Von Papen, German diplomat who was captured last week by the Allies, arrived Sunday night with his son and son-in-law at a French city and is being held under guard in a private home, it was learned today.

The Paris radio said the city was Reims.

DEEMS TAYLOR, COMPOSER, WEDS

New York, April 18 —AP)—Lucille Watson-Little, 20, New York costume designer, and Deems Taylor, 59-year-old composer, were married yesterday in Arlington, Va., the bride's mother, Mrs. George Watson-Little, said she had been informed in a telegram signed by the couple.

The Boys Were Not Too Happy About Gift of Cigars

Treasurer of the local Kinsman club, Mr. Frank Lang, was called upon to pass the cigars at Monday evening's meeting of the club, but in treating the boys on the occasion of becoming a proud "papa" for the second time, he took advantage of the current cigar shortage to pass off a brand of cigars which were no Havanas on his fellow club members.

And then with typical Langian touch of humor he asked that fines be registered against all members who refused to risk smoking the gift band of stogies. But the request backfired as Frank himself was "touched" as he lit up with a more favorite brand of cigar.

Wing Cmdr. Scott Home on Furlough

On the administration staff of the R.C.A.F. overseas for the past three-and-one-half years, Wing Commander Keith Scott returned home to Belleville yesterday to greet his three-year-old son for the first time. His home is 122 Dundas St., East.

A native of Picton WC. Scott was with J. A. McFee, Optometrist in Belleville for 14 years prior to his enlistment in the R.C.A.F. in April, 1940. After training as an administration officer he proceeded overseas in September, 1941 and for two-and-one-half years acted as adjutant for an operational fighter squadron. For the past year he has been adjutant at R.A.F. Headquarters Fighter Command where he was in charge of a Canadian squadron. Also for six months he was with the tactical air force in support of army operations.

Now home on 30 days' leave he will report back to the Air Force at the end of his furlough but is not sure whether he is slated for discharge or whether he will return overseas. His wife is the former Miss Irene Bailey of Stirling.

Police Blotter

George Hasley, 17, a native of Brockville, walked into the city police station late last night stating he had run away from the Ontario Hospital situated in that town. Police here contacted Brockville police, but no reports of a hospital patient having escaped had been reported to Brockville authorities. Later hospital officials contacted police here to say Hasley was missing and to hold him for escort.

Chief Probert revealed at noon his department hoped to have a favorable statement regarding the recent break-in at the Capitol Lunch before sundown today.

REPORTS CAR STOLEN

William Badgley of the city, awoke this morning to find his automobile had been stolen during the night. The matter was immediately reported to police, who in turn broadcast a description of the missing vehicle to police heads throughout Eastern Ontario and Toronto. The motor car is a 1932 model Ford bearing Ontario licence plate number 27-K-98 and there was a full tank of gasoline at the disposal of the thieves.

SIX AIRDROMES ON JAP HOMELAND HIT BY SUPERFORTS

Bomber Force Passes One Coming Home From the Same Target

Guam, April 18 — (AP)—Superfortresses delivered another heavy bombing on six principal airdromes on the southernmost Japanese mainland island of Kyushu today—even before another large force had returned from the same targets.

Probably around 150 B29s, flying from Marianas bases, again wrecked buildings and cratered runways of airfields from which Japanese planes have attacked American forces on and around Okinawa, 325 miles to the south.

Six task groups of B29s took off for the mission while six earlier ones were winging their way back. The attacks, 17 hours apart, supplemented carrier plane blows against Kyushu Sunday and Monday.

It was the fourth assault within five days on the Japanese homeland. The Tokyo area, including Kawasaki, was hit by Superforts, Sunday and Monday, and photographs revealed today that 8 1/10 square miles of industrial district were burned out in the Mobday raid.

In the three latest raids on the capital, 32 7/10 square miles, or 20,950 acres, of urban industrial and commercial Tokyo has been devastated.

Proposes Posthumous Award of Medal Of Honor to Roosevelt

Washington, April 18—(AP)—A posthumous award of a Congressional Medal of Honor to Franklin D. Roosevelt would be provided for under a bill introduced in the senate. Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky and Senator Scott W. Lucas (Dem. Ill.), in offering the measure, said the late President "had gallantly and unselfishly given his life in the service of the nation" as Commander in Chief of the armed forces.

FORMER BELLEVILLE MAN HELD BY POLICE

Police of Brockville are holding Floyd Wood, formerly of this city, on charges of breaking, entering and theft. Wood is charged with entering a hotel at Elgin, Ont., and stealing a case of beer and $60 in cash, Provincial Police revealed at headquarters here today. The accused man is also sought in Belleville and Trenton for questioning also.

ALL-NIGHT PARKING ON CITY STREETS IS PROHIBITED

Thoughtlessness on the part of local motor car drivers in continually hampering the operations of the city street sweeper, that operates over city streets at night, according to reports from city police headquarters today.

Actually it is in direct violation of city traffic regulations to park vehicles on city streets over night, but repeatedly the operators of the city sweeper are delayed in their efforts to keep streets clean. Today heads of the Department of Public Works reported this practice to police requesting future violators be summoned into court. Consideration on the part of motor vehicle operators would materially assist the Public Works Department employees in keeping city streets clean by merely refraining from all-night parking. Subsequent violators will be prosecuted, police warned.

ANOTHER JAP SHIP GOES DOWN

Attacked by B-24's of the Far East air forces, three Jap transports and six escort ships were sunk while attempting to reinforce the enemy base at Ormoc on Leyte Island in the Philippines. The ships, its decks loaded with enemy war materiel as well as ducking, Jap sailors, is the target of bombs from the big planes.

The Industrial Effort Behind the Royal Navy

By Lt. Commander R. Charnaud

(B.B.C. Press Service)

LONDON (By Mail) — I want to tell you something about the gigantic industrial effort that is behind the part played by the Navy in the war, and which is such an integral aspect of the life of the people of the United Kingdom. The wonderful work of the Royal and Merchant Navies is already known to nearly all of you. But, have you ever stopped to think what is required of industry to make possible the work of our seamen? For have seen the ships; you have met the sailors; you have bought the goods that have been brought to you from across the seas. But I doubt if many of you have given more than a passing thought to the work of the millions of men and women who are behind the ships and the men that man them.

Think of the tremendous range of ships that go to make up our fleets, both the great-named warships and their civilian sisters. The Navy, as most of you know by now, includes every conceivable size and shape of ship, from giant battleships and aircraft carriers down to the little M.L. equally varied in size and behaviour are the members of the Merchant Navy family.

• •

I want you now to think of one individual ship, out of all the tremendous variety of these two fleets. Let it be an actual ship—one you yourself have seen, whether the famous Aquitania, an aircraft carrier such as the "Ark Royal" that the Nazis hated so much, a destroyer, or a dredger. Each one of these ships, including the one you yourself are picturing, is a floating home for a multitude of people. In the case of a modern battleship nearly 2,000 men may be concerned; what the "Queen Mary" carries, when she is troopship, is a wartime secret, but it is a very formidable figure; M.L.s can each take a mere handful of men. Between the two extremes lies a tremendous range, but what I want you to realize is that each and every one of them in the ship or ships which you are thinking, must be fed and cared for; the ship itself must be supplied with weapons with which to fight; with machinery to drive it through the water; with the wherewithal to enable the men to cook their food, to care for the wounded, to feed the guns, to heal the boilers; and to do the million and one things necessary in a self-contained village which, after all, is what every ship really is.

Those needs are not only a question of initial supply; they are recurrent and they require constant and painstaking planning. Ships may be away from their base for a long period, yet the men must be fed each day; and guns, without reserves of ammunition, are no use when an enemy is met on the high seas.

That means that a constant supply of things as varied as nuts and bolts; .15" shells; cans of flour; dentist's equipment; tins of tobacco; coils of rope; casks of rum; the list is endless—must constantly be ready for call whenever and wherever the sailors need them. The planning that is required to perfect this "battle of supply" is a gigantic task, only over-shadowed by the work needed actually to produce the goods.

• •

Since I have been in the United Kingdom I have been lucky enough to see some of the fronts on which this battle is constantly waged. From Scotland to the South Coast it goes on day and night, week day and Sunday, year in and year out. In factory upon factory, from the enormous shipyards of the Tyneside and Clydeside, to the little one-room workshops which each make one tiny part of some gear unit, the work never stops.

Naturally it has not been possible for me to see more than a limited number of these factories, but I have been fortunate enough to be shown over a varied enough cross-section of industry to get a good idea of the very real and sustained effort which lies behind the work.

On the Clyde I saw ships of all sizes being built; in an enormous factory, not far from the sea, I watched guns of many calibres being fitted into their mountings ready to be taken to the ships that they would serve. It seemed incongruous to find gigantic turrets in a small building, yet that I also saw; enormous guns were being fitted out in their new homes, as you might have a fitting of a new suit at your tailors. In the next bay smaller guns were being prepared for the destroyers that, in their turn, would later accrest the battleships with whose turrets they were already acquainted.

• •

In another factory I watched large and small refrigeration plants being prepared for the ships that will carry the war into Japanese waters. All sorts of modern equipment, designed to make ships more habitable in hot weather, was being completed in this factory. I saw air conditioning plants that could be moved from compartment to compartment, according to where they were most needed; refrigeration units of material that can stand up to the ravages of tropical or cooling plants, capable, within one hour, of supplying four hundred men each with a glass of cold water.

As in famous engineering workshops, young men were putting the turbines that drive Canada's ships to give light to ships' galleys, which made a finish of the greatest precision, were going on to the end of the line, which was supplied from row seats for the Battle of Britain. I saw the new steel that, hot molten from being poured into moulds from the furnaces, emerged as white ants; and we were taken, when cool enough, into and round the vast ingots of all sizes and shapes, each to turn out some thing that is a part of the vast war machines used tools filled with ingenious contrivances.

I saw little for aircraft carriers being tried out in the corner of one shed; I saw engines nearing completion in another; depth charges and their fuses in a third; check by jowl with long sinister looking torpedo tubes; and completion hotels for small ships rubbing shoulders with air compressors and diesel engines which were almost on speaking terms with gun sites.

The factories that do this work are spread out all over Great Britain. Many of these factories still work day and night, shifts to meet the requirements of our ships. All of them have their shelters in which the workers can take cover from bombs, yet the main hours lost, even during the worst period of the blitz, were incredibly low.

• •

In one factory that I saw I found they had converted the spheways over which the local railway runs, into factory bays filled with lathes, and there were men and women working at their jobs, while the trains ran overhead. Shifts arrived from air raids and with their own self contained canteen, they were ready to continue work after a brief ditted down from the skies.

I couldn't help noticing that most of the men working in these factories were either very young or were greying around the temples; the men in between these two age groups were nearly all of them been called to the colors, but the work still goes on, and will continue to do so till the Nazi and the Jap have both been finally beaten.

And remember, many of these self-contained villages which, after all, is what every ship really is, have special needs not only a question of initial supply; they are recurrent and they require constant and painstaking planning. Ships may be away from their base for a long period, yet the men must be fed each day; and guns, without reserves of ammunition, are no use when an enemy is met on the high seas.

That means that a constant supply of things as varied as nuts and bolts; .15" shells; casks of flour; dentist's equipment; tins of tobacco; coils of rope; casks of rum; the list is endless—must constantly be ready for call whenever and wherever the sailors need them. The planning that is required to perfect this "battle of supply" is a gigantic task, only over-shadowed by the work needed actually to produce the goods.

Since I have been in the United Kingdom I have been lucky enough to see some of the fronts on which this battle is constantly waged. From Scotland to the South Coast it goes on day and night, week day and Sunday, year in and year out. In factory upon factory, from the enormous shipyards of the Tyneside and Clydeside, to the little one-room workshops which each make one tiny part of some gear unit, the work never stops.

Naturally it has not been possible for me to see more than a limited number of these factories, but I have been fortunate enough to be shown over a varied enough cross-section of industry to get a good idea of the very real and sustained effort which lies behind the work.

On the Clyde I saw ships of all sizes being built; in an enormous factory, not far from the sea, I watched guns of many calibres being fitted into their mountings ready to be taken to the ships that they would serve. It seemed incongruous to find gigantic turrets in a small building, yet that I also saw; enormous guns were being fitted out in their new homes, as you might have a fitting of a new suit at your tailors. In the next bay smaller guns were being prepared for the destroyers that, in their turn, would later accrest the battleships with whose turrets they were already acquainted.

• •

In another factory I watched large and small refrigeration plants being prepared for the ships that will carry the war into Japanese waters. All sorts of modern equipment, designed to make ships more habitable in hot weather, was being completed in this factory. I saw air conditioning plants that could be moved from compartment to compartment, according to where they were most needed; refrigeration units of material that can stand up to the ravages of tropical or cooling plants, capable, within

MOHAWK RESERVE HOLD MEMORIAL FOR LATE PRIVATE JOHN E. MARAGLE

Chiefs, Legion Branches, Kan-yen-geh League, and Battery Attend Rites

Mohawk Reserve — A large congregation assembled in Christ Church Sunday afternoon for the memorial service for Pte. John Earl Maracle, the twenty-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Maracle, who was killed in Germany. The service was conducted by the Chiefs, the Legion Branch of the Canadian Legion, the Ladies' Auxiliary to the Legion, the Kanyen-geh League, and the 49th (R.) Field Battery, R.C.A., Deseronto. Beautiful flowers adorned the altar and chancel, and were given by his family, his sister Mrs. Margaret Maracle, Belleville, the Deseronto Branch of the Canadian Legion, and the Kan-yen-geh League. The Rector preached from the text, "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends." The hymns were, "O God, Our Help in Ages Past," "On the Resurrection Morning," "O Valiant Hearts," and "The National Anthem." The young soldier had many friends in this locality, and much sympathy is felt for his parents, his brothers and sisters in their sad bereavement.

U.S. House Approves Huge Navy Expenditure

Washington, April 18 (AP) — A $24,979,810,946 supply bill to support the United States' all-out shipbuilding drive against Japan was approved from the House of Representatives appropriations committee today. It will finance operations for the year starting July 1.

With it, the committee sent to the floor the largest navy supply bill in history, a report voicing hope "the end may not be far distant" and explaining that the heavy outlay was necessary because "we can fi afford to proceed on hopes or assumptions."

The total in the bill—$20,000,000,000 in the new appropriations and the balance in contract authority and re-appropriations — was $6,000,000,000 less than the sum made available to the navy during the current fiscal year. A large part of the present fund, however, will not be spent until the new fiscal year starts.

It boosts to $105,811,276,739 the cash and contract has voted the navy since July 1, 1940.

Britain's Peers Wish To Join in Tribute To Late President

London, April 18 (Reuters) — A motion praying the King to permit Britain's Peers to associate themselves with his message of sympathy to the United States on the death of President Roosevelt was moved in the House of Lords today by Viscount Cranborne, leader of the Upper House.

Lord Cranborne, Dominion Secretary, said the President's death had brought a sense of personal loss to everyone.

"There is not one of us who does not feel that he has lost a trusted friend whose counsel we have tested in the furnace of adversity."

Aussies Overcame Terrific Odds to Capture Salamaua

New York, April 18, (CP) — New York, white, athletic pressed their attack through three terrific country" obstacles to the "impossible" fortress of Salamaua, New Orleans, the Australian Army declared today in a review of that city's 1942 triumph.

The "impossible" was the heart-breaking ridges, the ineffable ambushes of tangled jungle that confronted the Australians. But they should have been unassailable; there were the tangled barrier the way to Salamaua" writes the kodak Salamaua Saga," published by the army's directorate of public relations.

Salamaua, Japanese Huon Gulf stronghold, fell September 11, 1943, after bitter fighting which began at Wau at the end of January 1942, when the outnumbered Kanga were joined by Brig. M. J. Moloney's militia brigade and the independent companies) took the Japanese back from the Wau airfield.

• •

From the Wau valley base one Australian force struck over the mountains to Bulolo, the Japanese inland country, and Dumpu, inland from Salamaua, while the coastal battalions moved up from Salamaua. They were aided by the heavy bombardment of the Japanese positions by Allied warships and planes.

The well-disguised ambushes are shown in the official account of the fighting which preceded the fall of Salamaua. They were set up by Japanese "heavy machine gun crews" who, after their Lae garrison had reinforced, came out as our strength began to fail.

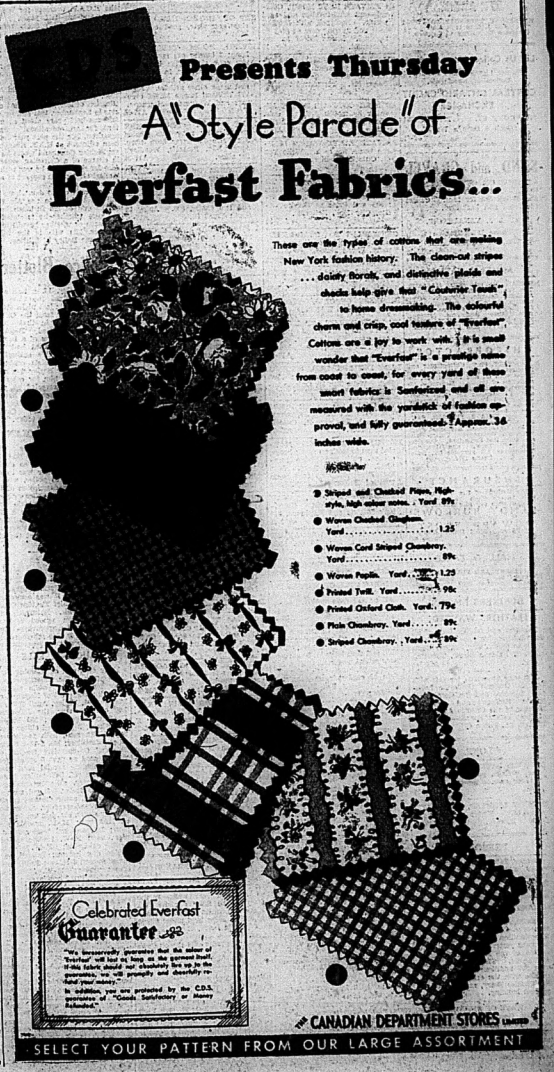
Lae fell 16 days after Salamaua. The fighting between this campaign, the earlier phases at Wau and Goni and the latter, ended in decisive triumphs in the Markham and Ramu valleys and the Huon peninsula.

Lt.-Gen. Sir Edmund Herring, commander of the New Guinea force in 1943, said:

"This campaign could not have taken place without the courage and self-sacrifice of our fighting men who drove the enemy back over the Kokoda Owen Stanley ranges, and who, under the supreme control of the coastal areas where we could build the airfields and bases we finally needed."

One hard-hitting Australian force which for a time operated as commando troops, killed more than 1,000 Japanese for the loss of fewer than 20 of their own men in their area.

• •



Australian infantrymen fought, slept, ate and lived in jungle, staying only long enough in some places to kill the Japs in it, then moving on to the next. They lived in dirty, dusty pits and holes, guarding their positions day and night. Five separate patrols of commandos attacked enemy positions simultaneously, each one without knowledge of the movements of the others.

Australian and Indian Japanese camps at night to sow the seeds of disunity among the enemy troops. Leaflets were dropped, and at other places where the enemy would gather the following morning, bombs dropped during the twilight of mains hits and of other places where the enemy would gather the following morning, bombs dropped during the twilight of mains hits the air would be filled with explosions and the shrieks from injured and panicking Japanese."

LEIPZIG CAPTURED; RUHR RESISTANCE ENDS REDS 18 MILES FROM EAST LIMITS OF BERLIN

Curtain is Falling On European War Says Moscow Radio

Germans Say 2,500,000 Russians Used in Drive

By RICHARD KASISCHKE

London, April 19 — (AP) — The German Transocean agency today claimed the Germans had captured Seelow and Wriezen and advanced to within 18 miles of the eastern limits of Berlin.

Reporting a series of deep penetrations in the four-day-old Russian offensive by 2,500,000 Soviet soldiers, the Berlin radio said Fort a Wriezen River stronghold 66 miles southeast of Berlin, also had fallen.

Transocean's correspondent, Karl Silpecker, broadcast that "The Battle for Berlin in the east is approaching its climax."

He said the Russians were but 4 kilometres northeast of Muencheberg, or about 18 miles due east of Berlin's city limits.

German broadcasts claimed 800 Russian tanks had been knocked out in the four-day offensive, ranging from a point 20 miles south of Stettin to the Czechoslovak mountains.

Situation Deteriorating

Among indications that the German situation was deteriorating rapidly was the broadcast declaration that the German bridgehead on the east side of the Oder at Kuestrin had been given up.

While the Kremlin still was silent about the clashes, the Moscow radio said "the curtain is falling on the European war and the time is at hand for the armies from the west and east to unite."

One German commentator, Walter Ritzmann, said the 1st Ukrainian Army was meeting violent resistance in the Neisse area in an outflanking drive aimed at Dresden, 90 miles south of Berlin and only less than 50 miles from United States advance columns.

The German Transocean Agency said the Russians had thrown in a new, heavy break-through tank and a new automatic rifle of unfriendly size, capable of firing 325 rounds a minutes. The tank is fitted with a 150-mm. long-range gun and a large-calibre grenade thrower, the broadcast said.

Two-Way Drive

The Russian communique announced new gains in a two-way drive into Germany's Silesia, both west of the arsenal city of Bruenn (Brno).

The 2nd Ukrainian Army, driving into the Moravska Ostrava from the south, scored advances of up to 10 miles, and captured 1,000 after cutting the Bruenn-Vienna Highway.

Moscow said the wedge northward from captured Vienna had been pushed forward further with the capture of Mistelbach, 22 miles north of the Austrian capital, as well as other towns along a 30-mile front.

Meanwhile, in fighting along the Baltic the Russians said they captured Lebork, 30 miles west of Pillau, making a two-day bag of 34,000.

Berlin correspondent Fritz Koelis said the Soviet armies were using artillery to an "unimaginable extent" in their drive for Berlin from the east. He estimated the Red Army had fired more than 10,000 tons of shells in the Oder bridgehead at Frankfurt and the Oder Bend during the first 24 hours of the new attack, which he said started Monday.

The German commentator said the Russians were converging on the capital with perhaps 2,500,000 troops.

The important seizure was announced today by Lieut.-Gen. Manton S. Eddy's 12th Corps, the corps which captured the German gold reserve.

3 Great Powers Prepare Solemn Warning to Huns

By JAMES M. LONG

London, April 19 (AP)—Prime Minister Churchill announced today that a "solemn warning" to the Germans against prison camps atrocities is being prepared to be issued over the signatures of Britain, Russia, Stettinius for the United States and Anthony Eden for Britain—as soon as Germany's warning to "bring home responsibility" for what she was falling last week, 50 miles south of Berlin and less than 50 miles from United States advance columns.

The German Transocean Agency said the Russians had thrown in a new, heavy break-through tank and a new automatic rifle of unfriendly size, capable of firing 325 rounds a minutes. The tank is fitted with a 150-mm. long-range gun and a large-calibre grenade thrower, the broadcast said.

No Announcement Yet on V-E Day, Principal Powers to Discuss Matter —Churchill

London, April 19, (CP) — Prime Minister Churchill indicated today the announcement whether Gen. Eisenhower's statement that V-E Day would be proclaimed until all important centres had been occupied by Allied troops, including Denmark and the Channel Islands and Northern ports would have to be liberated first.

Mr. Churchill reiterated that he had "no announcement about V-E day at the present time".

"I do not know, myself, why all this talk about V-E day has got started," the Prime Minister said. "No one in the British government and no responsible person among any of the parties so far as I know has given any special encouragement to talk", he declared.

"The time for such announcements will left on the Atlantic coast, the Channel coast and Canadian guns are carrying out counter - battery tasks against enemy batteries on the Friesian Island shielding the German North Sea coast.

On the western shore of the Ems River estuary, Emden, Hitler's birthplace, was encircled by Canadians and was declared in difficulty. Nazis Blow 300-Yard Dike Near Zuider Zee Slowing Canadian Drive

By ROSS MUNRO
(CP War Correspondent)

With the 1st Canadian Army, April 19 — (Delayed) — Another flood disaster has been forced on stricken Holland by the Germans who now have blown up a 300-yard dike along the northwestern rim of the Zuider Zee immediately south of the causeway which joins the peninsula containing the city of Amsterdam.

R.A.F. pilots who discovered that the dike was blown said that 30 to 50 miles of countryside of the peninsula was flooded by this destructive act.

Within the last few days the German press had been into "Fortress Holland" by Canadian and British forces of Gen. Crerar, have resorted to flooding in the Zuider Zee and Amsterdam areas, and also began to inundate the northern end of the Grebbe Line south of Amsterdam but the damage was small compared to the flooding in the Zuider Zee and which may result from the new flooding in the north.

The British 49th West Riding (Yorkshire) Division is attacking in the southern sector of the Grebbe Line and Veenendaal 10 miles southeast of Amsterdam, and 20 miles in miles east of Utrecht while Canadians infantry and armoured troops four miles east of Amersfoort on the highway from Apeldoorn.

Reach Zeider Zee.

Canadian armored columns reached the southern shore of the Zuider Zee at Harderwijk, which was captured, and Elburg, 10 miles southwest.

Movement of German shipping from west Holland between the northern Netherlands coast and the Frisian Islands in the direction of Emden may mean the enemy is trying to withdraw forces from Friesland—the area lying west and southwest of the Zuider Zee. The R.A.F. sank three such ships and damaged 11 yesterday.

It is improbable that the Germans are removing fighting troops by sea, but the withdrawal of administrative forces and naval units would ease the food situation for the rest of the garrison.

The Canadian columns crossed the flood area of the Ijssel River April 11, followed by the British attack on Arnhem, Birtchin said. Canadian forces have taken 9,000 prisoners in the Holland campaign. Estimates place the enemy forces remaining in Holland as high as 110,000 men, of whom 15,000 are trained combat troops.

Take Over New Stretch

The 2nd Canadian infantry division has taken over long stretches of the Netherlands northwest coast and Canadian guns are carrying out counter - battery tasks against enemy batteries on the Friesian Island shielding the German North Sea coast.

On the western shore of the Ems River estuary, Emden, Hitler's birthplace, was encircled by Canadians and was declared in difficulty. The Canadians were in communication with the German commander by telephone and he said he was going to fight to the end. The 3rd division, however, has had a great deal of experience in rapidly reducing coastal pockets of enemy garrison. won't last long once the Water Radio closed down for their amphibious operations in the flooded lands, and all Germans south of the Rhine in February.

REICH BALANCING ON RAZOR'S EDGE SAYS GOEBBELS

Calls for Last All-Out Effort to Make Sure Germany Does Not Break Apart

London, April 19—(CP)—Propaganda Minister Goebbels told the German people today the Fuehrer, Hitler, was "balancing on the razor's edge" of world events and that everything behind Hitler and "by a last all-out effort now" to see that the Reich does not break apart.

Goebbels broadcast his statement on the eve of Hitler's 56th birthday. He left no doubt that Hitler, acting by the official D.N.B. agency in a special radio interpretation to German newspapers, and hence became Goebbels' mouthpiece, considered the days of his intended audience.

For the most part the speech was devoted to sounding praise of the Fuehrer, indicating that he remains at least the symbol around which the crumbling Nazi structure depends, rumors of Heinrich Himmler's ascendancy.

While acknowledging the serious-ness of the situation, Goebbels sought to bolster German hopes by telling Germans that the Russian coalition between plutocracy and Bolshevism is cracking and that the threat of enemy conquest has been struck off by fate."

This statement is a subterfuge to the death of President Roosevelt, Goebbels did not mention him by name.

Paints Dismal Picture

Early in his long harangue the propaganda chieftain declared that "perhaps for the first time in the forces of hatred and destruction are assailing our front from east, west, southeast and south in order to pierce them and administer the coup de grace."

He then painted a dismal picture of Europe after the defeat of the warring Allies.

"The contrast to this, Goebbels asserted, German soldiers always have brought to other countries "happiness and well-being, law and order and plenty of work".

While offering no specific suggestions as to how Germany might achieve victory speech Goebbels blind faith in Hitler — Goebbels predicted that "a few years after the war Germany will blossom as never before."

Throughout his address Goebbels sought to arouse mystical faith in Hitler as the German hope of salvation.

LANDING POSES DIRECT THREAT TO JAP-HELD IS.

Yanks Go Ashore at Malalang and Parang Saying 35 Miles of Coast

Manila, April 19—(AP)—A second American landing on Mindanao, southern island anchor hold on that second most important Philippine island, the Japanese have been established since long before the outbreak of the Pacific war in 1941.

The U. S. division drove ashore on the Malalang and Parang Parang, on the east shore of Illana Bay, Sarmiento Peninsula, and secured 35 miles of coast line.

The new landing poses a direct threat to the most important part of the Philippines, in and around Davao. Davao, which has been a settlement for immigrant Japanese for many years.

The big Japanese Mindanao landing was on the Zamboanga Peninsula March 10 by the Eighth Army, to block the strategic port of Zamboanga, on the tip of the peninsula, but a stretch of wild, mountainous country separated them from the Illana Bay area, the Eighth Army area.

Military sources estimated the number of Japanese troops on Mindanao at 50,000 to 60,000, or about 35,000 men. This, however, takes no account of the great number of civilians.

On Luzon Island, American troops continued their cleanup of enemy positions on the outskirts of Manila.

7,596 Casualties Reported

Guam, April 19—(AP)—American casualties of 7,596 in the Okinawa campaign were reported by Admiral Nimitz today, as United States Marines overran the northern tip of the island and announced that soldiers virtually ended the organized resistance in the fight.

The casualty toll, as of yesterday, was 1,592 dead, 4,730 wounded and 1,756 missing.

Japanese dead in the ground fighting on the island now total 9,106 killed, and 361 made prisoner, Nimitz said up to midnight last Friday.

Naval casualties of 4,700 for this action exceeded those of the Army and the Marines for the first time in the Pacific war.

Reinforcements on southern Okinawa still were trying to crack the Japanese defenses in the mass of north of the capital city of Naha, a bitter and prolonged artillery exchange.

CONTINUE SEARCH FOR TAG ENDS OF NAZI AIR POWER

British and Russian Bombers Hammer Berlin in Relays During Night

London, April 19 — (CP) — Railway targets in southern Germany and Czechoslovakia were attacked today by the fourth successive day by 800 U. S. 8th Air Force heavy bombers and 550 fighters, which also continued to search for remnants of German air power.

British and Russian bombers hammered Berlin in relays again last night.

RAF Mosquitos sandwiched two attacks on the German capital in which 1,300 tons of bombs fell between midnight and 3 a.m.

Strong forces of RAF heavy bombers, meanwhile, blasted enemy rail railways between American and Russian armies in southern Germany for the fourth straight night.

One target was the railroad yards at Ingolstadt, 1,300 tons of high explosive bombs were dropped on the colorful border, 22 miles southeast of Chemnitz. Seven other railroads in the Munich area, 60 miles further, were also attacked.

Czechoslovakia Water Disaster

In Holland, the 1st Canadian Army faced another in the long series of water barriers that have confronted it in the Low Lands, as Germ man-loosed floods spread across the Polders.

"All organized resistance in the front pocket has ended and Allied forces have virtually completed mopping up the last enemy strongholds," Allied Supreme Headquarters said.

Allied Supreme Headquarters said 77,427 Germans surrendered Tuesday raising the total since D-Day to 2,099,002. Of these 309,484 had been taken in the great Ruhr battle of encirclement, which began eight, when perhaps 50,000 Germans remained to be captured. The greatest previous German catastrophe was at Stalingrad, where 330,000 of the foe's best were killed or captured. The Ruhr casualty reports have no account of the killed and seriously wounded.

Disaster Looms on German Home Front As Black Market Functions Openly

An eyewitness of conditions in Germany, on the verge of defeat and disaster was Olle Olsen, Berlin correspondent for Swedish third three days of the Stockholm Morgontidningen. He left the German capital last week.

By OLLE OLLEN
(Copyright, 1945
By The Associated Press)

Stockholm, April 19 — (AP)—The Germans have lost faith in their own money, among other things the Swedish correspondent said.

An incident aboard the ferry on which I travelled from Copenhagen to Warnemuende illustrates the currency contempt I said that I saw Germans throwing away worthless Reichsmarks.

The German official said with a shrug of his shoulders, "If you have too much throw it overboard; I don't want it."

The usual comment from German shopkeepers is, "Haven't you anything other than marks—bread or meat coupons, perhaps?" Germans want other things than material value to them — coffee, alcohol or tobacco.

The black market functions as never before.

When the Americans stood at Erfurt and the Russians on the Oder, bread on the black market cost 150 marks a kilogram. (The pre-war price was quoted, at 40 pfennigs a kilogram is 95 ounces.) Butter was 800 marks a kilogram. Luxury foods brought fantastic prices: coffee, 1,000 marks a kilo; cigarets of fine quality, 100 marks a hundred for a package of 20.

Hitler's many bluffs about the black market are no longer. Even workers get not 1,000 marks for a bottle of schnapps.

The ups and downs in values and lack of confidence in money is one of the principal factors in a doomsday feeling that pervaded Germany and was shown in many forms. An auto mechanic stubbornly refused to take Reichsmark in payment for a job but told me "remember me when I come to Ramsen Have Wings."

Ramsen have wings; hence, everywhere stories are told about party bosses. They aren't whispered any more, but are spoken clearly in street cars and subways. German frau too quick this winter have had too little to eat to be, cautious.

Brown-clad "Golden Pheasants" are no longer so arrogant. The Volkssturm privates, 16-year-old lads will take care of "these brown rascals" when the time comes, I'm told.

People have worked and saved to postpone the final hour and now find time, money and agony. Relief and rag collections took virtually everything last fall. Living and working conditions are no longer available. Even the Nazi bosses' children, the barricades and the war machine. A dead man may be taken to the grave in a borrowed coffin, but his relatives may not attend the funeral. The responsibility of transferring the body from the borrowed coffin to a paper sack, which serves as the last resting place.

Hitler's birthday is today.

It is also a forbidden luxury to clothe dead bodies or dress them in shrouds.

The people of Berlin are depressed as the result of bombings, bad sleep, little food, lack of electricity, fuel lines, worry and agony. This black depression first appeared in the great cities, where war's deadly attack were the greatest. Berlin was pretty pale after the 36th consecutive bombing raid.

On the 37th night only the most optimistic could say to bed, without cursing because the British failed to bomb punctually.

Cessation of bombing was a shock to the nerves. It broke a steady series of bomb attacks, which everybody by that time considered automatic, and thus the enemy's greater than the crash of a two-ton bomb. And the crash of a two-ton bomb should not be underestimated.

British 2nd Army Advances Within 16 Mi. of Hamburg

Seized Bank in Magdeburg Contained $70,000,000

By JAMES M. LONG

Paris, April 19 — (AP)—Leipzig has fallen to U. S. 1st Army troops and other Americans today have smashed the last organized resistance in the Ruhr, culminating perhaps the greatest single victory of the war.

The U. S. 3rd Army was driving into Czechoslovakia, within gunshot of Asch, after blasting Germany propaganda-touting route into the Nazis' hideaway in the Bavarian Alps.

Other Americans fought hand-to-hand S. S. troops through the streets of the Bavarian Nazi centre of Muernberg, now virtually surrounded.

The British 2nd Army reached the lower Elbe, last river before Berlin, and advanced to within 16 miles of Hamburg in a mighty effort to cut off the German capital from Berlin, beleaguered by Russian troops reported 17 miles east and Americans 46 miles west. The siege of garrison was intensified.

Canadian Free Water Disaster

In Holland, the 1st Canadian Army faced another in the long series of water barriers that have confronted it in the Low Lands, as Germ man-loosed floods spread across the Polders.

"All organized resistance in the front pocket has ended and Allied forces have virtually completed mopping up the last enemy strongholds," Allied Supreme Headquarters said.

Allied Supreme Headquarters said 77,427 Germans surrendered Tuesday raising the total since D-Day to 2,099,002. Of these 309,484 had been taken in the great Ruhr battle of encirclement, which began eight, when perhaps 50,000 Germans remained to be captured. The greatest previous German catastrophe was at Stalingrad, where 330,000 of the foe's best were killed or captured. The Ruhr casualty reports have no account of the killed and seriously wounded.

Capture Rubber Factory.

In captured Magdeburg, the 9th Army seized a bank containing the equivalent of $70,000,000 in Nazi silver and paper money, plus great art treasures. On the way to Magdeburg, the 1st captured intact the I. G. Farben Industries rubber plant sprawling over two square miles.

Halle (220,362) was cleared save for its southern outskirts 34 hours ago, and Dessau (130,000), 52 miles southwest of Berlin, was defended from the attacking 1st Army mainly by civilians. Chemnitz (336,000) in Saxony north of Czechoslovakia was besieged by the 3rd Army which was within 39 miles of Dresden. In that area, the Americans were 97 miles from the Czechoslovak capital of Prague. They were 65 miles from Pilsen and the Skoda munitions works, 75 miles inside the republic.

C. J. JOHNSON ELECTED PRESIDENT QUINTE DRUGGISTS' ASSOC.

Charles Johnson, Midoc, was elected president of the Quinte District Druggists' Association at the semi-annual meeting held in the Crofton Hotel, Belleville, this morning. He succeeds the late Charles Dolan.

George Pasley was re-elected secretary and other executive officers include Cec. Brown, Trenton; Ber Bascom, Campbellford; Alfred Strickland, Stirling; T. E. Whitehead, Picton, and W. T. McKenzie, Napanee.

The report of the meeting with was addressed by R. M. Fitzhugh, Dean of the Ontario College of Pharmacy appears in another column.

Belleville, District Boys on Frigate When Torpedoed

One Belleville rating and a Picton born seaman were aboard the Canadian frigate HMCS. Magog when it was struck by a German submarine ripped into her stern 200 miles below Greenly Gilt in the Gulf of St. Lawrence last autumn. Both local seamen escaped injury in the resultant explosion and were home on leave prior to the Christmas season.

The Belleville rating aboard the Canadian frigate ship seriously damaged by the German torpedo was AB. James Lorimer, 21, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Lorimer, 137 Chatham Street. The Picton boy was AB. Clifford Hubert Hall of Mrs. Wanda Sine.

Born in Belleville AB. Lorimer went to St. Michael's School and enlisted in the navy in 1943. He was the only Belleville boy aboard the Magog. He has one brother, Wilbur, and three sisters Mrs. Ross Morton and Theresa, all at home.

AB. Hall attended Picton public school and Belleville high school and prior to his enlistment was employed as a drug clerk at Mc-Keown's Drug Store. They are now aboard the HMCS Wentworth.

POLICE COURT

Taking into consideration his advanced age and also the fact he had had his automobile impounded since T. Y. Wills gave George A. Dafoe, Belleville, a year's suspended sentence after the latter had pleaded guilty to a charge of stealing seven white blankets from the R.C.A.F. station at Trenton. Dafoe, it was pointed out by Assistant Crown Attorney R. G. Robertson, was employed at the Air Base as a civilian batman. He pleaded guilty, made restitution and was fined amounting to $10.00 as well as being given the suspended term. He is 57 years of age.

The fact Dafoe was in possession of the blankets was disclosed in city police court recently when Cecil Latimer was convicted of stealing Dafoe's car. It was at that time Latimer told police court that Dafoe was in possession of the said blankets.

Joseph Betia, Port Colborne, appeared on a drunk charge and despite his evident willingness to procure employment sailing on the Great Lakes he was remanded for a week. A similar disposition was made of a speeding charge preferred against Karl Lafgford, Toronto.

Pays $15 Fine For Giving Wrong Name to Warden

This is the man who gave false identity to the police and was investigating in an innocent man being brought into court here. Appearing before Assistant Crown Attorney O. S. Kennedy, K.C., and Magistrate T. Y. Wills here today, Price others also appeared in the courts on the same charges with five convictions registered.

"When I approached Orr and another man standing on Front Street one night last month he gave me the name of Garnet Hart, while the other man gave the name of Gerald Archer, Lester J. Bond on the stand was Clayton Archer," testified Fred MacDonald district game warden. Both Archer and Orr pleaded guilty to illegal fishing.

Speaking to Orr Magistrate Wills remarked, "And you, at your innocent age in trouble by giving a fictitious name and address. I'll tell you Orr, that," stated His Worship as he imposed a fine of $15 and costs against Orr. The same applied to Archer, who later admitted he had given a false name.

Otherwise William Kemp and Gordon Sheffield of Belleville, charged with Leon Marion of Shannonville, paid ten dollars and costs after pleading guilty to charges of illegal fishing. A similar count was dismissed against Leon Marion, Marion, Shannonville, who told the court he "wasn't big enough to lift a dip net."

A Fish Story With a Sequel

They were two teen-age lads trying to make an honest dollar so they could by a few bicycle parts. How to do it? Why, dig worms, of course was the answer! Yeah—nearly everybody would pay a bonus for these prosperous times for a couple or three dozen worms.

So they got the garden fork and a couple of pails and started out looking for worms, being careful not to dig where the garden was going to be, rather, they thought, they'd ostentatiously put their physical efforts in the category of "work." They collected a careful of mice, a few angle worms and off they hiked with their tackle.

Late that afternoon they fished off. The mud-cats were obliging and simply begged to be caught. When the shadows of dusk began to lengthen the lads jubilantly staggered cityward with a good mess amounting to $10.00 as well as being given the suspended term. He is 57 years of age.

The fact Dafoe was in possession of the blankets was disclosed in city police court recently when Cecil Latimer was convicted of stealing Dafoe's car. It was at that time Latimer told police court that said Dafoe was in possession of the said blankets.

"We Deliver the Goods" Slogan of RCASC Well Lived Up to Says Local Boy

"We deliver the goods" is the slogan well and truly lived up to by the Royal Canadian Army Service Corps, in the thousands of sections on many far-flung battle fronts.

"All Sugar's Gone!" (S.S.G.) was the cryptic message received from the First Great War by members of the Belleville unit when their supplies were not, as termed by the "old sweats", the bloke with the push-bike, but when the enemy had made a direct hit on the supply dump, or the supply column had been ambushed by Hun troops.

Nor are the sergeants as pictured by the 1914-1918 vets, the fellow with the stripes on the arm and sitting contentedly in a French estaminet drinking the ratafee and the infantry go up the line.

Good 'in Emergencies'

You can take Pte. Gene Wheeler's word for it. Back in the days when Corps is one of the "Nightingale" bunch of lads in the world who not only get the right type of food, have plenty of food, ammunition, petrol etc., but can have their tunics in still trenches, fumbles, and forward areas with the infantry, mortars, rifles and grenades with the best of them.

And Gene should know for he has spent the last few years with the Corps, and recently arrived at his home on Front Street on rotation leave.

He took his convoy through the hell of Caen in Normandy. He lay for hours in a slit trench under a bloody gap of Falaise, while Allied bombers blasted the railroads and ammunition truck for a target flare, blasted the country to pieces unaware that his own bombs were being blown to bits by the hail of bombs.

Meets 'Mandy'

He lay with his corpsmen before embattled Arnhem, fighting with his pluck, mortars and rifles, when the communications were unavailable.

He took shock the hand of Field Marshal Montgomery who, in rough battledress, came up in his jeep and casually remarked: to the Canadians, "Another around, eh, what?" Went to London to Chancellors for the grand job you have been doing, I have got a spare seat for you, and if I thought you could not do it, you wouldn't get at the assembly. I have the utmost faith in you. God bless you."

And the 1st Canadian commander drove away with a wave of his hand. "I've wouldn't give all I've got for a guy like that," was Wheeler's tribute.

Before Arnhem, Wheeler has with his Army Service Corps company, been subjected to the heavy mortar pounders almost wheel to wheel, "Moaning Minnies" and all but he was not further back the "heavy stuff" awaited sans hoop. "The guns opened fire simultaneously and for twenty-four hours," Wheeler said, "the air was black with shells. Dads about it. After a terrific concentration of fire and Arnhem was reduced to nothing rubble."

Wheels and Guns Gone

"We went in after that bombardment which we thought nothing living could survive. The city lay in shocking ruins. But the Germans was intact. Yet as we advanced cautiously enough to take no chances anything, there came from dug-in snipers, about 150 German troops, attired in all sorts of weird descript: uniforms and other garments, and each one carried a heavy gun. They were shaken and dazed and only managed to down their weapons when they saw us approaching."

On another occasion, his platoon was hemmed in by German snipers. Wheeler and his men were ordered to take cover under a knocked-out self-propelled gun.

"Three of the boys were knocked out when they stuck their heads out," said finally Gene. "They had brought Tiger tanks."

"It looked like the end, unless we could silence a sniper hidden in a building covering our only means of withdrawal," Wheeler said.

Telling the remainder of his men to cover, he carefully worked his way to the corner of the house and silently crept around. He spied the sniper hiding in a room with his automatic rifle poked out a window. Wheeler's finger was on the trigger of his tommy gun and he shook in the Hun when the German saw him. Uttering a whimpering cry the Nazi threw down his weapon and threw up his hands.

Couldn't Shoot Sniper

"I just couldn't shoot him," Wheeler related, "for he was a kid about fifteen years of age. I could not shoot yet. So I marched him out to the place where the rest of us were a minute before the Tiger opened a murderous fire on the house we had just vacated."

Many people, especially in this country, wonder how the various lines of communication are maintained in battle areas, but the Gunner of the Army Service corpsman said, "The answer is that each unit has its own group. The corps conveyor whose sole job it is to maintain supplies, petrol and ammunition to that unit. We are right on their tails all the time. We deliver ammunition to the front line troops. And we are trained to handle any emergency that may arise, from guns, and can step into any fighting breach."

The ordinary Garrison soldier can be trusted after he has surrendered. Wheeler said, "we have always sent back on a Storm Trooper. They are young, fanatical and will not hesitate to defend. They will seize a weapon and shoot, if they die the better for them. They are trained babies."

District Druggists Endorse Move To Increase Pharmacy Education

The Quinte District Druggist Association in semi-annual session at the Hotel Crofton, Belleville, this morning, unanimously supported a resolution sponsored by the Ontario College of Pharmacy Council, asking for increased legal status and raising of the school educational program, for future pharmacists.

The resolution embodies a request for a four year course of study at the school and abolishing months' apprentice work in a retail store to replace the present system of two years at college and two years apprenticeship.

The association also endorsed a resolution requesting the Ontario Retail Druggist Association to ask Ottawa to change the regulations governing the sale of the digitalis to farmers for veterinary purposes. Under present procedure, farmers must have a doctor's certificate in order to procure the drugs. As the need for these drugs by rural residents is more or less urgent, the druggists felt the formality of doctors' prescriptions is unnecessary.

Pharmacy Dean is Speaker

Outlining the advantages of the proposed change in the educational program, the Ontario College of Pharmacy, Dean R. O. Hurst, of Toronto, explained that girl graduates of the four-year course would be on the same social standard as civil or other engineers. The course would be broadened and many new subjects not being taught at the present time would be included in the curriculum. Graduates would go on to university and secure their M. A. and Ph. D. degrees. At the present time, he said, the university does not recognize the courses being taught.

"In addition," Dean Hurst said, "it would fill many a long breach of pharmacy and would fill a long felt need of having a number of brighter graduates back as staff men. "At present the thing we cannot get is men in the whole of Canada to assist us at the college."

BRITISH FORCE TOUGH DEFENCES ON FERRARA ROAD

Storm Through Argenta Gap and Capture Town of Boccaleone

Rome, April 19 — (AP)—British 8th Army troops, forcing the toughest defences on the road to Ferrara, have stormed through the Argenta Gap and captured the Po Valley town of Boccaleone, Allied headquarters announced today.

Chiesa Dellandion, an outpost of the German Rabbicana road line, was also captured in the heavy fighting as the British forces m?? northwestward.

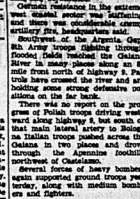
Allied 5th Army troops, meanwhile, were meeting some of the heaviest fighting of the Italian campaign in their drive along highway 65 toward Bologna. One advance of 1,000 yards was made in 11 o'clock fighting.

The 8th Army was reported to have made a spectacular surge forward further west along highway 64, but details of the advance were withheld immediately.

Along highway 65, the Florence-Bologna main road, Allied troops were running into thick concrete enemy pill-boxes in difficult fighting on the sides of the peaks and ridges.

Allied Observation Posts

Capture of Mount Adone, however, gave the 8th Army possession of a good observation point from which the vast area of German defences could be seen.



German resistance in the extreme mountainous area was stiffening and there was considerable enemy artillery fire, headquarters said.

Southwest of the Argenta Gap, 8th Army troops fighting through flooded land reached the Gaiana River in many places along an 8-mile stretch of highway 16, but the brute here crossed the river and are holding some strong defensive positions on the far bank.

There was no report on the progress of Polish troops driving westward along highway 8, but south of the Polish sector, Allied troops in Italian troops pushed across the Gaiana in two places and drove through the Japenine mountains northwest of Castelano.

Several forces of heavy bombers again supported ground troops yesterday, along with medium bombers and fighters.

'Shouldn't Take Long Now To Wind It Up,' Says Munro In Letter to Bruce Lattimer

"Things are going great guns here and it should not take long to wind it up. The shooting of the Japs will have to be done by others, but I don't envy them considering the power."

The war correspondent expressed the sentiment that "I'll be glad when I get out of here" in remarking he besides battles but give it a month or so and the Eisenhower machine will be going some. "Then, well, it's all over, boys."

He has written a book that he says will be off the presses in the near future.

IN MEMORIAM

MURRAY — In loving memory of a loving husband and father, Daniel Murray, who passed away April 18, 1937.

Time speeds on, eight years have flown
Since death its gloom, its shadows threw
Within our home where all seemed bright
And took from us a shining light.
We miss that light and ever will.
His vacant place there's none to fill.
Gone here we mourn, but not in vain
For up in heaven we will meet again.
—Lovingly remembered by Wife and daughter-Mary.

Mix-up in Parcels Causes Embarrassment

This is the story of a pair of shoes, a garbage parcel and a very red face.

A young man of the city whose identity is not disclosed, but whose wife, are bowling enthusiasts. Last night they decided to indulge in their favorite indoor sport.

Now it appears that the young man had to make a hurried trip down town, and, obliged to change his company asked him to take her shoes with him. On arrival at the bowling alleys, friend wife, as is the usual custom, asked her spouse if he had the shoes.

A look of pained surprise came over Mr. Hus face. Clutched in his thigh with the exclamation, "Oh darn I forgot them. They are in the car downstairs".

So with visions of car-thieves artfully removing friend wife's footwear, he dashed down the stairs to return a few minutes later with the parcel.

Friend wife eyed the package suspiciously. "Listen', she said, in her best kitchen soprano, "That is not the package I gave you".

Then it was the bowling alley's turn to be embarrassed. Into the parcel with its telltale patches of dampness that were about the dusty growing bigger. Then the terrible truth dawned on him. But it was too late. The package was opened and gently lay—you guessed it—the garbage.

Germany Cut in Two

Hitler's Reich is now in two vast pieces. The American Third Army has cut across and has now speared into Czechoslovakia.

The carving up of Germany goes on apace with great rapidity. Every blow means that the destruction of Hitler's domain is steadily brought nearer.

The world has not seen before such power, such speed, such co-operation in the great plan of knocking out the Hun desire and will to fight.

There is a great goal ahead, the linking up with the Russians to make a band of steel that will draw more and more close about the defences of the German colossus. The name Berlin has been synonymous with Germany, with Hitlerism and Nazism and here they are being broken.

President Truman's Message

President Truman in his first message to the United States Congress has won the admiration and confidence of all parties in that body. His direct appeal to everyone when he said so high a tribute to his predecessor, the late President Roosevelt as "one who loved and was beloved by all humanity," and when he said that he was "depending upon all of you" did not fail to register approval on all sides.

He called upon the whole country to help him "keep our nation united in defence of those ideals which have been so eloquently proclaimed by Franklin Roosevelt."

His was a plea for unity in peace as in war. "We must have faith enough to work with other peace-loving nations to maintain the peace."

His speech was direct and clear. The war will go on until there is not a vestige of resistance left in the enemies, he said.

The new leader of the United States has spoken with hope and confidence and has strengthened the people by his clear definition of the duty of the home front and in the peace that will follow.

A heavy task rests upon the man who has to follow in the paths of the late President with a momentous war in Europe being brought to a close, with the war with Japan being fought on to victory after victory and the formation of plans under way to secure the peace by the unity of outlook of the Allied Nations.

The Allied world wishes for this new leader a measure of the high ideals which he has expressed and which have been guiding the American people. President Truman has the goodwill of the freedom-living world and the pledge of its co-operation with him in all his efforts.

Ernie Pyle Killed

Ernie Pyle's death by machine gun fire from a Japanese sniper on an island off Okinawa peninsula on Tuesday is regretted by the great circle of the reading public of America of which this war correspondent has pictured Americans in war and war as he saw it on the Western Front and in the Far East. His style was remarkably clear and in his brief paragraphs he pictured the men and the scenes of Marines in an unforgettable and really undefinable style, so terse and so graphic and flowing was it. As President Truman pointed out in a message of condolence, "no man in this war has so well told the story of the American fighting man and as American fighting men wanted it told."

He was a keen observer, he saw so many little things that have a bearing on the human message he sought to convey and all these little observations went to build up the picture he desired to draw.

Millions of readers will miss his writings for his style was his own. It was himself.

He revealed his deep interest in and sympathy with men especially in action on the far-flung battle fronts of the world.

He is one of that brave company of writing men, reporting war, each writer in his own way and yet all conveying the truth of what they have seen. He is another of many writing professions who have served faithfully and well, even to the loss of his life, for the cause of freedom. He has ennobled his calling and has inspired his readers by his faultless work.

Anglo-French Financial Pact

The agreement signed in Paris by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Sir John Anderson, is an important step towards the restoration of the economies injured by the war, and towards the resumption of financial and economic relations between the members of the United Nations. That the former occupied or blockaded areas, France is probably the most important economically.

Under the agreement the two governments will make available to each other reciprocal credits of 100,000,000 Swiss francs—$400 million) for a period of twelve months up to February 28, 1946. These amounts will be increased if necessary. At the end of the year a balance will be struck and drawings on the two credits compared.

France's need of imports for reconstruction purposes, combined with her temporarily reduced export capacity, is likely to result in the balance of trade between Britain and France during the coming twelve months being substantially in favor of Britain. If this happens, France will pay for her imports from Britain partly in gold, partly in exports and partly from her existing sterling resources.

Britain and France are already operating between themselves a system of control covering current military requirements. Under the agreement, various claims and counter-claims between the two nations are being cancelled so as to make this system retroactive to cover the early period of the war before the fall of France. The French Government has agreed to refund to the British Government the dollar payments of approximately $160 million which Britain made when, in June 1940, she took over the partly-completed munitions contracts placed by France in the United States. Britain is to supply free of cost, goods and services to a value of $45 million ($180 million). The goods to be delivered will include not only supplies for the French forces, but also supplies to meet the needs of France's most pressing civilian needs, and capital goods such as equipment to restore ports, railways, factories and public utilities.

The purpose of the agreement is to help in getting France back onto her economic feet and, in the words of the Chancellor of the Exchequer, "to develop maximum commercial exchanges between the franc area and the sterling area."

Burma Oil

The objective of the campaign in Burma has been the destruction of the Japanese army, not the capture of oil wells. Yet as a by-product their capture is very much worth while, if only to deprive the enemy of their use. All through the Fourteenth Army is closing in on Burma's oldest oil field, Yenangyaung.

Burma before the war was the biggest oil producer of the British Empire. Before the British forces withdrew in 1942, an expert demolition job was done by employees of the oil companies using explosives to wreck the big refineries, storage tanks, power stations and the pumping plants.

When after some months, the Japanese began restoration work the Eastern Air Command staged an effective offensive against them.

It is estimated that the Japanese restored the production of the Burma oil fields to about 3,000 tons a month, which is only a fraction of the pre-war production. But this is probably enough to meet present motor transport needs in Burma itself, particularly since they lost such a huge amount of motor transport after their retreat from Imphal.

The importance of the oil and the fact that the oil-producing area is fits into the Japanese defence plan for the lower Irrawaddy and Rangoon are probably the reason why the Japanese have built up such strong defensive works in the area where their surrounded forces are now fighting a hopeless battle against the ever-tightening grip of the Fourteenth Army.

WOMAN AND MAN

Woman would ever be at her best.
Man, indifferent, has ways appalling.
Little he cares how he may be dressed
At times when stranger or friend come calling.

"Come," says man in his eager way,
"Home to dine at our table oaken."
The wife will love it!" and here I say
Never was falsehood more glibly spoken.

Of what she'll say, in his heart he's sure,
"It's cold meat loaf tonight we're sharing."
And I need a shampoo and a manicure.
And look at the shabby, old dress I'm wearing!"

Woman would ever be at her best.
But man isn't bothered by wearing old things,
Or serving an unexpected guest
A meal of the family's left-over cold things.

Okinawa Scenery Reminds the Boys Of Their Homeland in America

Editor's Note: Wednesday's dispatches carried the story of Ernie Pyle, death on an island adjacent to Okinawa. He will be mourned by thousands of readers who have enjoyed his daily columns in the many American newspapers in Canada and the United States, for he wrote in the friendly and sympathetic way the daily life of the rank and file in the armed forces. The news-papers will print the release on Ernie Pyle's last finished story.

By ERNIE PYLE

Okinawa—(by Navy radio)—We camped one night on a hilltop beside that led up to a high mountain. It was a beautiful spot. The hilltop dropped straight down for a long way. Up there on top of the hill it was just like a little park.

The hill was terraced, although it wasn't farmed. The grass on it was cool and green. There were small, straight-limbed pine trees were dotted all over it.

Looking down from the bluff, the river made a turn and across it was an old stone bridge. At the end of the bridge was a village—or what had been a village.

It was now just a jumble of ashes and sagging thatched roofs from our bombardment. In every direction little valleys led away from the turn in the river.

It was so pretty and gentle a sight as you came over. It had the softness of antiquity about it and the miniature charm and delicateness that are in Japanese prints. And the end, uncanny silence. Only the birds broke the quiet.

A bright sun made the morning hot and a refreshing little breeze sang through the pine trees. There wasn't a dust nor a wrinkle around within hearing. I sat on the bluff for a long time, just looking. It all seemed so quiet and peaceful. I noticed a lot of the Marines sitting and just looking too.

You could come from a dozen different parts of America and still find scenery on Okinawa that looked like your country at home.

Southern Georgia, with its reddish clay and the pine trees remind them of Georgia. Westerners see the rolling hills, the green valleys, the partly wooded, partly patch worked mountainsides, and the long, forested plains look like our mid-west.

Okinawa is one of the few places I've been in this war where our troops don't grin about what a awful place it is. In fact most of them say they wouldn't mind on Okinawa if it weren't at war with us and if the people weren't a problem.

The countryside itself is west and the farther you get from the sea. So far the Okinawa climate is superb for the vivid colors of spring and fall. The worst crops, to bear are the mosquitoes and the sight of some of the pathetic people.

Most of the roads on Okinawa are narrow dirt trails for small Japanese carts. Then there are several wider gravel roads. One road runs the length of the island—most-network of poor roads."

Our heavy traffic of course has been on the best roads. Already they are tire-deep in dust and mud from the heavy mass-like forces caked with dust.

Bulldozers and scrapers are at work constantly.

I've mentioned before about our fear of snakes, before we got here. All the books and literature given us ahead of time about Okinawa dwelt at length on snakes. They told us there were three kinds of poisonous snakes, all three being fatal. The booklets warned us not to wander off the main roads, not put our hands into holes or snake would drop on us (as if you could leap a yard without getting off the roads!). In some of the troop areas, signs read, "Beware of snakes," and the sergeants scared up more scared of snakes than Japs.

Well, that was a year ago. We've made a lot of inquiries. And the result is that in the central part of Okinawa where we've been there are just practically no snakes at all.

Our troops have walked, poked, dug, and lived in nearly every square yard of the ground. And in my regiment, for one, they have not killed one snake.

One was found dead. The other result and come up on her feet smiling.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Parkinson's Disease

My husband went off to two Jims worrying about his father's Parkinson's Disease. Diagnosed by the local physician as arteriosclerosis responsible death. Have two pamphlets about this disease, no help may husband and one to send to his father's brave, frightened mother? (M.W.)

Answer—Death is as unescapable for your husband's father as it is for you and me. Never heard of any one dying of Parkinson's disease, paralysis agitans, shaking palsy. The patient can just sit and freeze or he can share off helplessness indefinitely my doing something most of the time. Send stamped addressed envelope for pamphlet on "Parkinson's Disease." Enjoy every cent you earn.

Food Makes Blood

Is it true that apricots make blood. A friend of mine says this is so. (Mrs. R. S.)

Answer—Yes, so do potatoes, beans, peas, eggs, spinach, milk, nuts and most other foods. Send ten cents and stamped self addressed envelope for booklet "Blood and Health."

Brady Baby in New Guinea

Both my son, now in the Army and myself were born in Brady Manor were raised by the "Brady Baby Book." My son is going to be home prospective mother and I hope I can get a copy one. (Mrs. D. McA.)

Answer—The two booklets, "Preparing for Maternity" and "Baby Care" are now in a new service man or his wife who will provide you with a copy. Send envelope. Ten cents for each booklet, to ordinary folk.

Murmurs

Do you believe all heart murmurs, no matter how slight, should be treated with rest. (F. S.)

Answer—A murmur is merely an unusual sound heard over the heart by means of a stethoscope. It has no specific significance. Send ten cents and stamped addressed envelope for pamphlet "OVD"—chapters in the booklet deal with murmurs.

Many Germans In Wild Panic Says Paratrooper

By ROSS MUNRO
(C.P. War Correspondent)

With the 1st Canadian Army, April 19 — (CP) — A German paratrooper speaking Canadian whose name cannot be disclosed dropped and fought the fight of April 7 alongside 10 French paratrooper landed in northern Holland ahead of the 1st Canadi? Army advance.

He is a 24-year-old lance corporal whose father lives at Montreal. Ownership restrictions on him prevent me from giving his name—which appeared in Britain in 1943 after being discharged from the Canadian army in Montreal because of bad eyesight—prevents further identification.

"Our job was to raise hell and scare the Germans off and it was carried out," he said. "I dropped in a field just outside a little village near Westerbork in the darkness, landing in front of our group. I nearly knocked on the door where I found the family of Germans I was expecting, but I finally contacted a school teacher who spoke English and got in touch with our group.

"Three Germans tried to jump me but I killed them with a burst of Sten fire and linked up with my 10 pals. Next morning we could be found the woods and swamps full of Germans and we had skirmishes with them all day in the fields, in field and by a factory.

"Germans were running all over the place and many of them were in wild panic. Some were killed, scattered over a wide area south of Groeningen and the enemy thought the landing was a big operation when it actually was. I encouraged this belief by dropping notes in German people in contact with the Germans and 60,000 paratroops had been dropped.

"The word spread around and the Germans thought the whole devil They began to withdraw north and the withdrawal developed into a rout on the roads. This guerilla fighting went on for four days and finally we got to Westerbork to link up with another group.

"Then I met Lt. Stanislas Dreyfous (or Virden) who reached us from Belgium and I left the unit for Mrs. Dell to regard herself as old. That is, if she can roll a scon-

WHEN WOMEN DIFFER

My husband and I have been married for some time (well, Ma'am, that is quite regular, nothing wrong about it, so far as I can see) and are now expecting our first baby in October. As I am past thirty years of age I am afraid that it will go hard with me. So I would appreciate it.—(Mrs. J. L. Dell.)

Now this poor girl's education has been sadly neglected on account of the benighted taxpayers and the backward school authorities of her community—and I do wish our leaders—the dumb ones, I mean—could get it through their thick heads that when I deplore or ridicule ignorance I mean ignorance of physiology and hygiene.

In the same mail with this quaint query came this wholesome comment.

"I was 26 when my first baby was born, and in a way I am not sorry I married so young, because I've been younger my husband and I have had just have enjoyed the wonderful happiness we have in these three boys that God gave us to raise for Him. Of course they make plenty of work and they try our patience at times. But with three of our grandparents raising their families single handed, and the modern labor-saving conveniences we have under what God would think of married folk today who regard the rearing of one or two children as a tremendous burden.

We know of any number of young couples who spend their money on week-end "parties," night-clubs and "good times" regularly a fair sample. Yet they are the very ones who just can't find time to have children now.

(Mrs. E. C. R.)

Mrs Dell and other young people who contemplate the great miracle of life may find "Preparing for Maternity" a useful primer to study. For a copy send ten cents (in stamps) and stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Health Editor, address. It is for prospective fathers as well as for prospective mothers. It tells the story of life, of the nincompoop, a man who is a prospective father will be so interested and will study so carefully as his wife everything that pertains to the welfare and happiness of mother and the little stranger. Send in the printer's order at once. Address your letters in the booklet deal with murmurs.

D.N.B. Says Germans Plan Nine Zones Bitter-End Fighting

London, April 18 —(CP)— Nazi Germany has made nine fighting zones where Germany's remaining forces plan to carry on the war to the bitter end, even though geographically isolated, was announced tonight by the Berlin D.N.B. commentator.

"The complete structure of the German front has ceased to exist," said Mr.vill. "Germany's military front have lost their meaning."

He declared that the "newly German-formed fighting zones" all have "a completely new, modified tactical sense."

His statement, implying an imminent junction of the Russian and American armies, represented enemy acknowledgment of the belief expressed on the Allied side for some months that all that Europe eventually would resolve into fighting in a number of isolated pockets.

Two of the zones he mentioned—Bohemia and Moravia—already are definite pockets. Allied armies have reached Bohemia on each and taking out numbers of prisoners.

Another was Fortress Bavaria, including Hitler's mountain-hideout at Berchtesgaden. The Alpine mountains, the Germans have hauled their artillery and munitions into that region and have built the strongest kind of defensive positions.

A Stockholm dispatch, however, said the newspaper Dagbladet Nasjonal Samling in the recently-returned Swede who has lived in Germany for the last four years and who lives in the Bavarian Alps have been contacted by Germans who have escaped from Emden, Wilhelmshaven and Bremen and have come by circuitous secret approaches to beyond Hamburg.

Bohemia - Moravia and Norway.

By the rules of the U. S. Senate and House of Representatives members are not permitted to smoke while in session.

Persons in the press gallery and visitors in the public galleries are also forbidden to smoke.

Infractions of this rule keep the Capitol police in the galleries busy.

Members of the House are often seen on the floor with unlighted cigars or pipes in their mouths. Occasionally a member "steals a whiff or two" when he thinks he can nails in the rear of the chamber or keeping his cigar, pipe and cigarette out of sight as much as possible.

But the Senator George Norris, of Nebraska, used to occasionally open the swinging doors at the Senate cloakroom and smoke while standing in the door-way to the floor.

Until 1871, there was no rule on the subject of smoking in the House, In that year what was then the 66th House Rule was amended to read as the following words:

"Smoking is prohibited within the hall of the House or the galleries." John Farnsworth, an Illinois member, rose and said: "I desire to call the attention to not that the rule already?" The Speaker, James G. Blaine, replied: "There is no rule upon the subject. The chair has been operated by a great many gentlemen to prevent smoking in the House, but he has no power."

Tobacco smoking on the floor of the House was indulged in to some extent before the adoption of this rule. In 1836 the clause, "Resolved, That the House be allowed to smoke upon the floor of the House at any time," was added to the rules.

The Senate rules prohibit smoking at all times in the chamber and galleries but also "in the elevators, corridors and basement floor of the Senate Wing of the Capitol."

12 NEW SENATORS

Hon. Thomas Vien, Speaker of the Senate, as Member of the Privy Council; J. E. Perrier, K. C., of Lonsdale, Que., Liberal Member of Parliament for Berthier-Maskinonge, as Member of the Quebec Superior Court for Three Rivers, Que.; Maj. Armand Sylvestre of Roberval, Que., Liberal Member of Parliament for Lake St. John-Roberval, as Deputy Chief Commissioner of the Board of Transport Commissioners and Sqdn. Ldr. Sean Fraser, K. C., Toronto, Liberal Member of Parliament for Toronto Spadina, as Junior Judge of the County Court of York in Ontario.

Surgeon of the Senate appointments was that of Charles Bishop, 63-Year-old Parliamentary Press Gallery Dumont Chief of Southam newspapers who has been in the gallery for more than 40 years. Speculation had been prevalent as who would be appointed to the Upper Chamber, but even as a veteran newsman, Mr. Bishop hadn't suspected he would be one. He Was Called Personally

First he learned of his appointment was in a congratulatory telephone call from Prime Minister King himself.

"I sure was surprised," said Mr. Bishop, adding he appreciated the appointment fully as an honor to the press gallery as well as to himself.

Col. Mr. Bishop, Mr. McDonald and Mr. McLean were chosen from outside the House. All the others were sitting Liberal members of the Commons. The new appointments bring the standing in the Senate to 66 Liberals and 30 Progressive Conservatives, with 4 1/2 seats still vacant.

The political re-shuffling began yesterday when Mr. King announced acceptance of the resignations of five ministers, whose posts he subsequently filled a few hours later. The ministers were Hon. Charles Miller Cowrar, Transport Minister Mcheaud, Navy Minister Macdonald, Secretary of State McLarty and War Services Minister LaFleche. Of these, the speculation that Mr. LaFleche may receive appointment as a Canadian Minister to the Argentine. Mr. Macdonald was expected to return to the premiership of Nova Scotia.

CAUGHT UP WITH WIFE.

Before Nuremberg, Germany, April 12 (AP)—American troops storming toward Nuremberg caught up with the wife and 21-year-old daughter of Fritz Kuhn, former leader of the German-American Bund, in a town north of Nuremberg Monday. Reorganization of Federal Cabinet Brings Total Now to 22 Members

Ottawa, April 19 —(CP)— The Federal Cabinet, increased from 20 to 22 members with the re-organization announced on Wednesday by Prime Minister Mackenzie King, follows:

Prime Minister and Secretary of State for External Affairs — Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King.

Minister of Agriculture — Hon. James Gardiner.

Minister of Veterans' Affairs — Hon. Ian Mackenzie.

Minister of Finance — Hon. J. L. Ilsley.

Minister of Munitions and Supplies; of Reconstruction — Hon. C. D. Howe.

Minister Without Portfolio — Hon. Dr. J. T. King, Government Senate Leader.

Minister of Trade — Hon. J. A. MacKinnon.

Postmaster General — Hon. W. P. Mulock.

Minister for Air — Hon. Colin Gibson.

Minister of Justice — Hon. L. S. Laurent.

Minister of Labor — Hon. Humphrey Mitchell.

Minister of Public Works — Hon. Alphonse Fournier.

Minister of Fisheries — Hon. Ernest Bertrand.

Minister of Health and Welfare — Hon. Brooks Claxton.

Minister of National Defence — Hon. A. G. L. McNaughton.

Minister of Mines and Resources — Hon. J. A. Glen.

Solicitor General — Hon. Joseph Jean.

Minister of Transport — Hon. Lionel Chevrier.

Secretary of State — Hon. Paul Martin.

Minister for Naval Services — Hon. D. C. Abbott.

Minister of National War Services — Hon. J. J. McCann.

Minister of National Revenue — Hon. D. Laurence MacLaren.

Re-organization Was Foreseen.

The Cabinet re-organization which had been forecast during the last week arose from the necessity of replacing several ministers, who had announced their intention of retiring from public life and the necessity for presenting a full council lineup before voters in the Federal election, June 11.

In his re-shuffle of the Cabinet posts, Mr. King injected more youth into the council, with five of the seven new ministers on the junior side of 60. Mr. Glen is 47; and Dr. McCann 56, while Mr. Jean, Mr. Abbott and Mr. MacLaren are 46. Mr. Chevrier 42 and Mr. Martin 41.

New Members Well Trained.

The post of Solicitor-General does not necessarily carry privy council, Mr. King said Mr. Jean will be sworn into the privy council. Mr. Jean has served in the Justice Department as Parliamentary Assistant to Justice Minister St. Laurent who will be absent for some time on the San Francisco delegation.

"It was thought advisable to have the position filled at present," said Mr. King.

The appointments emphasized the great advantage it had been to establish parliamentary assistants two years ago, said Mr. King. The young men now being placed in the Cabinet had been of great help to their ministers and now were thoroughly trained and fit to take over any department at once. They had the advantage of having experience in speaking for a minister on the floor of Parliament.

Some of the Senate vacancies, of which there are 18, as well as other appointments will be filled shortly, perhaps today, Mr. King said. All will be announced as they are filled, but he said there was not sure all could be filled before he leaves for San Francisco tonight.

May be Further Changes.

The new Cabinet lineup, Mr. King said, did not provide a minister for Prince Edward Island, but if the present government was re-turned to office he was pretty sure there would be a minister from the province. He always had tried, he said, to have different parts of the country represented in the ranks of the Cabinet might be necessary later, depending largely on the results of the election.

"There are two things which are all-important," said Mr. King. "One is to have men in the ministry who have had experience through the war and who know the problems which have arisen and the other is that younger men should take on the burdens of office as soon as possible.

"I regard this present reconstruction as especially fortunate for the government and for the country."

Except for the elevation of Mr. Abbott to replace Mr. MacDonald in the Navy Department there were no changes in the defence departments. Mr. King said that happily with the European war ending the problems from now on would not be the raising or forces, but of demobilization.

Mr. King said the future of the new ministers who resigned would become apparent as further appointments were announced. These ministers would not want to be in the Cabinet when appointments to other offices were considered.

Rumor has it that Mr. Crerar and Mr. McLarty will go to the Senate, that Mr. Michaud will be a judge and that Mr. Macdonald will return to his pre-war position as Premier of Nova Scotia. For Gen. LaFleche a diplomatic appointment or the post of Lieutenant-Governor of Quebec may be under consideration.

CHARGED WITH FRAUD

Freeport, Ill., April 19 —(AP)— A 47-year-old woman was named yesterday on federal charges that she obtained money from a young soldier she had never seen by claiming she was the mother and he the father of two "test tube" babies that never existed. The indictment, charging use of the mails to defraud, named Mrs. Carlotta A. Knighton, 47, of Monroe Centre, Ill.

ITALIAN KING'S DAUGHTER KILLED

Paris, April 19 (AP)—Repatriated French citizens who arrived in Paris yesterday from the infamous Nazi Bulkegwald prison camp reported that Princess Mafalda of Hesse, daughter of the King of Italy, was killed in an air raid last Aug. 26 while confined in a reserved section of the prison.

SEXY OBSCENE LETTERS

MOUNTAIN VIEW

Communities Honor PO. Lough From Overseas

Mountain View — The communities of Consecon and Mountain View were well represented on Wednesday evening when they gathered in Ivyleside to honor Pilot Officer Howard Lough, who recently returned home from overseas.

WO James Armstrong, accompanied by Mrs. Arthur Corfield at the piano, conducted a sing-song with everyone joining in on several old and well known pieces. Later in the evening Howard was asked to come forward and an address of welcome was read by Cpt. Leland Sprague. Mrs. Fred Pile presented him with a pen and pencil set, a stick shaped travelling bag, and an envelope containing money.

Although taken by surprise, Howard thanked everyone for the lovely gifts, but even him and she wished to thank the ladies of both communities for so kindly making him loose, which he greatly appreciated while overseas. Everyone joined in singing "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow".

Mr. Davison recently discharged from the R.C.A.F. and now living at Redneyville, spoke for a few minutes explaining the type of work a person could do after he would do while overseas, also congratulating him on his forthcoming operational trips over enemy territory. Rev. E. R. Orser also joined them with a few well chosen words welcomed Howard home again, and wished him luck at his work ahead and in the years to come. Howard reports for duty on Monday at Hagersville R.C.A.F. station, Ont.

Refreshments consisting of sandwiches, cake and tea were served by several of the ladies.

Danchat was enjoyed.

Miss J. Tickell of Belleville, was among those elected to the Executive Committee at the annual meeting, Ontario Division, Canadian Red Cross Society, April 12.

Flt.-Sgt. J. J. Alyea, who is stationed on the East Coast, is spending a three weeks' leave with his wife and two children, Wayne and Sandra, of Rossmore.

Telegrapher C. E. Cook has returned to his duties, after spending a forty day leave with his parents at 34 Benjamin Street.

Miss Helen Pepper is home for a short time from Lethbridge, Alta.

The many friends of Mr. Carter Alyea, of Rossmore, will regret to learn of his serious illness.

Patsy Ann Downes, small daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Downes, North Charles Street, is seriously ill in the Hospital for Sick Children at Toronto.

Importance of Women's Vote Stressed by Pres. Of Ontario Chapt. IODE

Hamilton, April 13 — (CP)—Mrs. Lionel H. Millen of Port Nelson, President of the Ontario Chapter of the Imperial Order Daughter of the Empire, in an address to the 35th annual meeting here stressed the importance of women's vote in influencing the welfare of their country.

It was important that women equip themselves to exercise the franchise intelligently, she told the opening session of the three-day convention attended by nearly 1,000 delegates.

Commenting on the highlights of the year's activities of the Order, Mrs. Millen spoke of the expansion of certain phases, such as the services of welcome and assistance to war brides, and the inauguration of lessons in citizenship for New Canadians.

Mrs. W. S. Smith of Sudbury, Provincial Endowment Fund Convener, officiated at the presentation of members' gifts to a special anniversary endowment fund being set up.

Presentation is Made To Bride and Groom

Friends and neighbors assembled at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Bartman, Frankford, on Friday night to honor Mr. and Mrs. Rhoad Tufts. Mrs. Tufts, the former Miss Hazel Deline, is a teacher in that community. The school children during the evening were in charge of contests, riddles and amusing tricks of magic.

An address signed by friends of S.S. #1, Riverside, was read by Miss Doris Rose. Mrs. Bartman presented the newlyweds with a handsome coffee table and a pair of pictures Mr. and Mrs. Tufts very gratefully thanked that gathering. Everyone present chorused "For They are Jolly Good Fellows". Delicious refreshments were served.

Important Ensemble

By ALICE ALDEN

THE BACKBONE of the busy woman's wardrobe is always the three-piece outfit. It consists of a simple but smartly cut suit with a matching topper. The wise woman knows it does not stop there when choosing such an ensemble but from closing and on the pockets, purchases the best her budget will allow, preferring to write off on clothes. Jackal shows this handsome three-piecer in mustard colored scotch-surfaced woolen. The coat has a box effect and the matching jacket has chevron detail down the front.

The Marry Go Round

Comrades of Tomorrow

Most have accepted co-education not only in business and politics. They have accepted them as playmates, pals and comrades! They have let them into all of those masculine retreats, once sacred from the unerring presence of women—their games and pastimes, their cocktail bars and barber-shops, their smoking-cars and many of their clubs.

When you stop to think of it, this is one of the most miraculous changes of the miraculous Twentieth Century. Such determination and camaraderie of the two sexes!

At one time men took most of their fun in clubs. Lodges, clubs, "smokers", poker-games and fishing trips were the women's most petticoat power. But where are the stag-parties of yesterday? What has become of all those strictly he-man affairs, one so sort of thing, is a case of noblesse oblige to let him in on it. He won't stick around more than a minute, anyway.

The point is that men and women have learned to fraternize and co-operate and to work and play together. I don't claim that this is the best thing in the world for romance or even for domestic happiness. But when the novelty has worn off, it may lead to a better understanding and more companionability between the sexes.

And that sort of comradeship would be the crowning achievement of this century of miracles!

WEDDINGS

MacDONALD—McKAY

A pretty wedding was solemnized recently at Dennistoun Parish Church, Glasgow, Scotland, when Jean McKay, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John McKay, of Alexandra Parade, Glasgow, Scotland, became the bride of Flt. Sgt. Douglas C. MacDonald, son of Mr. and Mrs. Duncan MacDonald, of Belleville, Ontario.

McKEND—IBEY

In Grace United Church parsonage, Trenton, on April 13, Doris Jean, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. Ibey, Trenton, became the bride of Sgt. Donald R. McKend, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. McKend, Cobourg. Rev. G. McKee officiated. The occasion was also that of the 25th wedding anniversary of the groom's parents, the bride presenting her bridal bouquet to the bride of 25 years ago.

The bride wore a floor length gown of white satin with a buttoned skirt of lace appliqued with satin lovers' knots, the finger tip veil of tulle was caught with a sweetheart bandeau and she carried a shower bouquet of Better Time roses. Her only ornament was a beautiful strand of pearls, the gift of the groom.

Matron of honor, Mrs. Frank McKend, wore a charming gown of silk jersey, with matching flower hat and corsage of pink roses.

Frank McKend, brother of the groom, was best man.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, the bride's mother receiving in a heaven blue crepe dress, assisted by the groom's mother wearing a powder blue dress, both wearing corsages of pink roses.

Later Sgt. and Mrs. McKend left on a honeymoon to points west, the bride travelling in an aquamarine suit with matching top coat of beige wool, brown accessories and corsage of pink roses.

TRACEY—CLEMENT

A charming wedding took place on Wednesday, April 18, in St. Andrew's Church, when Dr. Ben A. L. O'Donnell united in marriage Florence Marion, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Clement, to William Lionel MacKenzie Tracey, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Tracey, R.R. 3, Belleville.

The bride was attractively attired in a suit of Queen's blue scoop crepe with fur trim. She was bridesmaid, Miss Veronica Tracey, sister of the groom, wore a similar suit with fur trim.

Mr. Stan Schreider was groomsman.

Following the ceremony, a wedding supper was served at the home of the bride's parents to immediate relatives and friends.

After a honeymoon spent in Toronto, Mr. and Mrs. Tracey will reside in Belleville.

HUFFMAN—HOLLAND

A very pretty wedding took place at Holloway Street United Church parsonage, on Saturday afternoon, April seventh, Rev. J. A. Ohlin officiating, when Doris Lillian, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wellington Holland, of Madoc, was united in marriage to Roy Eugene Huffman, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Huffman, of Corbyville.

The bride chose for the occasion a powder blue taffeta dress, matching headdress and corsage of pink roses.

The groom's attendant was Mr. Harold Hollinger of Foxboro.

A dinner was served to about twenty of the immediate relatives at the Glen Tavern, Belleville.

Friends Honor Cpl. Alf Murray And War Bride

Friends and neighbors, numbering close to seventy-five, met at the home of Mrs. Louis Caughell, 24 Front Street, on Tuesday evening to honor Cpl. Alfred Murray and his newly-arrived Scottish bride, Cpl. Murray, son of Mr. Peter Murray and the late Mrs. Murray, N. Front St., is one of three sons in the Services. He has been overseas in Germany and Holland.

During the evening, seven tables of progressive euchre were played, the prizes going to ladies—Mrs. Harry Crossen, Mrs. Fred Burley, Mrs. R. Murray, consolation, Mrs. Harold Clark, and lone hand, Miss Regina Clark; men's—Mr. Harold Clark; Mr. R. J. Murray, Mr. Fred Wannamaker, consolation, Mr. Moore, and lone hand, Mr. Fred Rodgers. Dainty refreshments were served to the guests by the hostess and assistants.

An address was read by Mrs. Fred Rodgers and Mrs. Earl Mossman and Mrs. Glad Waite carried in a gaily decorated basket laden with handsome gifts. Cpl. Murray and his bride expressed their thanks and appreciation to their many friends. All present extended to them luck and prosperity in their new life together.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

MAKING-UP IN PUBLIC

"It doesn't bother me," said an observing man, "if a girl gives her self a few furtive dabs with a lipstick when we have finished dinner at a restaurant. She no doubt feels she needs a dash of fresh pigment. But when she pulls out a complete set of complexion props, puts on powder, applies around it a rouge pad, moistens her finger with her tongue and passes it over her eyebrows and lashes, that's just too much. The performance does not meet with my idea of good feminine conduct."

His friend replied, "The little lambs do it because they think it calls attention to their particular brand of pulchritude. After all it is of no importance, one way or another. I like the look that a pretty girl has good-looks on her mind, and if she is making herself handsome for my sake, I should be flattered and amused."

Some girls never retouch their complexions before a man; they believe it will disillusion him. Others appear to make a point of doing it. The best argument against the practice is that, with a small mirror and unscientific light, the girls are likely to make a sorry mess of what should be cosmetic art.

Lipstick is not put on neatly and even when one is hurried. The rouge isn't blended, as it should be. Powder from the compact goes on in spots. It may not do to powder room, sit down and do the trick as it should be done? There comes a good mirror and a good light.

If make-up is put on properly in the first place, it will need no retouching for hours. After all, it is not a vice idea to apply it to a soiled skin. Cleansing with an aseptic dust with the powder and rouge pads. By using a foundation cosmetic the powder will be made to stick. Commercial blushes don't look as natural as delible lipsticks can be removed only with soap and water.

If lip-tinting is to be effective, it must be no hasty job. The edges of the lips must define the boundary line, since even the slightest tracing over the line will spoil the tidy. It is not enough simply to apply the pigment. It must be smoothed out carefully — being slightly thicker in the centre of the lips, than at the ends. To obtain a good effect, the lips should be spread in a wide grin, so that substance will be pressed into all the little crases. A girl does not look pretty when she does that, so should do the job in privacy.

Clever make-up is not too revealing. The powder should be slightly darker than the skin tone. Rouge must be only a rosy shadow, placed high in the eyes.

Two Versions Of Pyle's Death

By LIEF ERICKSON

Guam, April 19—(AP)—The task of Ernie Pyle, who twice escaped death while covering the European war, ran out when a Japanese machine-gunner cut down the famed columnist on Ie Jima with a quick burst from his hidden weapon.

Pyle was killed instantly at 10:15 a.m. (9:15 p.m. E.D.T., Tuesday).

The 44th Infantry Division, followed by American soldiers throughout the world, was standing still in reverential commanding officer.

Only yesterday it was reported that enemy resistance on Ie Jima, a 10-square-mile island west of Okinawa, had nearly ended.

(A Blue Network broadcast from Guam by Jack Hooker gave a somewhat different version. Hooker's broadcast, heard in San Francisco, said Pyle was en route to a sector where there was heavy fighting when he was killed.)

Was With LL.-Col. Coolidge.

The reporter was with LL.-Col. Joseph Coolidge of Arkansas, Hooker said, and a Japanese machine-gun opened fire as their jeep rounded a corner.

The broadcast said Pyle and Coolidge died almost instantly, but a few minutes later they peered over the edge. There was another burst of fire and A. E. Pyle was struck three times in the temple.

Coolidge rushed to cover and reported the death, but Pyle's body was recovered some time later.

Volunteers in three tanks were pinned down by heavy fire, but Cpl. Alexander Feinberg of New York City went alone and found Pyle peaceful in death. His face was covered with his helmet and his left hand clutched a Marine fatigue cap. Cpl. Robert led a chaplain and a litter bearer to the scene and the body was returned to American lines four hours later.)

Pyle Hated War.

Pyle, who hated war, once told a friend that he tried "not to take any foolish chances, but there's just no way to stay completely safe and still do your job."

"The front lines get into your blood," he said, "and you miss it and want to be back. Life up there is very simple, very uncomplicated, devoid of all the jealousy and meanness of the final around a headquarters city, and time passes so fast it's unbelievable."

So Pyle, who returned from the European war deadly tired, got back into harness, was accredited to the navy, and went to the Pacific war theatre.

And it was on tiny Ie, where he was with the foot soldiers he worshipped, that death came at last to the famed reporter.

His death was announced by Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz's headquarters, which said Pyle was killed while observing the advance of army and marine troops attacked Island Monday."

Reporting the death officially, the commanding general of Ie Jima Division said: "I have said of the Scripps-Howard correspondent:

"I regret to report that War Correspondent Ernie Pyle, who made such a great contribution to the morale of our troops, was killed in battle on Ie Jima today."

The War Today

Lots of People Would Like to See Most of German People Exterminated

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press War Analyst.)

One of the most unusual questions our column has had submitted is this:

"There are a lot of folk, including myself, who deeply regret that when this war is over there will still be Germans left alive. However, there are others who chide us for this feeling. Will you please explain why we are wrong?"

The question is worth consideration, since presumably it has run through most minds.

First off, one can say that the regret expressed is understandable. This understanding is fortified when we read of such current horrors as the German atrocities at the Gardelegen, Buchenwald and other concentration camps—agency which is enlid compared with the wholesale butchery of the mass graves carried out by German troops in Russia and Poland.

Must Pay Penalty.

The Germans who have been responsible for such atrocities and for any other evil, including the launching of a war of aggression, must pay the penalty. That is one of the chief aims proclaimed by the Allies.

I'll go further and say that it would be a blessing to humanity if some cataclysm should destroy entire Prussian race, It's Prussian militarism which for generations has tortured the world with the aggression that has developed the excrescence of Hitler.

Indeed, all Germans must stand responsible morally for Hitler's inspired crimes, since the people as a whole at least have condoned them. Nevertheless, the Allied governments, and particularly the Russians, have differentiated between the actual war criminals and the mass of the Germans who seemingly haven't been involved in war atrocities.

Allies Give Assurance.

It's only recently that, by way of explaining unconditional surrender, the Allied statesmen assured peoples over Germany, saying that although Germany will be left nothing to do with crimes committed by the Germans themselves, not let the latter to account for those crimes. The Germans, it was assured that "it is the wish of the Allies to give the German people a chance for normal, peaceful development as members of the family of nations."

This was reaffirmed in substance by thought they are in Moscow by the Communist party's propaganda chief, Georgii Alexandrov, who declared:

"The Soviet government never has and does not favor the extermination of the German race. This would be stupid and unthinkable. The Soviet people have never considered the German people and German population, and the criminal Nazi clique ruling Germany."

Now, I suppose that many my questioners may regret that many Germans will be left alive. The Allies are on record as promising that no harm will come to those people as a whole who quit fighting and accept unconditional surrender, in occupation of their country. They are going to be many years, in reparations for the damage that Germany has done—and the huge German casualty list and the destruction which war has brought to them.

I think we are entitled to hope that the German people will be reformed over a long period of years. Certainly the Allies, and particularly the Russians, have differentiated between the actual war criminals and the

TRENTON

Teen-Aged Girl Attacked on Way Home From Work

Trenton, April 19 — While walking home from the Cotton Mill on Monday night about 11 p.m., a young teen-aged girl was attacked on Pelham Street, about four blocks from her home, by an unknown assailant. The attack was a most severe one as she was knocked to the ground, and the consequences would have been more serious had she not put up a gallant fight. She tried to scream and her attacker put his hand over her mouth and threatened to kill her if she made a noise. In the fight she got his hand away from her mouth and was able to utter a piercing scream which frightened him away. Neighbors who heard her screams went to her aid and the girl was taken to her home.

About half an hour later a married woman going to her home on King Street, passed a young man near the corner of Dundas and Queen Streets. She noticed that he was unnecessarily observing her and she started to run. He ran after her and while running north on Queen Street a motorist who just got into his car turned his lights on and the woman made for the car. This motorist knew the girl and took her to her home. After dropping her at her home he came back out on Dundas Street with King and observed the same young man running west on Dundas. He immediately reported the matter to the police station and police started a search, but after an hour search failed to locate the assailant.

From a description given a member of the Trenton police force remembered that early in the evening he saw a stranger talking to a Trenton boy. Next day this boy was questioned with the result that that alleged assailant was apprehended and will appear in court. As he is a minor his name will not appear in print, but it is understood he had escaped from a correctional institution.

Now Reported Safe.

Reported missing last July and later reported to be a prisoner of war in Germany, Lieut. J. E. Davis is now safe in Allied hands according to a cable received by his wife who lives at 25 Albert St.

Lieut. Davis who is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Davis, enlisted about four years ago with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment and served for some time in Canada before leaving for overseas about a year ago. He arrived in England where he was one of several Canadian officers loaned to the Royal artillery and reported missing after arriving in France.

Moscow to carry out with Mr. Molotov the Big Three agreement reached at Yalta to weld a new regime that could start the process of presentation at the San Francisco meeting, to form an international peace-keeping organization.

Few here think Mr. Molotov will be able to get any final answer for his government without consulting Mr. Eden and the British Dominions leaders apparently has stood firm in the demand that, before an agreement, the Soviet-supported Warsaw Polish government be reorganized in the United Nations meeting.

That was reported the tenor of a new note Mr. Stettinius said yesterday he had received from Russia. He did not announce he contents.

Britain and the United States are reported to have made similar demands and there is every indication that President Truman intended to adopt a firm policy toward further Moscow requests.

Big Three Leaders May Take Hand in Settling Dispute

By JACK BELL

Washington, April 19 — (AP) — Prime Minister Churchill, President Truman and Premier Stalin may take a direct hand in an effort to settle the dispute over a new Polish government before the San Francisco United Nations conference opens April 26.

This development appeared in the making today as it became known that attempts by a three-nation commission have failed and the matter has been passed to a meeting of the top-rank foreign ministers here this weekend.

The question of forming a provisional governmental broadly representative of all factions of Poles will be No. 1 on the agenda when Foreign Secretary Stettinius and Foreign Commissar Molotov meet tomorrow or Saturday.

They are expected to receive direct reports from W. Averell Harriman, American Ambassador to Moscow, and Sir Archibald Clark-Kerr, British envoy there. Sir Archibald and Mr. Harriman arrived by plane last night. Mr. Molotov is en route.

The British and United States ambassadors had been seeking in

Stirring Tribute Paid British by RSM Angus Duffy

Picton, April 19—A stirring tribute to the people of Britain, and especially to the United Counties of Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, was paid by Regt. Sergt.-Major Angus Duffy of Belleville at the local Kinsmen Club Wednesday night. Duffy spoke with an inspiration to Canadian home and Canadian unity. It weren't concerned over their sacrifices, he declared.

Duffy spoke of the Hasty P's as being second to none, and recalled their famous achievements, especially those at Assoro in Sicily and at the Moro river.

Introduced by Chairman A. E. Grindrod, J. Harkwicke, A. F. Brown, F. G. Ward, Major John Arnold, R. Attersley, E. J. Williams. Officers chosen, committee: A. E. Grindrod, vice-president, R. Attersley; Treasurer, (2 years), secretary, George Rose; Sgt.-at-arms, A. Henaman.

Leagues in Function.

Softball and hardball leagues will function in the Picton district this year. An organization meeting was held Tuesday night. The league executive is well for the success of the season. A further meeting will be held to draw up schedules and complete final details.

In the hardball league teams have been entered by Picton HCAF, Wellington Model and Picton.

Hardball club officers are C. B. Whitfield, president; William Bell, secretary-treasurer; Sgt. Tester, HCAF, manager of team. Elected Glenn Cerow, Picton, Arthur Corke, Bloomfield, members of the executive.

It is expected hardball games will chiefly be twilight fixtures, to open about May 24th. Elmer Cerow generously offered to finance the purchase of uniforms for the Picton team.

Softball League.

Officers elected for the softball league are, Norman Mallett, 'president; Creighton Lockyer, secretary-treasurer. Team representatives are: Frank McKee for Kinsmen Club; Ed. Reese for the HCAF, Gerald Welsh for Bat Lake and Mike Kinnaman for Picton. Umpire-in-chief is C. O. Rutter.

It is expected the softball schedule will be about May 18, with games two nights a week, Tuesday's and Thursdays.

Seeding Nearly Completed in Hastings County

As result of the abnormally early spring a number of farmers in Hastings county had completed sowing operations by the end of week. It is stated in the weekly crop report, issued by the Ontario Department of Agriculture. Early grain is up and is showing a good even stand, although there is still considerable seeding to be done in some districts.

General cheese factories began operations for the summer season during the week. Weanling pigs are in strong demand by farmers and are selling up to 50 each. Experienced farm help is very scarce.

Prince Edward County: It is estimated that approximately one third of the seeding operations had been completed by last week-end. Farmers are in a position to offer cash by farmers for supplies, including seed grain, fertilizer and insecticides for the control of orchards.

A carload of springers was shipped to New Jersey, while cattle were reported to be selling very well. Milkers continue to be in demand. Some young cattle have already been turned out to pasture. In the summer months, it is reported.

Three Armies Finish One Phase of Thrust

The 14th Army Group Headquarters, April 18 (AP)—Gen. Bradley said today his U.S. 1st, 3rd and 9th armies have finished one phase of the thrust into the heart of Germany and "it is now necessary to temporarily before we go into the next."

"Let the Germans guess as to what the next is going to be," the American general said.

Bradley said that in his opinion, will not be through until we have occupied all of Germany.

REICH LOSES ABILITY

Washington, April 19 (AP)—Germany has lost, Virtually, all ability to wage mechanized warfare through destruction of most of her oil refineries, air force spokesman said yesterday.

Act Like Kids As Kinsmen Fags Arrive at Front

"No one knows just how we feel when we get cigarettes from home. Actually we sons time act like kids on Christmas morning, only more so. I have been lucky enough to receive cigarettes from the Kinsmen in France, Belgium and Holland before returning to England for a rest, but Canadian cigarettes are always welcomed by the boys." Pte. J. Allsworth of the R.C.A.S.C. wrote to the Kinsmen Fag Fund recently.

"If those sending cigarettes over here could see the smiles on the boys' faces when they receive packages of smokes from home you would realize what an important job you are doing," added S. P. White, R.C.A.F., while scores of other Belleville servicemen personal thanks to the Kinsmen, through Chairman Buster Lewis, for their efforts to send their sons of the Kinsmen Fag Fund the Recreation After workers donated $80.00. Corby's bottling department added still another contribution and it is donations of this nature that assure the continued flow of cigarettes overseas.

Status of Von Papen To Be Determined

London, April 15—(Reuters)—Richard Law, Minister of State, said in the House of Commons today it is a matter for consideration whether Franz Von Papen, German diplomat and former chancellor, now in Allied hands, is to be named as war criminal.

"So far as I know, Count Dino Grandi, at one time Benito Mussolini's ambassador in London, has not been nominated, if that is the term, by any Allied government to the distinction of war criminal," Mr. Law added.

CHARGED WITH WOUNDING

Toronto, April 19 (CP)—Clifford Watson, 36, was charged with wounding yesterday after Alwyn Thompson, also 36, was taken to hospital suffering severe facial injuries caused by cuts from an axe. Police charged Watson attacked Thompson with the axe in the course of an argument over room rent.

Mess Room Chatter Of Canada's Airmen

With the R.C.A.F. Overseas, April 19 —(CP)— First R.C.A.F. pilot to take off from the first Allied airfield in Germany on an operational flight was Flt. Lt. Sam Cromie (R.C.A.F.) (325 Partington Ave.) Windsor, Ont.

Cockburn dies with an R.A.F. rocket typhoon squadron and the night took him to the Rhineland Hallean area where the Typhoons wiped out a train.

"It was a very smooth take-off from Germany, and said the RCAF lieutenant. "A few weeks ago we caught a whole lot of mechanical transport along the road nearby after having strafed gun positions just around the corner. Now we're flying here."

Claiming to be one of the oldest crews in the matter of age in the R.C.A.F., are the seven Bison squadron airmen who teamed up to fly the Halifax bomber "M" for "Mother" a veteran of 96 trips, on its last flight with their outfit.

Youngest man in the crew was 22-year-old P/O. D. D. Fallon, navigator from New Jersey, and the second youngest was the pilot, Flt. Lt. J. L. Brown of Dunnenny, Sask.

Other members, were a 33-year-old wireless operator air gunner, 33-year-old flight engineer, 36-year-old bomb aimer, 27-year-old rear gunner and 40-year-old mid-upper gunner.

First Canadian to shoot Port Dakota, Manitoba, was P/O. S. A. Pettit of (97 Murray St.) Brantford, Ont. While Pettit and crew still were seeking out Japanese in the big enclosure, he went in to strafe the train in the Sandoway-Akyab area where the Typhoons wiped out a train.

Since completing a tour as pilot of a Hurricane last December, P/O. Pettit has been attached to headquarters of Maj.-Gen. Rowe, commander of the 10th Indian Division whose troops liberated the Burma city.

Pettit's job of using radio to achieve pinpoint accuracy in air attacks is a new departure for the Burma war theatre. From selected vantage points in front-line positions, the visual controllers observe the targets for bombing and inform pilots of particular spots which need attention.

"When we first started directing the strikes on Monday we set ourselves up in the racecourse grandstand," said the flying officer.

"Then we looked back and there was the infantry advancing behind us. No repeat hillside! I'm no hero.

British Sub Collides with U-Boat Sixty Feet Below the Surface

London, Eng., April 19—Collision between a British submarine and a German U-boat 60 feet below the surface has been revealed.

H.M.S. Seraph, commanded by Lt. N. I.A. Jewell of Exmer, Middlesex, had just surfaced at nightfall when a German sub was sighted on her starboard bow and coming directly at her.

"We immediately dived and went to a considerable depth," Lt. Jewell said. "We were bringing her up to periscope depth when a collision occurred at 60 feet. There were three heavy bumps. We immediately surfaced and signalled a submarine's periscope a hundred yards on our starboard beam."

The Seraph dived again, hoping to carry out a submerged attack, but eventually lost contact with the enemy. Her bow was buckled and some of her torpedo tubes damaged.

The Seraph is the "secret mission" submarine which in October, 1942, landed General Mark Clark on the African coast to meet French leaders—a meeting which provided an important preliminary to the Allied landings in North Africa.

Is 100,000-Mile-an-Hour Rate Possible for Rocket Plane?

Los Angeles, April 18 —(AP)— A rocket plane flying 100,000 miles an hour 100 miles above the earth!

Sounds fantastic. Maybe it is. But 42-year-old Hugh L. Hibbard, vice-president and chief engineer at Lockheed Aircraft Corporation, says plane designers right now are putting finishing touches on jet-propelled craft that conceivably may travel that fast and that high.

"There is no problem connected with the use of jet propulsion that either has not been solved or cannot be solved," Hibbard told reporters in an interview.

Hibbard pointed out that the German Messerschmitt 163 has no propeller, merely being propelled by limited fuel capacity and stratosphere pressure.

"If the cockpit could be pressurized for comfort and the fuel problem solved," said Hibbard, "such a rocket could fly to the moon."

Prisoners Liberated Forced to March 35 Mi. in 28 Days with Four Days' Rest

(By FLT.-LT. SAM CROMIE R.C.A.F.)

Bournemouth, Hampshire, England, April 19 —(CP Cable)— "Good Friday"—Yanks take over, I am a free man at last!"

This final entry in the pocket diary of an R.C.A.F. wireless operator air gunner tells the dramatic end to months of prison life in Germany and a grueling 35-mile March from within shelling distance of the Russians in eastern Germany to Bourbon for the Americans in the west.

The entry was made by WO Norman Brown of Turnolo, a member of the first large group of liberated R.C.A.F. air crew to return to this country en route to Canada. With more than 30 comrades who shared the hardships and horrors of prison-camp life, the 23-year-old gunner now is resting in a former holiday hotel here. The group arrived in Britain by plane after American forces swept through Stalag 8A at Zeigenhain.

"We will never forget that morning," said WO. Lorne Coat of Montreal, who was shot down in August, 1942. "We were lying in a big field —most of us were pretty ill by then —when we heard guns firing and soon after the clatter of tanks.

"The German guards had left shortly before. The Yanks got to us K and C rations and we piled into them like wolves. Then they were sick as dogs since the change from dry bread and biscuits was too much for our stomachs."

The prisoners reported their long march westward started Jan. 22 at Stalag 344 near Lesslau. Twelve days later the long column arrived at Gorlitz, 160 miles west. The men had been given one day's rest during that leg of the journey.

A week later the men were ordered to move again and on March 26 the "remnants" of this group staggered into Riesenbain after marching 20 miles in 36 days with only four days' rest on the way.

The liberated fliers repatriated to England, all warrant officers, include: John Denver, (23 Gilkinson Ave., Brantford, Ont.); Kenneth Morrison, (64 Elm St. S.) Timmins, Ont.; D. B. Patterson, (170 7th Ave. E., Owen Sound, Ont.); R. W. Earl, London, Ont.

Turbulent Hindoo Disqualified In Main Bout with Red Vagnone After Nearly Winning Match

In Semi-Final Morgan and Wagner Battle 30 Minutes to Draw

Nanjo Singh, that turbulent Hindoo mystic, have been the principal behind Ivan Rasputin becoming the heavyweight champion of Toronto's Maple Leaf Gardens on Tuesday night, but last night 1,100 local wrestling fans bowed with glee when the Mad Hindoo was disqualified in his bout with "Red" Vagnone, the California Rooster.

It all came about after each of the principals of the night had gained a fall. Now it seems Singh has a particular dislike for wrestling referees, but he had never encountered Referee Eddie Fox before, well, that is not in the extent of exchanging body blows with the local wrestling arbiter. On part of all up Singh scowled, as only a turban-less Hindoo can, while his forehead is suggested anger, when Referee Fox cautioned Singh relative to using the ring ropes for leverage purposes while in the act of application of a step-over-toe-hold. When Fox broke a swell entanglement up, Singh refused to go over straight, but true, right to Fox's puss and down went the third man in the fracas, a high sign that was some harder object. Let's say the ring post for the absence of a baseball bat.

Referee Shows Metal

That was enough for Mr. Fox's little boy Chiefie, who staggered to his feet and delighted the exuberant patrons by raising Vagnone's hand in token of victory, while disqualifying Singh. Under the impression nobody loves me is Referee Singh attacked Fox as the fans swarmed the ring to glee with Vagnone rising to the occasion as Otto Haro always does) and the California Ace-head proceeded to put Singh some of his own Marhara medicine, which Singh just could not swallow as he left the ring mumbling something about "—can beat the Russian and that's more than Hitler can do."

When it came to sustained action, however, it was the semi-final bout between "Tree" Morgan, who is now a Canadian by adoption, and Bob "Strangler" Wagner, the Portlahd Octopus, to spell terrific slowdown. For 30 minutes these two human pachyderms applied all of their scanty knowledge with Wagner, the old ruffian, all but dissecting Morgan an at times. However, by retaliation, Morgan used some of that rough applied science of ring warfare and was all set to continue his attachache appeals to the referee for suggestions. He received plenty of verbal encouragement against the long-haired Wagner before the finish fell ended matters just after Wagner had pitched Tree for a two-yard foot outside the ring, but the referee had was stop matters as the time limit ball sounded. Skipper Tommy could make himself a pile of the "mumuks" bringing this affair back over a long limit.

Booked Man in Blue

In the main affair Referee Fox was the busiest man in the square as Singh opened hostilities riding in the crest of victory on the first (the beardless) Rasputin. However, Vagnone settled matters to win the first round with his famed "Hollywood Headlock" hold. The second round still appeared as though Singh and Fox were the principals as they all took part in the fracas. Fox repeatedly warned the Hindoo regarding the use of ring ropes for leverage purposes. Singh did manage to even matters with a step-over toe hold and actually thought he had the only hold applied in the final round, but he was stop matters as the time limit ball sounded. Skipper Tommy could make himself a pile of the "mumuks" bringing this affair back over a long limit.

AGE AND YOUTH READY FOR GRIND OF MARATHON

Lieut. Frank Flood of Signals Corps at Kingston Will be an Entrant

By BILL KING

Boston, April 19 —(AP) Age and youth in the capable marathoning personages of 37-year-old Johnny Kelley of West Acton, Mass., and Charlie Robbins, 24-year-old U. S. Navy entry and a recent University of North Carolina track star, will be the favorites when the field of about 50 of the starting gun in Hopkington at noon today for the Boston A.A.A. 26 miles-385 yards classic.

This tensil endurance event generally is cluttered with former winners but, because of the war, Kelley will be the only such to get a triumph to his credit. Just 10 years ago today, the little fellow led the pack over the killing, hilly course in two hours, 39 minutes, seven seconds. Since then Kelley has finished second five times and, in the last two years, was runner-up to Gerard Cote of St. Hyacinthe, Que., the three-time winner now fighting overseas.

The co-favorites have the greatest respect for such experienced rivals as Floyd Evans of Montreal and dainty Receiver of Preston, Ont., the best of the 13-man Canadian delegation.

Newcomers seldom attract any pre-race interest but this year a young Wahoo Fraser, a full-blooded Mohawk Indian from Niagara Falls, N.Y., created much interest with his silthe promise to break the Canadian record.

He will be called upon to run the fastest 26 miles-385 yards in history to uphold his boast, for the 2:26.51 mark, held by retired Joe Smith of Medford, still stands as the world's best mark for that distance.

The Canadian entries include:

Robert E. Randles, Preston, Ont., representing the Sunday Morning Class, Toronto.

Cpl. Alistair B. Cameron, Woodstock, N.B., entered from New Brunswick Club.

A. B. Morton, Galt, Ont.

Lieut. Frank Flood, Royal Canadian Signals, Kingston, Ont.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By FRED KERNER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, April 19 —(CP)— Tomorrow and Saturday there will be a gathering of the clan as officials of the Ontario Baseball Association gather in Toronto for their annual conclave. Main item on the agenda, under the heading of old and new, will be a plan of management whereby one man will connected with any club—will act as chairman of a committee composed of the presidents of every loop affiliated with the Ontario body.

This proposed set-up, favored by top-man President Herb Berault, would allow every club to run its own affairs. (A welcome idea in any man's language.) Under the plan—if adopted by the meeting—a club could use as many American players as they wished during the season. And when playoff time rolled around only Canadian ball players in Ontario loops has long been a bone of contention and the proposed solution does have some backing. Maybe some of those pressing troubles will be solved this weekend.

In passing, we learn that Percy Forsehi will be opposed by two men in the coming election for O.B.A. presidency.

Gerry's the Berries:

Young Gerry Courtne, the University of Saskatchewan student who flew east ostensibly to play for Moose Jaw Canucks in the Memorial Cup finals against St. Mike's, has caused a bit of comment since he turned out with Detroit Red Wings for two games in the Stanley Cup finals.

Rumors fley thick and fast, commencing the end of one week and the Gerry lined up with the Wings for two games and made a good showing for an 18-year-old in his first professional start. But he has been forced to return immediately to Saskatoon to complete his medical school course, which, we hear, has played the balance of the junior series with Canucks.

Past President Frank Selient of the C.A.H.A. called an executive meeting in Toronto at the time—gave approval, despite what has been said to the contrary. Gerry only played two pro games—and in the last he injured himself enough shoney to put him through his next year's at College—but the lend-lease arrangement allows for three pro fulls before amateur standing is affected.

One of the sharpest critics of the whole affair is Tony Allen (Toronto Tribune) Allen who chides the pros who—not content with "ruining" senior hockey—debauch junior hockey (Dunlop-Memorial Cup-Allen Herald). Appel jumped the gun this week and lauded the C.A.H.A. for their action in declaring Courtne "ineligible for the Memorial Cup competition." We did not such thing.

Whether they are right or wrong seems to be a matter of opinion!

THREE TEAMS ANSWER CALL TO SOFTBALL MEET

City Softball Heads Discuss Possibility of Floodlight Utilization Field Grounds Favorable Report Heard

But three teams answered the initial call, for the organization of men's softball last night in the city, when the Belleville and District Softball League was organized, and officers elected. At the suggestion of Mayor Ellis, however, another attempt will be made to get the league here, Wednesday night.

The three clubs represented included last year's league champions, the BACO "Marines", Point Anne "Greenies" and a new entry to the form of the strong No. 8 Repair Depot nine of the R.C.A.F. Showing a keen interest in the discussion though present were of the opinion that it would be best for the local junior softball team was vitally interested and would undoubtedly be procured before the annual election of officers next week. Efforts to interest the Montreal and Toronto "Greenies" into affiliating were also discussed, though it was pointed out that teams from the armed services in Canada were not eligible for provincial championships.

Commissioner Harry Rollins, of the Belleville Parks Board, was present to announce the Board was negotiating to install floodlights for softball at the Pair Grounds, in 1945. Already the Parks Board has approved such a project, commission regarding the financing of such a proposal, was met with favor and will subsequently be presented before the City Council for final approval. Mr. Rollins was of the opinion that floodlight softball would be a decided asset in the assimilation of interest of men's softball in Belleville.

What's Doing in Sport

(By The Canadian Press)

The Chicago Black Hawks and St. Louis Cardinals are assumed a new angle in their National Hockey League battle. M. O'Connor, chairman of the war-time committee, today announced the demand of the brothers for early interviews from Red Dutton, Black Hawk owner, referred to the office of war mobilization. Meanwhile, the Chicago battery declared they would remain with the second split a ruling is made.

O'Connor said—it was the first time a baseball salary dispute involved the wage-setting regulations and it was Defense President Ralph Bunche of the St. Louis Club might be called to explain why he has offered $13,000 each of the brothers after signing them for $13,000.

Larry Drake, with Elmira last year, and Jim Houck, with Lancaster, Pa., both outfielders, were released yesterday by Toronto Maple Leafs of the International League by Pohaufsky, manager.

The first Dominion Juvenile title of the Canadian Amateur Basketball Association will be decided at Montreal this week when T.M.I.A. of that city take on New Waterford, N.S. Friday night. Latter eliminated Woodstock, N.B., last night with a 37-27 victory in the semi-final round.

With a record last year of 12 wins against three losses, Ernie Bonham, veteran pitcher, resigned yesterday to play with New York Yankees although he has all of his offering with an injured back.

In its quarterly list of ring rankings, the National Boxing Association last night at Washington still has Billy Conn at the top of the heavyweight division with Billy Conn as leading contender. Danny Maloney, Chicago boy now doing his fighting in England, was named one of the contenders in the welterweight class the champion of which is Red Cochrane. There were only a few minor changes in the ratings.

CASUAL COMMENT
by K.J.C.

All Even.

A rival of "Rob" Burns says: "My wife's name and I were married, looked so much alike that no one could tell us apart. One day in school my brother threw spitballs, and I was punished. My brother was arrested for speeding, and I spent three days in jail and paid a fine. My wife's girl friend and my brother ran off with her. But last night I was even with him—I died, and they buried him."

For the Oldsters.

Local sport fans of 20 to 30 years ago will remember Jimmy Brown, soccer of parts and trainer of hockey and baseball teams, who in his day was a tower of strength in provincial sporting circles. Some years ago Jimmy migrated to the State of New York, N.Y., where he opened a news and tobacco store, and has become interested in semi-pro, ball in the Alexandria Bay area. This year, Mot. long ago, we read somewhere in a provincial daily where, Niagara Falls, N.Y., had applied for membership in the Ontario Baseball Association to play in the Niagara Peninsula League. Now along comes Bill Cayley, Niagara Falls (Canada) Review to reveal that the Yankee Falls team will be headed by none other than Jimmy Barry, the former Bellefille Sportsman player and friend of the writer. Jimmy, as he was trainer of the Bellefille Cricket Club when they blazed a trail, never to be forgotten in the baseball horizon of all this province. From 1911 all through the "roarin' 20's."

Bill Cayley says, very fair: "Despite his absence from the country for about 15 years, Mr. Barry has kept well posted on all from sport doings over here. Back in the days of amateur and professional hockey at the local Arena, the stocky little man was a constant attendant at all games, and he has set in—more than the baseball season in the peninsula. In later years, he has kept abreast of Amateur and professional Canadian League hockey and International League baseball. Mr. Buffalo, while he was close to doings generally" hasn't lost the editorial office of the over-river Many group."

Baseball Booms.

Fred Dufton, who headed the Cobourg "Red Raider" rugby football team when he was here, write to say baseball is coming back in the Northumberland County, a junior league being sponsored by the Cobourg Lions club that town. Fred also indicates Port Hope baseball mentors are also interested in the idea, a project now in the air, to get back into provincial competition. Brighton, too, has a 45-team juvenile baseball league, while Colborne is organizing a minor league ball for three years back. However, here in Belleville we have fall in the light and are floundering about with old crocks and never-was players! However, if President Jack McVeigh can get the support of the city fathers, such a plan may be submitted whereby the Belleville Baseball League can introduce a plan whereby baseball will be available to the teen-agers with adequate supervision and coaching.

Branching Out.

With three outside clubs in the fold, Percy McVeigh's city baseball league has closed affiliations with seven teams. The local quartette includes Brown's Bread (juniors), Intermediate Optical Aliens and Balance, with Bata Shoe, Lake Shore and Cobys A.C. being the outside nines in adding Wall Gerow, Jack Yan-

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 668
By SAM GORDON
Of the Kibitzers

Maybe you think I talk too much. But several readers seem to feel I should say more about how to show the length or suits. So, here we go again.

Not far back I told about a hand with two suits; six cards and a four carder. The six carder was bid twice and then the four carder was bid. So I said the twice-bid suit showed six cards.

A kibitzer's kibitzer whispered: "Your book says a rebiddable (twice bid) suit may have five cards. Why do you now say it shows six cards? Is you is or is you ain't mistaken?"

It is true that my book says a twice bid suit shows at least five cards. But it does not say: When one suit is at least two cards longer than the other, bid it twice before bidding the other.

Maybe you can see it better if I show you this hand:

♠K 9 3 ♥7 6
♦A K J 8 5
♣6 5 2

You first bid the hearts. A once-bid suit shows at least four cards. So, your partner assumes you have a four card heart suit at the moment.

On the next round, you bid hearts again. A twice-bid suit shows at least five cards. So, your partner assumes you have a five card heart suit.

On the third round, you bid diamonds. Having bid diamonds only once, your partner assumes you have a four card diamond suit. But what does he now learn about your heart suit?

You have bid one suit twice before bidding your other suit. It means that your first first suit is at least two cards longer than your last bid suit. Consequently, you must have at least six hearts.

But a rebid suit sometimes shows five cards. That makes you wonder how partner knows when you have only five hearts and four diamonds.

And it gives me something else to talk about.

My poor typewriter never seems to get any rest.

TORONTO LEAFS OPEN SEASON WITH NEWARK

International League Officials Expect Large Attendance in All Cities

By JOE REICHLER

New York, April 19.—(AP)—With Jersey City once more in the way, the International League was hopeful of getting a new opening day season and record lodge at the Shaughnessy circuit inaugurated its 82nd consecutive season.

Frank J. Shaughnessy, president of the loop, the oldest minor league in existence, predicted that approximately 75,000 fans would attend the four games, three afternoon affairs and the other at night.

With good weather, Baltimore and Syracuse expect to set new attendance marks in their parks. Advance sales indicated that the Orioles, who play Montreal, would double their attendances high of 16,440 in 1938, and that the Chiefs would better their best mark of 7,613 the same year, by about 3,000 when they tackle Buffalo.

Shaughnessy was optimistic over the player strength of the league and predicted that the standard of play would be comparable to pre-war days.

With new faces the keynote all over the league, the clubs are pretty evenly matched and Shaughnessy predicted a close pennant race.

Toronto, which plays at Newark, shapes up as the team with the most formidable pitching staff, with veterans Lefty Hamlin, Alex Mustaki, Harry Seibert and Tom Ananias back.

Red Wings' Sights Trained on Frank McCool, Shutout King of the Series

Detroit, April 19. (CP)—Toronto Maple Leafs and Detroit Red Wings will clash here tonight before an expected 13,500 spectators in the fifth game of their eight-point Stanley Cup final series.

Victory for the visitors would give them the World's Hockey Championship for the first time since 1942, when they won the title by 6-2 in goals, and 3-1 in games.

Red Wing sights will be trained on Frank (Mr. Shutout) McCool, sensational rookie net minder, who set a new play-off mark in the first three games of the series by hanging consecutive 1-0, 3-0 and 1-0 shutouts on Detroit before bowing before a 5-3 count in the fourth game.

Toronto defence in front of the former Calgary sport writer has been tighter than a drum most of the way, but Manager Jack Adams has been sending his Wings through workouts emphasizing plays to drive the Leaf defenders.

Yesterday Adams said he was confident his squad could come from behind for their fourth Stanley Cup in ten years, but added: "We'll have to get some breaks and at this stage we can't make mistakes."

Precedent for a wing victory is the 1942 championship series in which Toronto dropped the first three games to Detroit but came back for four straight victories and the title.

A Wing triumph or a six game tonight would send the teams back to Toronto Saturday night. If a seventh game is needed, it will be played here Sunday.

Say Graf Spee Sunk To Save Nazi Prestige

By FRANK LOWE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London April 19—(GP)—After 8 1-2 years, the Royal Navy reports officially that the German pocket battleship Graf Spee was scuttled in the outer reaches of Montevideo harbor because Hitler personally derided the Nazi ship could not afford to be beaten in a stand-up fight by inferior British forces for reasons of national prestige.

Official sources here say that when the raider dashed into the Uruguayan refuge her skipper, Capt. Hans Langsdorf, immediately put on the trans-Atlantic telephone to Hitler. By that time the story of the chase down the South American coast was headlined in every newspaper, so Berlin decided too much unfortunate publicity would result if one of their pride ships fell victim to a trio of pygmy cruisers.

On the basis of that decision naval tacticians are willing to credit propagandists with an outer on the bill, but no more—rather a blow to the fighters-with-words who had stuffed their bedsheets as proof of the effectiveness of the German weapon.

Their story is that when the Graf Spee entered Montevideo and the six-inch Ajax and Achilles, under the then Commodore H. H. Harwood, C.B., considered the battleship Dec. 18, 1939, they prodded her heavily-armed Admiralty into releasing the story immediately.

From then until Dec. 17 when the Graf Spee committed suicide in a spectacular pall of smoke and flame at the mouth of the River Plate they ballyhooed the story was facing.

TROUT FLASHES FORM SHOWN IN PAST SEASON

Scores Seven-Hit Shutout in His First Start of the Year

By JACK HAND
(Associated Press Sport Writer.)

Dizzy Trout's strong right arm looms as important in the American League scheme of things this season.

It did last year when the talented Detroit pitcher won 27 games in a pennant bid that missed fire by one game.

Critics who feared Trout might have burned out his salary drive in 1944 by overwork hurling 352 innings in 40 games got the answer in yesterday's seven-shutout joy of the defending champion St. Louis Browns. Dizzy never was in trouble in the 11-0 victory.

Threat to St. Louis from another quarter was seen in the New York Yankees' newly-found ability to stage big game-winning innings. The old Yank habit was sadly lacking last season but the 1945 version copped their opener from Boston 8-3 with a five-run, 10th inning that bowed rookie Ken Wilson.

Rose City schoolboy's 1-0 verdict over Washington must have done Connie Mack's heart good. Christopher turned in the masterpiece of the infant season by scattering seven Senator blows over 10 innings.

Bill Kennedy score-saved pitching for Chicago's White Sox in relief during in half the scores for Cincinnati with a perfect three for three game.

Van (The New) Mungo had to get relief help from Joe Adams who received credit for the New York Giants' 8-4 victory over Boston Braves.

Chicago White Sox idle at Cleveland yesterday by cold weather and Chicago and St. Louis in the National was not scheduled.

Ike Williams K.O's Juan Zurita In Two Rounds

Trenton, N.J., Negro Recognized Champion of N.B.A. Lightweight Title Holder

Mexico City, April 19. (AP)—Ike Williams, 24-year-old Trenton, N.J., slugger, held the N.B.A. lightweight championship today after knocking out Juan Zurita in two rounds last night in the Mexican bull ring before a crowd of 20,000.

A crowd of 20,000 paid an estimated $150,000 to see the fire-minute bout.

Williams and Zurita were to have clashed in Philadelphia but the scrap was rejected by the Pennsylvania Commission which recognized Bob Montgomery as the 135-pound king. New York has turned down a proposed Zurita-Bobby match for the same reason.

The young negro, who got his first big boxing experience fighting for "corner nights" to sell newspapers in Trenton, carried the scrap to Zurita from the opening gong. The Mexican held him off during the first round but could not stand up under Williams' two-fisted attack to the finish in the second night.

When the referee had counted 10 over the fallen Zurita, the excited throng milled around Williams' corner and a dozen policemen were called in to clear the scrap before the new champion could leave the ring for dressing room.

Although Zurita at 133 pounds had a ten-pound advantage on Williams he proved no match for the power-laden fists of the Trenton scrapper who was getting his first crack at a championship after five years of pro ring work.

It was Zurita's first title defense since he took the crown from Sammy Angott at Los Angeles more than a year ago, although he had lost a non-title bout to Beau Jack and appeared in numerous overweight matches. Williams twice trimmed Angott.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was standing around the letter box with Glasses Magee and Skinny Martin and they started to have a argument sounding as if it might turn into a fight if they weren't careful, Skinny saying, Hay, who are you calling a long legged beanpole?

I'll give you three guesses who I'm calling it to, and I'm not calling it to Benny, I'll tell you that much, if you want a hint to help you guess, Glasses said, and Skinny said, Well then I'll give you 4 guesses who I'm calling a 4 eye monkey face, and I'm not calling it to Benny and I'm not calling it to myself, so that's a dubble hint to help you guess.

Me thinking, Oh boy, a fight. And I said, Good night, Glasses, are you going to stand for him calling you that, 4 eyes, Skinny, are you going to stand for being called anything like that?

Saying it to both of them to prove I was neutral and didn't care who won in case I got in the fight and Glasses said to Skinny, Just tell me I'm the one you meant when you said 4 eye monkey face, go ahead and tell me, I dare you, and Skinny said, You go ahead and tell me I'm the long legged beanpole you were talking about, That's all I'm waiting to hear, he said.

Go ahead and tell him, Glasses, go ahead and tell him, Skinny, I said, and Glasses said, Hey, what's the idea of you butting in all the time?

Sure, who asked you anything? Skinny said, and I said, Well good night what's a matter, I'm sticking for you both ain't I? I'm only a neutral, I said.

Who said we felt like being cheered? Glasses said, and Skinny said, All I feel like is a punch in public scene fresh guy around, and Glasser said, Me too, and it might as well be him.

CHAPTER 23

"I'm beginning to understand," said Basil slowly. . . ." But how did you ever come to enter his employ?"

"The war made Nicholas rich, and the revolution ruined me," Sergei spoke with fatalistic detachment. "I was once a landowner and a captain of the Chevalier Guards. . . . We met, as he told you, at the Bureaus des Etrangers in Nice. I was trying to get my permis re travail renewed, and he heard me give my name. What a meeting! I, the father, poor and old and broken. He, the illegitimate son, rich and successful. . .

"When he was born, I provided for his mother, a peasant girl, according to her station in life. I thought I had acted generously. I was stupid in those days. I didn't realise what he has since taught me, that material comforts count for little when the heart is sore with humiliation. He has paid me back in kind. He has given me every material comfort — food, clothes, shelter and high wages. But on one condition — that I should be a servant to him—my own son. How could I refuse? I need hardly tell you how difficult it is for a man of my age, a friendless alien without commercial training, to get a job of any sort anywhere. My two legitimate sons were killed in the war, but a grandson remains. He must be educated somehow, and my wife needs care. These high wages make it possible. My discomfort is purely mental—just as Danine's boyhood his discomfort was purely mental. From his point of view, it is a most delectable situation. You heard the way he spoke to me? He is slaking a hatred that went thirsty for many years!

"When he was about twelve years old, he ran away from his mother's village. Naturally, it never occurred to me then to educate him above his mother's station. How he managed to live after he ran away, I don't know—for he had no money. But he picked up some sort of education somehow and he made money."

Basil set down the glass he had been holding. "You probably know more about Danine than any one else in the world. Do you believe that he loved Kitty Jocelyn enough to murder her if he discovered that she loved someone else?"

Sergei shook his head.

Then his blue eyes filmed over as if he were looking at something far away. "I see. You came here this evening because you thought I hated Danine enough to spy on him."

"It never occurred to me you were his father."

For a while Sergei was silent, sipping his brandy. Basil did not hurry him.

Sergei said at last. "I suppose it will help your investigation of this case if I throw a little light on Danine's real attitude toward Kitty. Wait!"

Sergei left the room, and returned carrying a box of mahogany red leather tooled in gilt, with the Imperial Russian eagle.

"Danine is very careful to destroy all his private letters and papers when he is through with them," said Sergei. "But, as a valet, I have exceptional opportunities. I have been collecting scraps of paper from his desk, and the pockets of clothes he gives me to press for some time. He is a an of many secrets, and if I were to find anything of real value that I could hold over his head he might be induced to give me a pension and let me go back to my family. What is the ugly English word? Blackmail! A thing no gentleman would ever stoop to. Well, I am no longer a gentleman and I find that is very convenient."

Sergei unlocked the leather box with a small, gilt key. It contained an extraordinary collection of unrelated odds and ends. There were telegrams, business letters, social notes and memoranda.

Sergei fished among them until he found a sheet of pale green note-paper with a dark green border. Diagonally, across one corner, was printed the name "Susy" in fac-simile handwriting, also dark green. It was covered with fine, spidery handwriting and the words were French.

"I suppose this is from Mademoiselle Susy Comminges of the Theatre d'Harlequin?" asked Basil.

"Oh, you know that much? Then he read the letter. It was received yesterday."

The fragment began abruptly:

". . . and how I laughed at your description of the way this incredible Madame Jocelyn has pursued you and dangled her blatant stepdaughter before your nose! Her subterfuges are so threadbare! Her contortions to make you believe the poor girl an heiress are worthy an acrobat! Truly, my friend, I do not see how you preserve your grave face in such circumstances of comedy!

"Well, I, too, can act off stage. Ambrosine d'Eze came to see me the other day and to tell me with infinite delicacy that she was so sorry to hear that you had left me and were going to marry a young American—an heiress, isn't it? Like you with the reporters, I pulled a long face and sighed and shrugged and said, 'Ah, these men!' and so on—like a deserted woman. How furious she will be, poor child, when you return and we are seen together again. My dear one—please make it soon! She does so miss you—

"Your Suzy."

Basil laid down the sheet of green paper, took the dispatch box on his knees and sorted the amazing collection of odds and ends. A sheet of thin white foolscap was covered with typewriting mimeographed in purple ink and it seemed to be part of a report made by experts, who had been testing a new explosive, to the directors of the American Shell Company, in which Danine was a shareholder. It was also a fragment and began abruptly:

"Page 13.

". . Shelling by six of these Wertheim-Lacaze 100cm. guns, loaded with shells of this type containing P. D. 30—60 devasted the small sector selected with accuracy in 6.05 minutes, and we venture to claim that any body of men occupying the position, whether fortified or not, would have been out of action completely.

"As already noted, (see page 6, this report,) P. D. 30—60 is a modified type of shellite, with a new, third ingredient, and it has two notable advantages over the other aromatic explosives: (1.) It explodes at far lower temperature; (2.) It throws shell fragments nearly twice as far, creating a truly formidable amount of damage.

"Without wishing to be unduly optimistic, we feel safe in affirming that P. D. 30—60 is the ideal explosive for this purpose.

"The commercial possibilities of the invention also are most satisfactory. It is cheap to manufacture and, as we and our foreign affiliates have exclusive knowledge of the formula, we are in a position to secure a reasonable profit on all sales for some time to come."

The typewriting ended at this point but some one had written a note on the margin in ink:

"I may add that already a rumor of this new explosive has sent American Shell up fifteen points, and it is expected to go higher. I confidentially anticipate a new wave of prosperity for our shareholders.

"As the law stands, shipments of P. D. 30—60 can be exported from the United States until the President proclaims a state of war in South America. After that, orders will have to be filled by our good friends, the Corporation de Municion de Argentina of Buenos Aires.

"When the minister from Montenriques placed his order for P.D. 30—60, he. . ."

Basil frowned. Was it a clerical error? Colonel Esteban y Cordoba was from San Fernando — the country that was arming to defend itself against the attack of Montenriques. It was he whom Pasquale had seen with Danine. It was he who had driven away with Danine that morning, according to the police. Basil felt certain that Danine had taken Esteban to the American Shell Company's plant to demonstrate the new explosive to him. The accident reported in the evening paper had occurred at the testing grounds. It all hung together. . . .

Except for one thing. Esteban was from San Fernando, and this report spoke of the minister from Montenriques as the purchaser of P. D. 30—60. . . .

Suddenly Basil struck the table with his hand. "I have it! How obvious it is once you have the clue!"

Sergei stared. "You are more clever than I, if you can make anything out of that report," he said.

"And you a former officer of the Chevalier Guards!" exclaimed Basil. "Did you ever hear of the cordite scandal?"

"Oh, I think I do remember—"

"Of course you do it's the oldest and most famous trick of the munition industry's super-salesman — selling a 'secret' formula to both sides at the same time. San Fernando and Montenriques are both paying a handsome royalty for the 'exclusive' use of that P. D. 30—60—just as Russians and English both paid handsomely for the 'secret' of cordite in the nineteenth century.

"It's not the minister from San Fernando who is insisting on secrecy, but Danine himself. And it isn't the formula he wants to keep secret, but the sale of the formula to both sides. He has already sold it to the Republic of Montenriques."

"That is why Danine was willing to go to almost any lengths to ensure absolute secrecy for this deal with San Fernando. He chose America, an ostentatiously neutral country, as the scene of negotiations and he paraded his devotion to Kitty publicly in order to provide the insatiable newspapers with an explanation for his sudden visit to America. He even tried to make love to Kitty at the dance, so she, too, would be deceived and act her part in the farce convincingly. Nothing must be published that could rouse suspicion in either San Fernando or Montenriques. The San Fernando orders for P. D. 30—60 will be filled by one company, the Montenriques orders by another, and few people will realize there is any link between the two companies—except for the fact that Danine 'happens' to be a shareholder in both. . . . Later when San Fernando soldiers find the enemy using the same explosive, it will be so easy to explain:

VALUABLE TO JAPS

It is estimated that between 40 and 50 per cent of the professional Japanese soldiers have studied English, and that 25 per cent speak it efficiently.

Success Indicates Lessening Enemy Resistance in Area

Calcutta, April 19 — (CP) — A British spearhead in Burma, pushing south into the Chauk-Yenangyaung oilfields area on the east bank of the Irrawaddy, has captured Singu and Chauk and enveloped Sale, an Irrawaddy steamer station, a Southeast Asia communique announced today.

The successes indicated a lessening enemy resistance in the area. Chauk, an oilfield town 25 miles southwest of Packku, was taken in an encircling movement from the south and east. To the north, Singu fell after an air blow which softened up enemy defences in the southern sector of the city. A British column overpowered the remaining Japanese and plunged on southward against slight opposition. The Japanese appeared to be withdrawing along both banks of the Irrawaddy.

South of Meiktila, meanwhile, the extent of advances by armored columns still was cloaked in security secrecy, but progress was said to be satisfactory.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, April 19. (CP)— The mining groups were down slightly at noon but they were inclined to rally a bit in the early afternoon. Industrials had an index gain of .17 at mid-day. Volume was smaller at 1,200,000 shares for the first three hours.

Louvicourt was a feature around noon changing hands in volume at a gain of 20 cents to $1.75. Kerr-Addison and Elder were gainers. Giant, Quemont, Macassa, Donalda, Eldona, O'Brien and Trans-Resources were weaker in the early period and a little stronger late. Senator held around 80 to 85.

Labrador and Hudson Bay were stronger base metals.

The Utilities, Senior Oils and Foods were slightly higher industrial groups.

LIVESTOCK

Toronto, April 19—(CP)—There were no cattle sales on the livestock market early today. No price was established for hogs which closed previously at, dressed, grade A $17.85 grade B1 $17.45. No calves sheep or lambs were offered. Receipts by the Dominion marketing service were: cattle 20, hogs 40. Unsold from yesterday were 200 head of cattle.

HOGS

Toronto, April 19—(CP)—Prices were unchanged at bacon-hog markets reporting early today. Dressed, grade A, delivered: $17.75; London $17.80; Hamilton $17.75; Stratford, to farmers $17.60 to truckers $17.75.

Two Wars Have Cost Belleville Mother Husband and Four Sons

A husband and four sons has been the contribution to the cause of civilization in two wars by Mrs. E. Moreau, 8 Victoria Avenue.

Yesterday the announcement of the loss of her fourth son Corporal Lorne Moreau RCAF was cabled Mrs. Moreau by RCAF Headquarters. He had been reported missing since September, 1944. He is now officially presumed dead, according to the cable.

The late Corporal Moreau joined the RCAF over five years ago and served in Canada until August 1944. He had been overseas a bare month when he was reported missing. According to information received here, he took off on a bomber bound for Sardinia. The aircraft never arrived at its destination.

Mrs. Moreau can proudly boast of the fact that ten of her family of thirteen have worn the uniform of the armed services in the first and second world wars. Her husband, Edmond, and three sons Ted, Bert and Bob gave their lives during 1914-1918, while Jack the fifth member of the family in the first war came back.

In the present struggle, Ned has been with the RCAF for five years; Charles is with the army at Camp Borden; Ken. is with a non-permanent unit and a daughter, Mrs. Minnie Gilbert served two years with the Canadian Women's Army Corps, and is now discharged.

The late Corporal Lorne Moreau leaves a wife and two children who reside at 85 Pinnacle Street.

Butter Production 10.8 Per Cent Higher

Toronto—Production of creamery butter in Ontario during March was 4,962,900 pounds, the Ontario Department of Agriculture said yesterday. This represents a 10.8 per cent increase over the same period in 1944 when output was 4,481,000 pounds.

Cheddar cheese production was 2,351,800 pounds, compared with 1,990,900 pounds in March, 1944, or an increase of 18.1 per cent.

The amount of milk used in manufacture of creamery butter and cheddar cheese during March was 142,521,000 pounds, or 12 per cent more than in March of 1944 when 127,201,080 pounds were used.

Garage Operators View Demonstration Amateur Wrestling

Amateur wrestling with all the finesse of professional grunt and groan artists provided the entertainment at the regular monthly dinner meeting of the Hastings and Prince Edward Garage Operators Association held at the Y.M.C.A. Wednesday evening. Approximately 40 members of the organization attended and saw two high school youths display their ability in the wrestling demonstration.

Guest speaker for the meeting was H. W. Temple, supervisor of training within industry who outlined this newly organized educational system and which is being adopted in Ontario vocational schools. Mr. Temple also answered questions of association members.

W. S. Turner of the Belleville Collegiate and Vocational School also addressed the meeting and spoke on educational guidance as well as on how the local collegiate had applied training within industry. Under the new training scheme students of vocational schools are given practical experience at business places along the lines of their particular study. Mr. Turner also expressed his regret at leaving Belleville at the end of June to take the principalship of the Brantford collegiate and vocational school.

President of the association Mr. Percy Dulmage presided over the meeting and by odd coincidence was the winner of the door prize which was drawn for by Mr. Norman Smith of the local collegiate staff.

MARMORA

District Deputy Churcher Visits Masonic Lodge

Marmora — Right Wor. Bro. J. L. Churcher, D.D.G.M., of Hastings and Prince Edward district paid his official visit to Marmora A.F. and A.M. No. 262 on Monday evening, the occasion being marked with the attendance of a large number of visiting brethren from Belleville, Stirling, Havelock, Madoc and other lodges. At 7 p.m. a banquet which called forth tributes from all speakers was held in St. Paul's parish hall, the Ladies' Guild of that church being the caterers. Wor. Bro. L. M. Johnston, W.M. of Marmora Lodge was toastmaster and after the toast "The King and the Craft" had been submitted, called upon Right Wor. Bro. C. H. Sharpard, D.D.G.M. to propose the visit Lodge". The proposer in his remarks, gave an exposition of the composition of Grand Lodge. In his report, the D.D.G.M. drew attention to the fact that the name of the district had been changed from Prince Edward to that of Hastings and Prince Edward in honor of the regiment which had an distinguished itself in this way. Following some more interesting observations, he gave a very fine address on "the Aims of Masonry." The toast to Visiting Brethren" was handled by Wor. Bro. H. G. Barlow, the replies being made in the lodge room towards the close of the lodge session. Bro. Clarence Bell gave the Junior Warden's toast, after which adjournment was made to the lodge room. The initiation of a candidate was carried out in a manner which was favorably commented upon by the distinguished guest of the evening. Right Wor. Bro. Churcher also had words of praise for the hall and its furnishings and gave another excellent address in which he drew attention to the work of the order.

Hepburn Speaks At Peterborough

Peterborough, Ont., April 28—Hon. Mitchell F. Hepburn, Ontario Liberal Leader and former provincial premier, said here Tuesday night that the paramount problem now challenging the people of Canada is to afford to men and women returning from the war the "opportunities and conditions of life" they have earned by their long service.

Addressing the annual convention dinner of the Eastern Ontario Rehabilitation Committee, he said: one means to this end is the Federal Family Allowances Act which provides the necessary stronger financial background for families to give children the education which "the era is bound to demand."

The C.C.F., he said, was a result of the depression years of the 1930's but it does not follow that the people of Canada "intend to accept the reactionary policies and regimentation which the socialism of the C.C.F. would adopt."

Canada, under the necessity of winning the war, had manifested capabilities which could be translated into the future. A primary lesson of the war had been that promotion of good will and understanding throughout Canada was an essential condition to continued growth of the country.

White's District

White's District— Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Meyers opened their home on Wednesday evening for the April meeting of the Bayside Women's Missionary Society. The meeting was presided over by the President, Mrs. Glenn Meyers. Following the singing of "Take My Life and Let It Be", the Rev. A. C. McCallum led in prayer. It was moved that $5 be donated to Mrs. Hooper's Memorial. Delegates named to the W. M. S. Presbyterial were Mrs. H. Rutter and Mrs. Glenn Meyers to represent the W. M. S. and Mrs. O. Wilson and Mrs. Leonard Young to represent the Maskin bands. There were 9 members and 5 visitors present.

The remainder of the evening was spent in the form of a bazaar, including fish ponds, sale of home-cooking and miscellaneous donations. A group of teen-aged girls called the Explorers' Group under the leadership of Mrs. L. Hunt made novelty layet ornament and pot-holders for the fish pond. Several stores also made donations. Almost $30 was realized during the evening, $6.60 for refreshments and donations, the balance for Mission Bands.

Refreshments were served by the hostess and assistants which brought to a close a very pleasant evening.

LT. COL. MERRITT, V.C., ARRIVES IN SCOTLAND
RUSSIANS 6 MILES INTO BERLIN'S OUTER DEFENCES

Within 13½ Miles Of City's Limits On the Northeast

Reach Proetzel, Strenebeck After a Gain of Six Miles

By RICHARD KASISCHKE

London, April 20 — (AP) — The German high command admitted today that the Russians had smashed six miles into Berlin's outer defenses to within 13 1/2 miles of the city's limits on the northeast and 18 miles on the east.

In a six-mile gain from captured Wriezen, the German communique said, the Russians had reached the area of Proetzel and Strenebeck on the northeast.

In a similar lunge southwest of Muencheberg the Russian 5th Shock Army infantry were reported to have fought to the area of Templeberg and Buchholz, 18 miles east of the capital.

Two towns named Buchholz on the outskirts of Berlin caused temporary confusion in reports of the Russian maneuvers. One is seven miles north-northeast of the capital, but the quarter of the German communique indicated the other Buchholz was meant.

Southeast of the capital, the 1st Ukrainian Army scored a similar success, Berlin said, pushing west 16 miles from captured Cottbus on the Spree, and bursting into Calau, 43 miles from Berlin and 50 miles from United States 1st Army diagonal lines at Wurzen.

Drive a Wedge.

The smash to the Buchholz area was from captured Wriezen. The Russians drove a wedge between threatened Berlin and Stettin, and northeast of the capital, said Muencheberg, 17 miles east of the capital, and German broadcasts described the battle as "now taking place in the 'main defences of Berlin'".

The Germans' central reserves now have been thrown into the "murderous battle at the gates of Berlin", said the enemy radio accounts.

The campaign southeast of Berlin "broke through the Spree river defences as well as the Neisse line farther east and outflanked the Spree Wall, a region of lakes and forests along the Spree which had presented the most formidable obstacle defences of the capital in that direction.

Virtually turning their back on the American forces poised along the Elbe west of Berlin, the Nazis said the Germans said they were throwing forces conserved for fire and vengeance into the "hell of fire, steel and blood" raging along the outer defenses of Eastern Berlin.

Declare Battle Being Fought.

The decisive battle of this war is being fought in an inferno of flame, destruction and the most hellish noise ever heard," the German broadcast said in describing the battle.

German troops have started counter-attacks, mainly south of Frankfurt, on both sides of the Oder, south of Cottbus the account added. The Germans previously had reported 15 bitter battles going on as are within 30 miles of Berlin—in Russia hands."

German counter-measures in the states area are directed against the flank of a ledge in the Cottbus-Forsberg-Weisswasser area, it said.

The Russian high command, without disclosing details of the broadening attempt, said fresh forces had crossed the Oder east of Berlin in addition to those at Neisse with the capture of Fore, Muskau and Weisswasser, 18 to 25 miles southeast of the capital.

By Berlin account, the forces of the 1st Ukrainian Army had driven to at least 32 miles west of the Neisse at Muskau, bridging the Spree and advancing nine miles beyond to the encircling ramparts of Hoyerswerda, within 26 miles of a junction with American troops.

The Germans said the greatest tank battle of all time was in progress on the Russian front south of the capital and asserted 1,074 Red army tanks had been destroyed in the first three days of the battle which they announced had begun last Monday.

"It is our fanatical will not only to maintain the present order of Russian losses but to increase them so much as to extent that the Russians once and for all will lose the desire to take Berlin," a German broadcast said.

Engineers Help Canadians Speed Into N. Germany

With the 1st Canadian Army, April 20 — (CP) — A bridge over the bitterly-contested Kusten canal today lent power to the Canadian 4th Armoured Division's drive for the approaches of the German North Sea ports of Emden and Wilhelmshaven.

Working under enemy fire, Royal Canadian Engineers yesterday bridged the 50-foot water barrier, where Canadians gained a bridgehead Tuesday seven miles southwest of Oldenburg, and another bridge was pushed across the river in the Oldenburg area.

In heavy fighting the Canadians made limited gains yesterday against opposition which seemed to be softening somewhat and the bridgehead, last reported 1 1/2 miles long, was extended.

Above Ontario infantry crossed the canal to join forces from northern and central sectors in continually operating there. As the troops advanced from the bridgehead they came under machine-gun fire from nearby villages.

In the fighting, into which battalions of German sailors have been thrust as infantry, held the spotlight on the long Canadian front as Gen. Crerar's British and Canadian forces in Holland were blocked temporarily by a German flood barrier.

To the west of the Canadians' Kusten bridgehead, the Polish 1st Armored Division crossed the canal at its western extremity and advanced nearly a mile up the highway to Emden, about 30 miles to the northwest.

Across the Ems River, meanwhile, the Canadians were reported to hold a German hold-out force of 1,000 men opposite Emden. The enemy commander, in telephone contact with the Canadians yesterday, turned down a surrender ultimatum.

Allies May Need Bigger Occupation Force in Germany Than First Expected

By WES GALLAGHER.

Magdeburg, Germany, April 20 — (AP) — A far greater army of occupation than originally planned in terms of the punishment necessary to date. Even with the vast number of Allied troops now in Germany, the task of administering the territory already overrun is proving much more difficult than anticipated.

Germany now is a festering sore in the heart of Europe, hosting a political misery unheard of in modern history. Twelve years of Nazism and hatred are bearing a cancerous fruit which can mean nothing but years of trouble ahead.

No one knows this better than Hitler, and he has the organization and machinery to deal effectively with the millions of released slave laborers and prisoners of war. There is widespread looting, not only by the displaced persons but also by Germans trying to get their hands on food and clothing for the dark days ahead.

Not Enough Food.

Hitler has been to try to keep these millions in camps until they can be fed and sent home, but there is not enough food to feed them; so they forage and wander up and down the highways.

Life is worth nothing. People die on the road, in barns, in the fields, in jails, abandoned warehouses, everywhere. No one bothers to bury them. No one knows who they are.

Every type of disease, pariticularly typhus, is being carried by these nomads.

Cannot be Spared

Troops cannot be spared for this job. For instance, one combat division contains a staff of 5,000 men, one day. If it had left four men in each town to preserve order, a battalion of fighting men would have been tied up. Besides, few Allied combat troops speak German. Russian or Polish — virtually a prerequisite for selection from problems are to be handled intelligently.

Finding it impossible to do everything, the combat troops have done the best they could, and it is only in the last few days later before military government has arrived.

Much difficulty has been experienced because of the lack of personnel and machinery to deal effectively with the millions of released slave laborers and prisoners of war. There is widespread looting, not only by the displaced persons but also by Germans trying to get their hands on food and clothing for the dark days ahead.

Not Enough Food.

Hitler has been to try to keep these millions in camps until they can be fed and sent home, but there is not enough food to feed them; so they forage and wander up and down the highways.

CANADIANS FACE WAR'S TOUGHEST TASK IN HOLLAND

Within Last Few Days Germans Flood Many Square Miles of Dutch Homeland

By ROSS MUNRO
(CP War Correspondent)

With the 1st Canadian Army, April 20 — (CP Cable) — The Canadian Army faces one of the most difficult operations of the war—to liberate the rest of Holland.

This enemy-held territory is threatened with catastrophe if the Germans continue to employ flood defences to retain their hold on Fortress Holland.

Within the last few days the Germans have flooded or saturated hundreds of square miles of Dutch farmland. Fighting spans the north of Amsterdam and immediately south of the Zuider Zee. Amsterdam is under 12 feet of water which reaches in like a tidal wave from the Zuider Zee when the enemy blew up 300 feet of dike.

Between Utrecht and Amsterdam about 30 square miles is under 3 feet of water, and between Amsterdam and the Zuider Zee miles of country have been inundated so that no attack could be made over it except in amphibious vehicles.

South of Utrecht along the Neder Rijn another area was beginning to be flooded.

Strikes Under Unbelievable.

This is only the start, by reckoning to use of all the Dutch flood defences, the Germans can create inundate practically all the Netherlands seaward of their main dikes. Twenty-five per cent of Rotterdam and Amsterdam may be made unhabitable.

With wanton disregard for Holland's future, some of which they have plundered as they have done

FRONTIERS CLOSED

London, April 20, (CP) — The Swiss radio said that the Federal Council had ordered the eastern and northern frontiers of Switzerland closed to "all unnecessary traffic" and advanced nearly a mile up the highway to Emden, about 30 miles to the northwest.

CABINET GIVEN INCREASE

Charlottetown, April 20—(CP)—Salary increases varying from $1,000 to $2,000 were granted to the Premier and members of the Cabinet of Prince Edward Island, it was announced in the legislature yesterday.

"CHAIRING" THEIR LIBERATOR

Overjoyed with their new freedom these happy Russian exiles, a U. S. Ninth Army soldier to their midst, "chair" him over the grounds of their former prison camp at Redbitzle, Germany.

"POWER BOMB" FAST AS SOUND NOW BEING USED

Designed to Penetrate Thick Layers of Concrete Over Sub Pens

London, April 20 — (CP) — A new rocket-propelled "power bomb" which is faster than sound was announced today.

A joint communique by the Admiralty and the United States Strategic Air Forces said:

"Rocket-propelled bombs, conceived by the Admiralty, were used by R-17 Flying Fortresses of the United States Air Force on the attacks against E-boat pens at Ijmuiden, Holland, Feb. 16 and Mar. 14.

"The bomb was designed to penetrate thick layers of concrete and it is known that several hit and pierced the roofs of the E-boat pens and are believed to have caused considerable damage to facilities inside."

Rocket propulsion gives the bomb a much greater speed than would be attained by gravity alone. The speed of sound is 1,100 feet a second at sea level. The bomb is set to explode after deep penetration.

Sailed for Defence

The Japanese were fighting back from interlocking trench and pillbox systems, blockhouses, earse-and other extensive dug-in positions. The extremely rough terrain was well suited for defensive tactics.

Hours before the big drive started, battleships, cruisers and other fleet units, marine and army artillery and rocket-firing Marine planes poured thousands of tons of shells and bombs into the enemy's deep line of defences.

The bulk of a Japanese Okinawa garrison was estimated at 65,000. That 60,000 troops likely has been added since the discovery of the southern sector. Naha, with a population of 56,000, is four miles behind the fighting front. The nearby Naha airdrome is the largest in the Ryukyu chain.

Nearing Success.

Manila, April 20 — (AP) — American infantrymen seized the 44th and 45th islands of their Philippines invasion Wednesday. Capture of one, Balabac, put them only 40 miles from Borneo. Simultaneously, the other, tiny Carabao in Manila bay, wiped out a Japanese force of 300 to 500 Japanese troops.

Elsewhere in the Philippines, today, no announcements were made.

Japanese counter-attacked with tanks in the Bicol area sector of north Luzon but were repulsed.

U. S. troops on Mindanao advanced 20 miles from their new beachhead at Bernardo, 13 air miles of Davao.

YANKEES LAUNCH ALL-OUT PUSH ON OKINAWA ISLAND

Three U. S. Divisions Hammer Fiercely Defended Enemy Positions on 4-Mile Front.

Guam, April 20 — (AP)—A powerful American offensive, supported by heavy naval and artillery shelling, today was under way in full fury against elaborate Japanese defences across Okinawa island.

Three U. S. divisions — possibly 40,000 troops — were hammering fiercely-defended enemy positions along a four-mile battlefront before the capital city of Naha.

Breaking a 13-day virtual deadlock in the south, the 7th, 27th and 96th divisions launched their all-out push early yesterday and by noon had scored gains of 800 to 900 yards on both flanks. The advance was slowed in the centre.

The U.S. 10th army's big push pitted the greatest American offensive force ever assembled against a single sector in the Pacific war against the best-defended Japanese line yet encountered.

Targets Are Battered Almost Full Length Unoccupied Germany

London, April 20 —(CP)— More than 2,000 United States planes zeroed out over almost the entire length of unoccupied Germany today, bombing mainline railways ahead of Allied armies from the outskirts of Berlin southward to Prague and Bohemia.

The 8th Air Force dispatched 800 heavy bombers and 600 fighters on the morning sweep and medium bombers and divebombers of the U. S. 9th Air Force had completed more than 400 sorties before noon.

The day operations followed another double night raid on Berlin by R.A.F. Mosquitos.

The destruction of the American heavies hit objectives within 15 miles of the enemy capital, and others attacked points ranged in a wide arc from the north, west and south sides of the city.

Weather Forecast

Lake Superior—Moderate to fresh winds; fair and moderately cold today and Saturday.

Eastern and Bailey River—Cloudy and moderately cold tonight and Saturday.

Manitoba—Cloudy and moderately cold. Saturday, partly cloudy; not much change in temperature.

AMERICANS FIGHT FOR KILL IN HEART OF NUERNBERG

British Tanks Strike Within Mile of the Suburbs of Hamburg, Stuttgart Enclosed

By JAMES M. LONG

Paris, April 20 (AP)—Americans of the 7th army fought for the hill in the heart of Nuernberg today after crashing through the old walled surrounding city from the east. Germans and British tanks struck to within a mile of the suburbs of Hamburg within point-blank artillery range.

The French 1st army attacked 20 miles southeast of Strasbourg to Rotweil, 14 miles from the Swiss border and 36 northwest of Lake Constance, western limit of the National Redoubt in southern Germany. That Position was 26 miles north of Switzerland.

The whole Allied right flank including the fronts 1st and 3rd United States 7th and 3rd armies was clamping down on the enemy National Rail Hub, Hitler was believed observing a gloomy 56th birthday in Berlin.

Stuttgart—like Nuernberg a Nazi over-running city—was enclosed on three sides.

Big Prizes Await.

U. S. 3rd army elements inside Czechoslovakia, within three miles of Pilsen, were a bare 30 miles from surging Russian Reds and gravely threatening the last important German rail artery to the Pilsen-Prague region, 75 miles to the south.

"The decision is very near," said Propaganda Minister Goebbels on the "grave days" of disaster.

In Nuernberg Hitler would have spoken to the Nazi faithful in the days they took the city in, for more or less quiet manner. "Of course," Mrs. Merritt said, "they knew all about their daddy from hearing us talk."

But Peter wondered about it all. He looked up into the smiling face of his proud and happy mother and queried: "Well, why isn't daddy here?"

Mrs. Merritt stated to the Ontario Intelligencer that according to information received from overseas, her husband was flown from Germany with three fellow prisoners of war. Two were Canadians, a Gerry Wood, Vancouver, and an officer from Toronto. The other was a Scottish officer named Walker.

Col. Merritt and his friends had been confined in the German prison camp Oflag 6C, recently overrun by American troops.

That some movement of the prisoners of war was afoot was suspected by Mrs. Merritt when she received the last letter she received

Former Associate of Ernie Pyle Pays Tribute to Greatness of Newsman

By HAL BOYLE

Near Linz, Austria, April 20 (AP)—The first time I saw him he was lying in a foul double bed in a cold and drafty Third Reich Gran, mopping his nose and gently coughing all the people who had reported that Africa was a warm country.

He was just a shrivelled little patch of a man with thin white hair and a face like wax. He looked like one then. He wanted a handkerchief and a farm when he returned to the west of the Susa Canal and when I gave him mine he thanked me with a "Say! I had handed him the meritage on a gold mine. That was late in November, 1942.

In January, 1943, I saw him again in the Grand Casino in Tunisia. We slept next to each other on dumpy flea-ridden piles of straw under the doubtful protection of a tent and we be shivered and said how we hated Africa. By then I knew he had fallen in love with the inhabitants.

He loved comfort and hated cold, but he learned to live in the field like the doughboys he wrote about. He carried the same number of blankets and slept on the ground beside them under shelltire — and they were in their early 20s and he was in his early 40s.

The chalk dust of daily raked over the doughs but head and people wanted to read about their boys and he had no rest.

At Anzio he nearly lost his life in a bombing raid. He never overcame the dark feeling of terror it left in him, but he drove himself again and again to expose himself to frontline danger because he knew he could never write honestly of the terrible loneliness of battle unless he shared it.

The capture of Paris finished him for a time. He went home and made a movie out of his first book and then returned to become a best observer. He was independently wealthy now and wanted to quit, but his conscience wouldn't let him. He didn't give a damn about the money he made, but he really felt he owed it to the doughboys to go on telling their story as long as there was a river to be crossed or a hill to be taken.

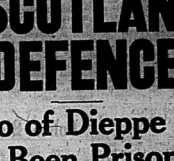
So he went to the Pacific zone.

He won't be coming back from the Pacific this time. Nobody will know where any oldtimers never acknowledges a soldier ever died.

"He's just been transferred to another outfit — we'll be running into him again some of these days."

Not since Richard Harding Davis has there been such a journalistic legend, but Davis never reached the soul of the fighting man as this quiet man did — funny, funny, frightened, deep-hearted, eloquent, unforgettable Ernie Pyle.

Hero of Dieppe Has Been Prisoner Since August, 1942



First Canadian Soldier To Win Coveted Award

Lieutenant-Colonel Cecil G. I. Merritt, first Canadian soldier to win the coveted Victoria Cross, and a prisoner of war since the famous Dieppe raid, is safe at Frogwick, Scotland, his wife, the former Grace Rose, was informed by telephone today.

The information was relayed to Mrs. Merritt by telephone from the Canadian Red Cross branch in Montreal, who were advised of Col. Merritt's arrival in Scotland, after a overseas survey by transatlantic telephone.

According to a relative of the family, Mrs. Merritt's brother circled the globe field of the Scottish town and a few minutes later Lt.-Col. Merritt and three fellow prisoners of war alighted on Scottish territory for the first time since August, 1942. The news was immediately flashed by London and a few minutes later to Mrs. Merritt.

Mrs. Merritt, when interviewed shortly after news reached her by the newspaper reporters, "They told me," she said, "to not worry if I don't hear for a few days. But I'm so happy that I don't care if I don't hear for a few days, so long as I know that I don't have to worry any more."

Lt.-Col. Cecil Merritt, V.C.

See Ada 'Why Isn't Daddy Here?'

Six-year-old Cecil and five-year-old Peter, sturdy young sons of the Dieppe hero took the news in a more or less quiet manner. "Of course," Mrs. Merritt said, "they knew all about their daddy from hearing us talk."

But Peter wondered about it all. He looked up into the smiling face of his proud and happy mother and queried: "Well, why isn't daddy here?"

Mrs. Merritt stated to the Ontario Intelligencer that according to information received from overseas, her husband was flown from Germany with three fellow prisoners of war. Two were Canadians, a Gerry Wood, Vancouver, and an officer from Toronto. The other was a Scottish officer named Walker.

Col. Merritt and his friends had been confined in the German prison camp Oflag 6C, recently overrun by American troops.

That some movement of the prisoners of war was afoot was suspected by Mrs. Merritt when she received the last letter she received from him was dated August 21st, 1944. Mrs. Merritt, sister of Mrs. Merritt was so happy at her sister. "Of course," she said, "we knew that glorious news" she said, Mrs. Merritt's son and collected but there was an undercurrent of excitement in her voice as she spoke with newspaper reporters. Mrs. Merritt spoke a bit about her self as one of the good news. "It's wonderful" was his terse comment.

PTE. BERTRAM STAPLEY REPORTED WOUNDED

Mrs. and Mrs. A. Stapley, 36 Johnson street have received word from Ottawa that their son, Pte. Bertram Stapley of the Glengarry Highlanders, has been wounded in Germany and a letter from the chaplain states he was slightly wounded in the left arm. Pte. Stapley enlisted in 1941 and trained in Brockville and Ottawa. He went overseas with the 59th battalion and transferred to the Glengarry Highlanders. Before enlisting he was employed by the Canada Packers.

POLICE COMMEND MOTOR DRIVERS

It may be the result of the fact that "brain fag" sets in at the end of a lengthy week-end, but motorists seldom motor considerately on Monday. This may be a reason why the members of the police force of Belleville and Trenton are commending the drivers of the cars for their intelligent careful driving. Aside from this, however, Chief Ronald Ave. is complaining about dirty trucks and motorcycles without mufflers. Police are investigating the robbery.

AIR BRIDES ARRIVE IN CANADA

Another group of war brides has arrived in Canada destined for Trenton. Detroit is the destination for their soldier husbands make up the party accompanying the brides were those who with their children will be met by their adoptive families at that time.

ADMINISTRATOR OF HOSPITAL GUEST SPEAKER AT OSHAWA

Gordon Barclay, administrator of Belleville General Hospital, was guest speaker at a banquet held in Oshawa on Wednesday evening in connection with the Ontario County Medical Association and hospital guests attended the meeting. Dr. Barclay spoke on "The General Hospital, Type of Mr. Roosevelt's Medical Care." His address was entitled "Public Relations and Hospital Administration."

Police Blotter

Activities in and around local police circles proved routine during the week-end with the exception of holding a child's tricycle, that was found abandoned on Queen Alexandra street, for safe keeping.

Residents of the Ontario-Chatham-Bleecker-St. sector have been complaining of late regarding the condition of the roadway in this sector, the presence of the Middle-ville dump with the evenings coming over the week-end, the matter was brought to the attention of the property holders.

A 2nd by the name of Summers, who resides at 38 North James St., parked his bicycle outside 216 Pinnacle St. last night. Wrapped around the cycle was a pair of Summerstown ski and a pair of running shoes. After paying a visit to the pinnacle on all-night dance, Summers returned to his parking bike only to find the skis and said runningshoes had been stolen.

Council in Committee Defers Action On Installation of Parking Meters

Contrary to the decision arrived at upon council meeting a week ago, when it was decided to install parking meters in the city was not carried out at the regular session of committee meeting. Chairman of the committee, Ald. Hollister presided over the meeting in the absence of Ald. Aldworth. Clerk Hyde was present as well as Ald. Ellis and all members considered the matter should not be definitely decided on at present.

According to Mayor Follwell the meters will be installed in the near future will in all probability be put up at the next session of council on Monday. Regardless, the matter will not be decided on either way without complete information.

Life Underwriters Hear Warden On Agriculture

New conception of the part Hastings County agriculturists have played in the war effort was given members of the Life Underwriters Association of Belleville and district at their annual meeting held in the Y. M. C. A. on Wednesday evening, when Warden Ketcheson, reeve of Madoc, was the guest speaker. Introduced by Mr. Sidney Wright, president of the association, the warden dealt with the activities of the county council, the annual report of Grand Jury, the financial statement and the annual sessions and the duties of the county council. He also dealt with the assistance which has been rendered by the county council to the Mother Country turned to Canada for food supplies, especially meat and milk products. Warden Ketcheson's interesting address showed how the county had responded to the resources to the task and the success it had achieved by its all-out effort.

Hastings as a dairy county, according to the warden, had responded and increased production to such an extent, that last year it supplied from one-sixth to one-seventh of the total milk products exported, and this from about nine townships. Not only was the quantity of milk increased, but the quality had improved steadily and consequently in 1944 over 90 per cent was first grade. This was largely due to the better care of milk by the farmers, combined with the work of excellent inspectors and the installation of modern factory facilities. The warden commended the county council for its action in granting bonuses to better quality cheese by producers. Quoting from the standards, Canadian farmers also came to the assistance of Great Britain by increasing the production for the export of hogs. While the market in Great Britain was not as favorable to Canadian bacon as to cheese and butter, the increase of tons in war years have placed these exports at a further standard. Mr. Ketcheson dealt with the financial effort on the part of farmers in the Victory Loan drives and he pointed out that the county had established a record in the number of subscribers to the Victory Loan. In part war duty would see other changes in farm life, said the warden, and the rugged individualism frequently associated with the farmer must be replaced with the farmer must be organized efforts in which all will be willing to subordinate greater good. The Internet now takes in the development of the Federation of Agriculture, said the warden, and this Mr. Wrong said, that an agricultural policy for post war progress would be the continuance of the good will and understanding standing which now existed between the rural and the urban worker, and that as long as this exists cannot be prosperous cities without prosperous farmers.

Mr. Arthur L. Burns, president of the local association, briefly introduced Mr. Wilson to the members. Mr. Wilson, in his usual quaint as a neighbor, as a worker in all community, enterprises, and as a member of committees, and as a member of the township of Thurlow and Belleville, and of committees of support to the furtherance of rural life and agriculture. Mr. G. C. Stark, house, district manager of the Manufacturers' Life Insurance Company, was chairman for the meeting, the program was arranged, assisted Mr. Burns and Mr. Wilson for his invaluable assistance. Mr. Stark was also appointed chairman for the meeting, presenting as guest artists one of Belleville's favorite musical musicians, Kaye Martin, who delighted with a number of piano selections.

Further appreciation of the fine program was expressed by Mr. J. Mitchell, Napanee, and Mr. F. C. McGuire, Belleville, the latter morning for the membership Dominion Life Assurance Co. Belleville Association was well to the fore in the competitions for cups. Mr. Jack Weir was winner of the attendance cup. Mr. Elliott making the luck draw.

Property Owners Told Restrictions Strangle Building

Jamieson Bone Tells Ottawa Branch of O.P.O.A. Property Owners Are "Goats"

Ottawa.—"The building industry in Canada is being strangled by Government restrictions and colossal taxes", Jamieson Bone, president of the Ontario Property Owners' Association, told 300 guests at the annual dinner of the Ottawa branch of the association in the Chateau Laurier.

Calling property owners "goats" as an economic "necessity", the speaker, pointing out that the law had reformed the tenant, said: "The Government urges you to take tenants and promises to aid you to get rid of an undesirable tenant—but it will not do any such thing."

He advocated a limit on the municipal tax rate in many law, and Orders-in-Council were passed that "we have finally succeeding our economic system, all energy, the factories and the farms are there and there and all over Canada, and they are ready and rather interested in getting back to peace-time production," he said. "Their whole psychology is not to build up but to tear down."

When the war started, workers were told to leave their jobs and enlist and received them, but the property owner was told to stay on his job. No matter what his complaint, he was told to stay on his job. Under the Wartime Prices and Trade Board Act, he was introduced by W. J. McCabe, and thanked by Mr. Cook, Mr. Wilson, Mr. Ketcheson, Warden of Hastings County, who addressed the meeting on the annual sessions and for the share which the county council had undertaken which heartily by the ratepayers. Y's Men's Club Holds Meeting

City sponsorship of future worthwhile projects was the theme of discussion by members of the newly-organized local Y's Men's Club as they met for their regular weekly dinner meeting at the Y.M.C.A. Thursday evening.

Decision was made to sponsor the annual Boys' Court Day, while other plans for sponsorship of a social organization in connection with the Red Triangle Club for the interesting number of members following their return to Canada were mooted.

President of the club, Gordon "Bud" Tull, told members that the primary purpose of the Men's Club was to assist in the development of the Red Triangle Club and that this work was not necessarily confined to Y's Men. It could be expanded to include worthwhile projects for children and other citizens' groups. Membership in the club is not necessarily must be confined to members of the Y.M.C.A. and open to those willing to give unselfish service in projects associated with the youth organization.

Bob Hinchey reported on activities of the Red Triangle Club while J. Shortt intimated that Tuesday night meetings were conducted by members of the Y.M.C.A. Vern Weir announced that he had indicated the allocation of invitation and membership fees.

Sponsorship of a social club in conjunction with members of the Red Triangle Club was suggested by Jack Wilson with members receiving approval of the project. Details will be worked out at a later date.

Membership applications for entry into the club were signed and applications were made for holding the official charter night some time in May. It was intended to have the charter of the original Ys-Men's Club which was formed in Belleville back in 1925.

Scaled Iron Gate Beer Warehouse, Two Pay Fines

Ever since the brewery warehouse was broken into and the safe robbed, police have kept a close vigilance upon the premises, especially at night.

Thursday night while on duty in the Chamber of Commerce Building, Provincial Constable Ray Shilton heard a noise at the rear of the warehouse. Investigating upon investigating observed two men climbing over the iron gate leading into the brewery property. Constable Shilton immediately commenced chase and apprehended them, the result he and P. C. Evans arrested a John Hall, who gave his name as Fetzy J. Shelton and his companion, who gave the name of Frederick A. Stewart. The pair were held in custody.

Appearing in Magistrate T. V. Wills Stewart and Shelton pleaded guilty to charges of breaking conduct and paid $4.50 each. The Magistrate told His Worship the public lavatory beneath the Town Hall was locked and that was the reason why they were found on the house gate. Police found two bicycles parked outside the gate on McAnnany St. which the boys claimed as their property. They told the court they had been riding in the old Motra River.

A quartette of motorists paid the conventional two dollars after being convicted of violation of the city parking restrictions in the city-down area to conclude a rather short session of court.

CANADIANS FACE

in five other European countries — the Germans only knew more flood waters than they wanted. Dikes and locks are prepared for demolition.

If the flood policy is followed all the way in the enemy suicide plans in Fortress Holland, it will take the Netherlanders several years to reclaim the areas flooded by fresh water from the Zuider Zee and the Meuse, and from five to ten years for areas flooded by salt water from the North Sea.

"The large-scale flooding would probably result in epidemics in areas where sewage and water supply are cut off.

Help in Dikmuiden

The situation with all its grim possibilities places the Canadian army in a dilemma in continuous operations on the Netherlands front. It is now Holland's search or even a large-scale attack is made on the Groebe line screening the Fortress. The Germans may flood the entire country and bring even more misery to thousands of Netherlanders.

"If the Canadians do not attack, conditions for the Netherlanders will become increasingly worse, particularly in the cities, for the enemy garrisons are giving them little or no consideration.

Whatever happens, a pliable situation will exist in unliberated Holland.

Should the operation be undertaken, it probably would develop into a continuous amphibious job across inundated land.

The Netherlanders intended to use the whole of the flood system in 1940 when the Germans invaded, but the Germans jumped them too quickly. The Germans are not likely to be caught in the same position.

British Capture Portomaggiore In 3-Mile Drive

Rome, April 30 — (AP) — British 8th Army troops, in an advance of three miles, have captured Portomaggiore, 15 miles southeast of the Po Valley city of Ferrara, Allied headquarters announced today.

Portomaggiore, a small town just east of Portoverraro, which also was taken by the 8th pushed forward after storming the Argenta Gap defences.

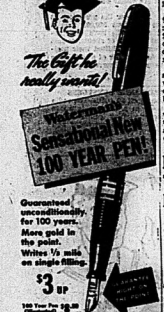
Allied 5th Army forces were reported reaching Pisa, 52 miles west of Bologna.

Rolling along with the momentum gained in the capture of Argenta, the 8th Army reached the canal Bolognese on a wide front.

The 56th (London) Division drove on through Portoverraro and reached the Canale Diversivo, another of the many water barriers in this region of the lower Po Valley.

While Portoverraro has been cleared the British 78th Division moved along and captured Portomaggiore, where is hung over the Bolognese Canale was taken intact.

Other 8th Army forces reached within 36 miles of Ferrara, which lies only a few thousand yards from the Po river.



In the west coastal sector, 5th Army troops were within eight miles of the big port of La Spezia, headquarters said.

62 Canadians Taken at Dieppe Freed by Yanks

By EDWARD D. BALL

With the U. S. 5th Infantry Division, April 30 —(AP)— Sixty-two Canadian commandos wounded and taken prisoner in the Dieppe reconnaissance in force of 1942 have been freed by the United States 5th Infantry Division at Tambach, 13 miles south of Gotha in Thuringia.

Some of the Canadians said yesterday they were among the prisoners chained by the Germans for 13 months until their captors changed their attitude toward the commandos and removed the shackles in the fall of 1942.

Cpl. Harold Nelson of Winnipeg said they had been marching westwards inner Germany for seven days after which they were rescued by the Americans.

Among the liberated Canadians were Pte. Ray Gowen, Hamilton, Ont.; Pte. Rapley Hamilton, Windsor, Ont., and Pte. Fred J. Wheeler, Remington Park, Windsor, Ont.

Date to Be Set When Time of War's End In Europe Known

Ottawa, April 30 — (CP) — An official of the Secretary of State's Department said here that until the date of the end of the war in Europe was known, no definite date could be set for the proclamation of a holiday.

He was commenting upon a statement by Mayor Robert Saunders of Toronto that the Federal Government will proclaim a holiday other than the day of the declaration of the war's end in Europe or the day after.

The officials said the intention was to proclaim a holiday and day of prayer in conformity with what was done by the United Kingdom and United States.

The War Today— Men at Top in Germany and Doers Of Foul Deeds to Face Penalties

(AP War Analyst)

This question of German barbarism is getting hotter and hotter, and more difficult to take without boiling over and losing one's perspective.

It's with applause therefore that the Allied world greets Prime Minister Churchill's announcement that a solemn warning to the enemy against piece-camp atrocities like the current horrors in Germany is to be issued over the signatures of himself, President Truman and Marshal Stalin. He had reference, among other places, to Czechoslovakia whose citizens today are being compelled by American troops to bury the ghastly remains of 1,500 slave and political prisoners who were deliberately burned to death by Nazis soldiers.

Doers of Foul Deeds

It is particularly satisfactory that the warning by the Big Three is to "bring home responsibility not only to the men of the Nazis who are guilty of these crimes, but also to the men of all the Nazis who are likewise guilty of these barbarian deeds in many cases, but also to the actual people who have done this foul work with their own hands." We want to see every last man of them — big, medium and little — rounded up and given punishment to fit the crimes.

Our bitterness, of course, starts with the head man, from whose leadership flows this savagery. Probably none of the barbarian chiefs of the dim past were as evil-minded as Adolf Hitler, but certainly the magnitude of their atrocities never approached his, for the desire to which that Nazi has had opportunity among populations which were comparatively small.

Hitler Seeking Christmas

The inventor of Hitler is the rocking criminal among all conquerors, and this despite the fact that he has been exposed for what he is to posterity of the centuries.

It had a grandstand seat as the abnormal Hitler started his career of crime. I saw him in action in many places and, finally, saw Munich, scene of the gleeful behind him in the square of the medieval city of Nuremberg, when he announced the Munich settlement which he had forced upon unhappy little country as surrender. It was in Nuremberg that Hitler declared war on Poland, and so we, begin our march into the great German future. Slag Heil! Long live victory! Heil Hitler!

Sieg Heil! Long live victory! Heil Hitler! Long live victory! Heil Hitler!

Hitler's Month

Hitler's chief commentary on the truth that "the way of transgressors is hard" was that Riga is in the sector which U. S. 3rd Army forces have reached in Czechoslovakia. Hitler's terror again has turned to ashes in his mouth. He himself is a fugitive from justice, preparing to hide in his Alpine caves.

Members Receive Full Sessional $2,000 Indemnity

Toronto, April 30 (CP)—The Ontario Court of Appeal ruled this morning that members of the Ontario legislature are to receive their full sessional indemnity of $2,000 for the session which ended last March 24 with dissolution after defeat of Premier Drew's Progressive Conservative government March 22.

The court was asked to rule on the question of the amount of the indemnity, because the legislature sat for only 26 days and Ontario law provides that members are to receive $2,000 except when the session lasts more than 30 days. If it is shorter, they are to receive $20 a sitting.

Mr. Justice W. T. Henderson, in the principal judgment said: "In my opinion there is only one possible answer to the question put and that answer is found in the question itself.

"The question stated that the session commenced on Feb. 15, 1943 and ended March 24, and that no deductions are to be made from the sessional indemnity on account of absence. This is a statement of facts we are bound by and furnishes the answer. It is noteworthy that the question relates to the 'session' and it is only in respect of the question of absence that the word 'sitting' is used in the question.

"As I have said if we are to base our answer on the question itself then, with respect, I am of the opinion that the answer is $2,000."

Mr. Henderson said he had been told in argument that in the period of 36 days between the opening and closing of the session, it was the practice of the House to sit from Monday to Friday and adjourn from Friday night to Monday morning.

"The meaning of the legislature comes from all parts of the provinces," he said, "and are assumed to be in attendance during the session and not only during the days on which sittings are held."

Germans Embassy Members in Ankara Afraid to Leave

Ankara, April 30 — (AP) — Mild-tempered German nationals are registration started yesterday, members of their embassy staff, including Ambassador Franz von Papen, were reported refusing to register.

Ten thousand Germans in Turkey now is in doubt whether they can leave the country, and many are said to be afraid to go home, for fear they will be drafted into the army.

Some are said to be unable to get certificates showing they have paid their income taxes.

Diplomatic sources pointed out that Germans in the service of their country in Ankara, including a number of military attaches, have been ordered to remain at their posts.

Some Germans in United Provinces of Agra and Oudh, India, have been interned with the enemy and their property and assets taken over by the custodian of enemy property, it was announced by the government of India.

Those affected are Germans who have lived in India for many years, and who, it was said, have "not shown any sympathy with the Nazi regime."

Curtain is Falling

Anyone radio broadcast the words on Tuesday, "The curtain is falling on the Tunisian war and the time is at hand for the armies in the West and the East to join."

The Germans admit the tragic import to the many of the great concentrations of Allied power near the German capital and their comments can be read the hope-lessness of many of Hitler's plans.

Hitler and his henchmen and their satellites are now in a position into which they have many nations in Europe in the early days of the war. They have come to the point before the crack-up of Germany. The free nations of Europe, however, were in a different case. They have a place and their own true right on their thrones, although they went down under the Nazi-Fascist-Japanese heels. There was justice on earth in Britain and the Empire, in the United States and in other nations and there was mighty power undeveloped.

Hitler and his gang of Nasidom today and ragged in their poverty, without honor, without hope, stained in blood and crime, are in a most unfortunate position. All their works crumbling about their heads. The greater part of Germany is now under allied occupation and moment by moment the space the Hitlerite forces occupy is rapidly shrinking without the crack-up. The only thing that the Nasis possess is hopelessness, the knowledge of their criminal deeds and the spirit of desperation that finds criminals finishing their end. Humanity has decreed them a curse and is purging the globe of them.

What has been the war to the United Nations world? A great duty and the opportunity to rid the earth of Hun brutality and to wipe out the total defeat of Germany any possibility of her revival as a world power.

This has been worth fighting for.

What has the war meant to Germany?—

Fevish plans torn asunder after the Hitler brief success early in the war and the Allies' stunning defeats the lack of the court of humanity, and of military power and being found guilty, her land in great ruins because she pulled upon herself unanimous judgment for the awful crime she committed against the world.

Hitler had his fling, his star seemed to ascend, but his eyes blinded by bitter hatred and the free nations did not allow him to forever. That the time could come when right strikes down brutal force. Hitler is a brutal man and a brutal principle and the drama of war is about to close for Mussolini, Hitler's only riches.

In spite that rest upon his head, the vast destruction of Germany. He set his hand the Axis plough that was going to rock all civilization to its foundations.

Hitler has done his worst. Now he is dying and so is Germany.

The drama of war is going to close shortly. Out of the scene of havoc begins the emergence of that vital force that will endure. As for the Nasi monsters this moment is the time of the greatest anxiety for their punishment is at hand. Their guilt is known and is inexorably as the law of life the certain ill come down upon the struggle, Nasism wiped out, good triumphant and the doers of iniquity, those who have been guilty of crucifying the innocent, waiting their doom of shame.

The curtain that is falling allows glimpses of the dawn of peace and a vista of a purified age where no new Hitler, no new Mussolini and no new Jap warlord, or other aggressor and tyrant will find scope his plots even for a fragmentary moment of time. It offers the promise of a greater freedom than existed before the present struggle. While a big task is to be performed behind the curtain removing the debris of a battered Germany which will lend herself to the spirit of the laying of the foundations of a true democratic world where the small and great nations will feel security, will prosper. The curtain will rise on this new world.

R.A.F. Attacks On Industry

There is accumulating evidence of effectiveness of the air bombardment of Germany's industrial effort. Britain was the first people to realize the value of strategic bombing and the R.A.F. was designed from the first to operate the strategic plan. This plan was pursued steadfastly from the beginning of the war. A dispatch from James Wellard, London Daily Express, contains an interview with Alfred Krupp, president of the firm, which pays tribute to British planning. Wellard asked him: "When did Krupps begin to feel the effects of R.A.F. night bombing?" Krupp answered "1942."

The R.A.F. had laid on the first large scale attack on Essen in June 1942.

Wellard then asked: "And could you feel the effects of combined night and day bombing?" Krupp answered: "In 1943, more in 1944. By the end of 1944 we were only in 30% production with the priority on tank tracks. Our production steadily declined during 1945; after the raid on March 11th we ceased production altogether."

In 1943 R.A.F. had laid on four major raids in March, April, one major raid in May, one major raid in August. In 1944 the R.A.F. laid on two major and three lesser raids in March, April, two major raids in October, and one in November, one major raid in December.

The R.A.F. delivered the raid on March 11th, 1945, to which Krupp referred. The British Bomber Command leaders always maintained that strategic air bombing, though slow, was certain. Facts have proved them right.

Clothes Rations In U.K.

Clothing rationing was introduced in Britain in mid-1941, and the aggregate volume of consumption was in 1943 about 43% below pre-war. The following table shows the average numbers of certain garments which may be purchased on the current ration by adults not receiving the industrial supplement.

The first ration mentioned after the garment is the ration for men, the second that for women, (both 18 years old and over):

Overcoats and rainwear 1 in 4½ years, 1 in 2¾ years.

Jackets (i.e. suits or jackets with odd trousers; costumes; dresses or odd skirts or slacks with jacket or blouse 1 in 2½ years, 1 in 9 months.

Shirts 1 in 2 months, 1 in 6 months (for men.)

Undergarments (including women's corsets) 1 in 9 months, 1 in 4 months.

Socks and Stockings 1 in 5 months, 1 in 2½ months.

Night wear 1 in 4½ years, 1 in 4 years.

Footwear (all types including slippers) 1 in 13 months, 1 in 8 months.

How great is the need for the replacement of essential clothing is illustrated by the fact that in many cases the coupons remain unused in the ration book at the end of a rationing period.

Canadians looking over these figures can realize what sacrifices are to be taken of clothing by the people of Britain.

Franz von Papen, known as the gray fox of Germany, apparently has been captured in the Ruhr pocket. About the same time the fourth son of the former Kaiser Wilhelm was taken prisoner and Field Marshall von Mackensen, who led the German army into Poland in the last war, was caught in the Allied drive. He was wearing a faded uniform. There is not much space left in the Reich for these men as the Allies from east and west press forward to Berlin.

Adolf Hitler's birthday won't cheer the Germans today. When Hitler was five years younger he felt very important in the world, for he was just preparing his invasion of Western Europe. On his 56th birthday today, very near his capital (Berlin) without a semblance of control over the Reich, will be found the Russians and the Allies of the West. Hitler is no doubt far away from the capital at this moment.

THE JOB

Funny feller, that! He turns
Into joys the pay he earns.
Says he works for little trocks,
Seeds to plant in early spring,
Marigolds and hollyhocks,
Hoe and rake for gardening.
Says his job is paid for in Lessons on the violin.

Funny feller! Says he hears
Laughter in the clash of gears—
Children's laughter as he sees
In the foundry's smoke and flame
Spelling books and histories
Where a boy has scrawled his name;
And in miles, a pretty lass
With her confirmation class.

Funny feller! Others may
Just in money count their pay,
But he reckons day and hour
Not alone in cash, but things
Which by him his earnings power
Weekly to his family brings;
Says in every finished task
Lies what those he loves may ask.

20 YEARS AGO

APRIL 30TH, 1925.

It was thought that spring was here; gardens and lawns were being prepared for the fair; mild weather, but also such was not the case, as we had some sharp storm yesterday. At times the snow fell so thick and fast as to obscure vision for some distance. About a foot of snow fell. Many members of Trinity Presb. Street, which had not been raised were broken by the weight of the snow. During the afternoon the weather cleared and became quite cold. During last night the temperature was seven degrees below freezing and at 6 o'clock this morning it was two degrees below freezing. Snow shovellers were out in force yesterday a number of them being employed by the public works department. City Engineer Campbell stated snow plough, to be put at work but the snow was too deep and heavy for the horses to draw the plough, and the idea was abandoned.

Some Humor to Be Had Out of War When Things Aren't Going Too Badly

By ERNIE PYLE

Okinawa.—(by Navy radio) After a couple days visit to the headquarters of the marine regiment I moved to a company and lived and marched with them for several days. The company is a part of the First Marine Division.

At first I introduced myself to the company commander and he took me on a half hour's walking trip around the company area before turning me loose with the men.

They had turned in for the night and put out perimeter defense so no infiltrating Japs could get through and any big attack could be dealt with.

The company was on a hill about 1,000 yards long and about a hundred yards wide. The men were dug in down the sides of the hill. There was a mortar platoon at the foot of the hill all set up to throw mortars any direction.

Our part of the island had not then been declared "secured," and we had even received warning of possible attacks from sea that night. So nobody was taking any chances.

"This is the most perfect defensive position we've ever had in our lives," the company commander said. "One company could hold off a whole battalion for days. If the Japs had defended their hills they could have kept us fighting for a week."

The company commander was a young man with a soft southern tongue and his black hair was almost shaved. He was a little yellow from taking atabrine.

He is Capt. Julian Montgomery from Clanton, S. C. He is easy going with his men, and you could tell they liked him. It happened that his birthday was on April 1—the Easter Sunday we landed on Okinawa. He was 34 that day. His mother had written him she hoped he'd have a happy birthday.

"That was the happiest birthday present I ever had," he said, "going through Love Day without a single casualty in the company."

While I was aboard ship some-body had walked off with my fatigue pants, and the loss of a dungaree ship gave me one of those. Navy ships, lined with cheese, which is actually much warmer and nicer than what we had.

On the back it had stenciled in big white letters: U. S. Navy.

That is all right when I first walked through the company's defense lines. Later that evening we were sitting on the ground around a little fire, warming our hands on K rations.

By that time I'd got acquainted with a good many of the boys and we'd talk at home to one another.

We had some real coffee and we poured it into our canteen cups and sat around drinking it before dark.

Then one of the boys started laughing a little and said to me:

"You know, when you first showed up, we saw that big Navy stencil on you and we got a lot of laughs out of that. I'm not an admiral and I won't get any medals, but you've got a lot of laughs out of this war business when things aren't going too badly.

HANG MAYOR OF VILLAGE

Entanglements With Joan Cost Chaplin $100,000

By GENE HANDSAKER

Los Angeles, April 30 (AP)—Charlie Chaplin's entanglements with red-haired Joan Barry will cost him, as matters stand today, more than $100,000.

The 54-year-old comedian of the silver screen is in court to pay $75 a week for support of Joan's illegitimate baby until she is 21—altogether $90,000.

A jury in Los Angeles ruled that Chaplin is the baby girl's father.

The 35-year-old actress' mother was directed also to pay Joan's attorneys $10,000, which is the fee he paid her previous counsel.

Joan's mother, Carol Ann, is suing Chaplin for $1,000,000 on behalf of Joan and Joan's baby.

About $50,000 and $11,000 he handed over for medical care and other expenses during confinement of Joan, his movie-making dream girl, during the baby's birth. In it the comedian testified that he admitted because that he had committed adultery with Miss Barry. Miss Barry denied.

By The Five Figures.

Miss Sams do not include what it will cost Chaplin to defend successfully—against a Federal Mann Act indictment charging that he took Miss Barry, 23, to Mexico and back for immoral reasons. The fee in this case, Attorney Jerry Giesler, hasn't been announced but will run five figures, well up in five figures.

Joan's attorney in the paternity suit, Joseph Scott, told the jury: "I'm not satisfied," after yesterday's answers to questions by Chaplin's lawyers.

He had argued that $75 a week is "a pauper's program for this child." His associate, Dr. Carl Ann Garrison, had testified she needed $1,000 to $1,500 a month.

Chaplin's attorneys had argued under the statute in the case that $1,000 a month is the limit in excess of $1,000,000. This child is the fourth for which Chaplin admits his legitimate children had: I understand they were educated in Switzerland and studied foreign languages.

Like Is Modified.

Judge Clarence L. Kincaid said he would modify the decree signed by the court in the future "in accordance with the status in life of the parties at that time" and with Court Ann's development.

Chaplin's attorney, Charles E. Millikan, declined to say whether he might ask a change on appeal, until the court signs the formal judgment, probably within a day or two.

Some Members Of U.S. Cabinet On Way Out Soon

By JACK BELL

Washington, April 30 —(AP)— Some members of the Roosevelt cabinet are on the way out—soon —it is believed.

Although the feeling has been general here that President Truman might delay any changes for a couple of months, close friends suggest today that one or more other departures may be announced within days.

Most of those pointed to the Labor department, which Secretary Perkins relinquished to Schwellenbach when she left to become secretary Wickard slated to step out to be head of a new post WLB may take over the duties of war food administrator as well.

Wants to Go Back to Coast.

Marvin Jones, who fills the latter post now and is secretly said he would like to go back to the court of claims from which he borrowed by President Roosevelt. Mr. Jones still draws his pay as a member of the latter so salary is no factor.

J. B. Hutson, deputy in charge of agricultural reconversion in the war mobilization office, might be Mr. Truman's choice for the ensuing agricultural post.

Mr. Hutson is a close friend of James F. Byrnes, the former war mobilizer, whose name also is likely to continue to be welcomed by the President. Mr. Byrnes left Washington for a rest.

Mr. Truman decided in San Francisco United Nations conference will be over with the war completely ended, before definitely to become the American representative in the proposed security organization.

Parking Meter Profits

(The American City)

Six years ago White Plains bought 1,013 Park-Time parking meters for $31,634.00 and installed 44,902 in maintenance. Meanwhile gross receipts of these meters have totaled during a net of $175,365. Traffic fines have averaged $4,000 per year. Officers of the Department of Public Safety reported to the city council that the meters have been so successful in regulating parking that residents would now balk as much at the removal of the meters as they did at their installation.

No wonder many post-war traffic plans are built on and around the parking meters already operating or proposed.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

The President considered publication of the Selective Service Act a matter of a splitting headache, and placed his right hand to the side of his head. Then he signed the measure as though his head were splitting.

His last words were:

"I have a terrible headache."

—Newspaper Account.

From a study of forty patients with cerebral hypertension (very high blood pressure) I have come to the conclusion that there is no standard form or pattern of symptoms. Some of the pathological signs (Drs. R. D. Taylor and Irving F. Wiener) are definite. So, inferred that the following five signs are commonly found in the total of cerebral hypertension: (1) stroke or paralysis; (2) impairment of vision; (3) abnormal changes in the blood vessels of the eyeball; (4) changes in the heart; (5) changes in the kidneys.

The average age of the 19 patients in the group showing symptoms was 46.8 years. As already stated, myself, all of these had most of the five signs of symptoms mentioned, while as nearly as could be determined the total duration of the hypertension had averaged nine years, varying, however, from two years in one case to 18 years in another. Of the forty patients in the cerebral hypertension, twenty were men, twenty were women, the remaining two being children who succumbed to a stroke, one at the age of three years, the other at seven.

There may be such a thing as essential hypertension, very high blood pressure existing for many years without the development of any symptoms. But if you ask me, I've never seen a case where there was no pressure is pathological whether it be high, medium or low, and I am trying to tell you in these talks what there is to be afraid of.

WHEN NIAGARA STOPS

Does Niagara Falls ever stop falling?

Not for many years, and probably not for as long for the flow of water over Niagara Falls has never entirely stopped.

The flow of water over the American Falls has been completely stopped several times and reduced on a more trickle seven times during the last century, but the flow over the Canadian Falls is only about five per cent of the total flow of the Niagara River.

Lake Erie is the source of the Niagara River, which is long, than 35 miles long, and the volume of water in the river is sometimes greatly reduced by ice which forms the level of the lake.

There is no record that the Canadian or American Falls have ever frozen over completely so as to stop the flow of water, it is supposed, while that such an event would ever men.

John Webb of Springbrook To Celebrate 101st Birthday

Marmora—On Saturday, April 21st, John Webb of Springbrook, 20 miles north of Belleville, will celebrate his one hundred and first birthday, in the home which he built over sixty years ago and on the land where he has lived for ninety-three years.

Mr. Webb was born in County Down, Ireland, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Christopher Webb. He came with his parents and brothers and sisters to this country when he was eight years of age. They came from Ireland across the broad Atlantic to Quebec City. Mr. Webb recalls their landing and the trip by boat up the St. Lawrence, stopping at Montreal and finally arriving at Belleville on the Bay of Quinte.

Here they disembarked and the parents and eight children started out on foot for their long journey to West Huntingdon in Huntingdon Township. On the way the parents were given a lift by a man with a team of horses for the entire distance.

Cash All in Silver.

His parents brought with them the money to purchase 200 acres of land. The cash was all in silver and carried in bags on their backs. After living at West Huntingdon for a year they purchased 200 acres of land, nearby, on the 11th line of Sidney Township. It was all cedar swamp forest at that time, and the father and sons worked diligently to clear the land and establish their home. Wild animals were plentiful, deer, bear and wolves coming at will. Wild game was one of their main foods. Horses were scarce but all had oxen for which they paid $120 for a good team. Horses, when available cost about $300.

After much hard labor, they were able to start in erecting a log house, in 1865. Mr. Webb married Maria McKeown, also from Ireland and a few years later, he built the modern brick house, which is now occupied on their up-to-date farm.

Much Grain Grown.

Much grain was grown in those days, after they had successfully cleared the land and Mr. Webb drew his wheat and barley to Trenton. He recalls how they used to leave home at 3 a.m. with teams of oxen and horses and unload their grain on boats at the dock. The price was one dollar a bushel, and was considered a good price at that time.

Another way of making money at that time was the making of potash. Practically all wood on his farm was elm, and after burning the wood the ash was collected and made into potash which brought $100 a kettle.

Still in Good Health.

This grand old man is still in the possession of good health. He walks very erect and is almost six feet tall. He still takes pride in being able to provide kindling wood for the fires and can be often seen at his woodpile.

Mr. Webb resides with his eldest daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Benson. Another daughter, Mrs. Henry Wallace, resides at Ivanhoe, and a son, John Webb, resides in Belleville. Another son, Christopher Webb, passed away in Toronto on his father's birthday last year. Mrs. Webb died fifteen years ago at the age of 86, and a son, William, died ten years ago.

Never Smokes.

Mr. Webb has never smoked, and is a strict teetotaler, although he can recall liquor being sold in his early days as cheap as fifty cents a gallon.

Mr. Webb is looking forward to celebrating his birthday on Saturday, when a family reunion will be held at his home. He takes a keen interest in local and world affairs, and is looking forward to an Allied Victory soon.

4th Thurlow

4th Thurlow — Mr. and Mrs. Earl Keene of Belleville were guests on Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Rickards.

Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Hollinger and family have moved to their new home in Sidney. On Thursday evening, prior to their departure, their many friends and neighbors assisted them with an old table and rocker.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell Rice called on Mrs. Douglas Tummon at the Belleville General Hospital on Sunday evening.

Bethany's contribution to the recent Red Cross drive amounted to $84.85.

Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Rice and Arnold were guests on Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Jeffrey, Sidney.

Mrs. Harold Deadie and baby, Reuben spent Wednesday with Mrs. Harry Farnham, Consecon.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Robert Miller was largely attended on Monday afternoon at Bethany Church. The sympathy of the community is extended to the bereaved family.

Mrs. George Demike spent a couple of days with Mrs. Frank Walker, Red Hill.

B.C.I. Home and School Club Holds Banquet

On Monday evening over a hundred fathers and sons gathered in the cafeteria of the collegiate for the first banquet to be held under the auspices of The Belleville Collegiate and Vocational Home and School Association. All arrangements were carried out by Mrs. Robbins and her Social Committee. There were no formalities except the toast to The King. At eight o'clock fathers and sons joined the mothers in the auditorium for a very enjoyable program.

Mr. Jobson conducted several numbers played by a band composed of fathers and sons. They ably demonstrated what family team work can do. After a short business session Mr. Len Pozard gave a very entertaining program of "Stunts and Confusions". Mr. Bankier ended this part of the program with two very delightful solos.

A discussion led by Don Beavis and Mr. Joss on what they would like to expect from their fathers and sons, opened a discussion that proved enlightening and entertaining. Perhaps both fathers and sons had their eyes opened as to how they might improve themselves.

Johnstown Friends Honor Sapper Lohnes

Johnstown — On Monday evening, April 16th, friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Curtis for a presentation to Sapper Walter Lohnes, Petawawa, Ontario, who was spending a short leave with his family.

Miss Gail Lohnes started the program with several vocal selections which were followed by a sing song with Miss M. Wells presiding at the piano.

Sapper Walter Lohnes favored the guests with a vocal selection which was followed by a piano selection by Miss Wells.

Miss Betty Stickle read the address after which Mr. Alfred St. Hilaire presented Walter with a lovely leather writing kit, a billfold, and a Parker pen and pencil set.

Walter replied suitably to the address.

Mr. Cecil Merchen and Mr. Alfred St. Hilaire provided music for dancing at the close of the program.

Refreshments were served and the guests departed with best wishes for Walter's future.

BELLEVILLE CHAPTER TO HOLD TAG DAY

Widely recognized for its war service work since the beginning of the present war, the Belleville Chapter No. 88 of Order of the Eastern Star on Saturday is again appealing to the people of Belleville and district for funds to carry on its work. On Saturday the patriotic committee of the O.E.S. will hold their annual tag day in this city.

Indicative of their support of patriotic work during this war is the fact that the provincial organization of the O.E.S. last year raised $164,119 for this highly important work. Forty one mobile canteens for use overseas have been supplied by the Chapter, four of them, completely equipped having been sent from this district. Besides the mobile canteens, $24,000 raised by the Chapters in Ontario has been used for Boots for Britain, and Aid to Crippled Children's funds. Also large donations have been made to Chinese and Russian relief funds, to the merchant marine, the Red Cross and various minesweepers.

WEDDINGS

WHALEN—MURPHY

St. Mary's Church, Marysville, was the scene of a pretty wedding, Monday morning, April 16, at 9 a.m., when Margaret Murphy, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Murphy of Marysville, was united in marriage to Michael Dennis Whalen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Whalen, of Deseronto. Rev. Father O'Gorman performed the marriage ceremony while Rev. Father Murphy, uncle of the bride, said the Nuptial Mass. Flt. Lt. Rev. Father Martin of St. Vincent de Paul Church, Deseronto, was also in the sanctuary.

Given in marriage by her brother, Bernard Murphy, the young bride was becomingly attired in a tailored suit of bluish grey with navy accessories, and wore a corsage of carnations. She was attended by a sister of the groom, Miss Marguerite Whalen, who wore a turquoise blue suit with black accessories and corsage of carnations. Harold Murphy, brother of the bride, attended the groom.

A reception and wedding breakfast were held at the home of the groom's brother, Aloysius Whalen, for the immediate relatives.

For travelling the bride chose a pale blue suit with matching accessories. The young couple are spending a wedding trip in Watertown, N.Y., and upon their return will reside on a farm near Marysville.

Hospital Auxiliary Plans Are Made, Reports Received

The monthly meeting of the Hospital Auxiliary was held in the Nurses' Residence on Thursday afternoon with the President, Mrs. R. H. Wray, in the chair. The report of the Fashion Show was given by Mrs. J. G. Galloway and Mrs. J. A. Lisotte submitted a report of the Easter treat given to the patients. The Auxiliary members expressed their pleasure for the donation to their organization from the Reliance Industries Ltd.

Plans were discussed concerning the annual mixed bridge which is to be held next week in the Nurses' Residence. Miss E. Horton, superintendent of Nursing, gave a report of the Indigent Patients' Fund, and thanked the volunteers from the Auxiliary who had helped on the ward. Plans were made how best the Auxiliary could help in a volunteer aid work. Miss Horton gave a short talk on the Nurses' Convention and told of the nurses' need in regards to equipment for the kitchenette.

A cheque for twenty dollars was voted for the Indigent Patients' Fund. Volunteers were asked for the purpose of taking care of flowers in the hospital, and the Auxiliary members are planning to fill this need. A necessary sum was voted to be sent for the purchase of two invalid chairs. Mr. Barclay gave a brief report on Hospital conditions and thanked the Auxiliary members for their support. One new member was welcomed to the meeting.

Mayor Follwell Speaks To Holloway St. Y.P.U.

Bridge Street and Tabernacle Young People's Unions were the guests of Holloway Street Y.P.U on Monday evening when Mr. Frank Follwell was guest speaker. Also invited were the members of the city council and their wives.

A welcome was extended by president Noriena Frederick who conducted a brief business period following which the meeting was turned over to the Citizenship Group.

Assisting convener Shirley Hitchon in the inspirational worship service were Maude Burke, who gave the meditation and led in prayer and Harry Denton, who read the Scripture and an appropriate poem. While the offering was being received, Iva Horton and Ana English played a lovely duet. The theme of the worship service was "Living Today For Tomorrow's World."

Mayor Follwell gave a very informative address, speaking on Civic Administration, the plans of the council to improve the city, and Juvenile Delinquency.

As a result of a letter sent by the three Y.P.U.'s to the mayor asking that more be done by the council and police force to curb juvenile delinquency in Belleville, Mr. Follwell led a discussion on this important issue.

Marion Daniels introduced Mayor Follwell and Hildegarde Helliwell expressed the appreciation of the group.

Mrs. Miller and Wm. Connor played a piano duet "Invitation to the Dance", and as an encore they played the ever-popular "Nola."

Refreshments were served and the meeting closed with the Friendship Circle.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Is a Husband "Good" Just Because He Pays the Bills

It seems this column has offended some wives by summing up a good husband as faithful, paying the household bills and going to work every day.

But, alas! I failed to say anything about amusement, or that the good husband paid his wife compliments, remembered her birthday and their wedding anniversary with a bunch of flowers or a box of candy.

As a starter here's a pretty good letter:

"Dear Miss Fairfax—

"I read your reply to P.T.P. in this morning's paper and now I have a question. Is a husband GOOD just because he pays the bills, goes to work every day and gives his wife grocery money? What man wouldn't pay the bills and give any woman room and board for the work she does in keeping house and caring for the children?

"My husband does all these things you've mentioned and in return I keep house economically, do the laundry, make over old suits and dresses, keep the furnace going, and even take out the clinkers, for he complains of being so tired, poor dear, after sitting in his office for eight hours.

"Sure I'm a fool for doing these things but we've rented part of our house and have other people to consider. Dinner is always served as soon as my husband returns from work. He rushes through the meal. Maybe mumbles a couple of words while eating. Jumps up, grabs a clean shirt and goes away some place where I can't go. He bowls with the boys, goes to a business meeting, plays cards with his fellow Lodge members, which I never object to, but never thinks I'm starving for a little amusement.

"I like to bowl, play cards, skate, go to movies. Dancing is a thing of the past. But my husband never even takes me to a movie. Now, where have I failed? I never nag or say mean things. So I've decided to take refuge in indifference. If I ever try to talk he drags in that he's misunderstood that I'm the selfish wife, all because I crave a little companionship, an occasional compliment, and a little outing with him if only to the movies.

Formal Wedding For a Wave

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

1.—I am a WREN and am planning to have a formal wedding in church. We will have six ushers, four in the service, two civilians; a maid of honor, civilian; a flower girl; and my father is to give me in marriage. Will you please tell me the proper order for the processional?

2.—It is to be an evening wedding. What should the civilian men in the wedding party wear? What should my father wear?

R. T. E.

1.—First, the ushers, two by two, those in the service preceding the two civilian ushers. (There should be a longer distance between the two pairs of ushers in uniform and the pair not in uniform than there is between the two pair in uniform.) Next come the bridesmaids, two by two, those in the service first. Next, the maid of honor, walking alone; then, the flower girl; and last you and your father, you on his right.

2.—The civilian men in the wedding party (and your father is also a member of the wedding party) may properly wear tuxedos.

You May Invite Men to a Shower

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

I am planning to give a shower for a very dear friend of mine who recently married a serviceman. Since they didn't have any wedding reception, and since most of their friends are married, would I be committing a social error by inviting the husbands as well as their wives? I know that showers are usually attended by women only, yet I can't see any reason why men shouldn't be invited too. But my sister tells me that this would definitely be incorrect.

Gaylee.

It's entirely proper for you to invite men guests. But when this is done, it is customary to have the shower in the evening; invite the girls for early in the evening, for the presentation and opening of the gifts; and invite the men to "join the ladies" one or two hours later, when refreshments are served and a general entertainment is planned.

Receptions Are Not Always Necessary.

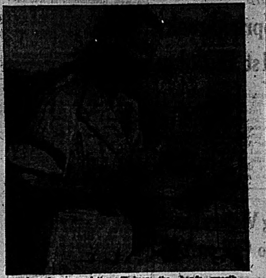
Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

My soldier-fiance and I are going to be married soon, in church. We both have many relatives, and (fortunately) a great many friends, for we have both lived all our lives in this town. We want to invite them all to the church, which is quite a large church.

But. . . and this is what is worrying us very much. . . my family and I live in a very small apartment, so we can't have a reception there. And my family can't afford to have the reception in a hotel or any other suitable place.

However, we would like to greet our relatives and friends in some way after the ceremony. Do you think it would be terribly bad taste to give up any plan to have a reception, and just stand for a while after the recessional and greet our friends at the back of the church? We'd like to do this, if you think it will be all right.

By all means do this. It is never necessary to have a wedding reception, it's a friendly and charming and entirely proper idea for the bride and bridegroom to stand in the back of the church to greet, and to receive the good wishes of, their relatives and friends.



NEW TANK IN ACTION

With the U. S. 1st Army on the Rhine, March 13 — (Delayed by Censor) — (AP) — The Americans now have a tank in action on the western front which can stack up with the German Mark V Panther and Mark VI Tiger. The new battle behemoth is the 46-ton Gen. Pershing, mounting a 90-mm. gun of high velocity.

LONG NIGHT ENDING

London, April 20—(CP)—Prime Minister Churchill declared yesterday that the "long night in Europe is ending" but that Britain still faces formidable tasks afterward that are not ones "for novices and theorists." He expressed his views in a letter endorsing Flt. Lt. Brian A. Cook, a Conservative, in the Chelmsford by-election.

Creaming Benefits Dry Hands

A good cream or lotion will keep the hands smooth.

By HELEN FOLLETT

A WOMAN who has been doing heavy work in her home for the last three years, whose hands have never before had to scour the pot roast kettle, scrub the kitchen floor, do laundry work, says that her poor hands look as if they had been boiled and starched but not ironed. Her knuckles are stiff. Her hands look old. She is in quite a to-do about it.

Of course the poor dear has neglected them shamefully. She kept right on creaming her face and getting her permanents because she felt she had to. Now, with her nails brittle and breaking, and the flesh on her hands rough and red, she is hand conscious and unhappy.

Cream For Hands.

In such a case, something more is necessary than a daily application of a hand lotion. The skin has been dried out by frequent immersions in hot water. The natural lubrication has disappeared. Therefore, she must cream the flesh every night of her life.

Cocoabutter is convenient for this purpose, if one feels that a fragrant cosmetic is a drain on the beauty budget. Get it at your drug store. Anoint the flesh from elbows to finger tips. Make a bracelet of fingers and thumb, go round and round the arms from elbow to wrist.

Starting at the base of each finger, go thumbing upward, giving special attention to the knuckles, and forcing the cocoabutter into the cuticle that surrounds the fingernails.

Soap For Washing

Be fussy about the soap you use in doing housework. Soap makers are producing splendid products; they may cost a bit more than the flaying cleansers that grandmother used, but they are worth the difference.

If laundry work must be done, put the clothes to soak the night before; then you won't rub your knuckles sore on the wash board and the clothes will be cleaner and whiter.

Use a lotion faithfully, every day, all the year round.

"The Lamplighter is Such a Nice Man"—said Grandma

1. Grandma remembers, as though it were yesterday. Every morning sharp at seven, the "gas man" came along to turn out the street lamp opposite our house. Well, one morning, Grandma asked him to come in and try a new breakfast cereal that had just come on the market. He got quite a surprise to find it came in a package and required no cooking. And how he chortled when he tasted its really different flavor! It was Grape-Nuts, of course.

2. Chortling over that same malty-rich, sweet-as-a-nut flavor has been going on ever since. And louder and louder these days! Because now that grand goodness is in curly, golden-brown GRAPE-NUTS FLAKES, too!

3. And the same good nourishment! Carbohydrates for energy; proteins for muscle; phosphorus for bones and teeth; iron for the blood; and other food essentials! It's all goodness that comes from two golden grains—wheat and malted barley—specially blended, baked and toasted, for glorious flavor and easy digestion.

4. Going shopping today? Pick up a package of good-to-eat, nourishing Grape-Nuts Flakes. You'll appreciate the economy of the giant size package.

"Sorry, Neighbour.."

TONIGHT, neighbour, you came to me, your old friend, with your grief. You came to tell me your hero son would never come home again.

Now, as your bowed figure shuffles homeward through the rain, I'm confessing to myself the truth I could not admit to you.

You've given me your friendship and respect. You believed I was backing up your son, and all our fighting sons with everything I had.

Well, neighbour, I wasn't; I haven't deserved the faith you had in me. For instance I never did buy all the Victory Bonds I could and should have bought. I was merely a "token" buyer.

Last Victory Loan I bought a $100 Bond. I told myself we needed new things for our house—while your son was sleeping in the mud and cold. But tonight, when I saw your fine face twisted with grief, it suddenly came home to me that though I could never have made any sacrifice to compare with yours or your son's, I could and should, at very least, have tried to match his spirit of magnificent unselfishness.

No, neighbour I cannot tell you these things, but if I could, I would also tell you this: From this moment on, I will try to make amends for my selfishness. In this next Victory Loan I will, literally, invest in Victory Bonds until it hurts. Even then, I won't be making a real sacrifice; I know those dollars will still be mine, to be repaid to me. But I will have done my best, at last, to deserve your friendship and respect.

OBJECTIVE FOR COUNTY SET AT $3,925,000

Area Quotas Increased in Eighth Victory Loan Which Opens in City And Hastings County on Monday Next

Belleville's Share $1,325,000, Trenton to Raise $575,000

On the eve of what may well be complete and final victory over the United Nazi powers in Europe Canada again is appealing to her people for their full support in the Eighth Victory Loan campaign which is scheduled to get underway across the Dominion on Monday, April 3rd. The objective of the forthcoming campaign, $1,350,000,000, is the greatest ever to be asked of Canadians in a single loan.

To meet that objective Canada on the home front will have to match the "punch" of her sons on the fighting fronts in Europe where the Allied forces are marching steadily but inexorably towards Berlin the heart of Germany and toward junction with brave Russian Allies. The overall objective in Canada is $50 millions greater than in any previous loan and as part of this increase residents of Hastings and of Belleville are asked to do their share.

In Hastings County the total objective asked to be raised in the forthcoming Victory Loan campaign is $1,950,000, or $195,000 more than in the previous loan. In Belleville the objective is $1,325,000, or $65,000 increase over the minimum objective asked in the 7th Victory Loan.

Frankly, $3,925,000 asked to be subscribed by residents of Hastings County is a lot of money. But it is an objective which officials of the county Victory Loan organization are sure will be reached—and oversubscribed. To match the fighting spirit of Canadian heroes marching victoriously across Germany, residents of Hastings cannot and will not fail.

Commensurate with the increased overall objective for the county, objectives in the various districts of Hastings have also been slightly increased. Trenton will be asked to raise $575,000; Sidney, Thurlow and Frankford $435,000; Deseronto and Tyendinaga, $105,000; Stirling Rawdon and Huntingdon, $185,000; Tweed, $170,000; Madoc, Marmora and Deloro, $220,000, and Bancroft, $185,000.

Differing from the policy of other campaigns, the village of Deloro, in the Eighth Victory Loan, is not being considered as a separate unit, but is being included in the Madoc and Marmora district.

Total general sales objective for the county is $1,300,000, but to this is added the payroll savings objective of $900,000, the armed forces within the county will be asked to raise another $425,000, and special names $300,000.

Religious Service and Military Parade On Sunday Afternoon Will Feature Opening Ceremonies of Loan Campaign

Wing Commander Johnston, M.C. Will be Special Speaker

A simple but impressive religious ceremony on the Armouries Lawn following a colorful military parade with district military and Air Force units taking part will herald the opening of the Eighth Victory Loan in Hastings County on Sunday afternoon, it has been announced by county Victory Loan officials.

The parade will form up on the Collegiate Campus where assembled units will march for forming into parade formation, with the route of the parade being from the campus north on Church Street to Station Street, then west to Front Street and south on Front Street to Dundas. After continuing briefly along Dundas Street the parade will swing north on Pinnacle Street to Bridge Street and the Armouries Lawn where units will assemble for the religious service.

The brief religious service commemorating the day as Victory Loan Sunday will be conducted from a specially constructed program on the Armouries lawn and will be in charge of Rev. Rea-champ Payne, of St. Thomas Church. Music for the service will be under the direction of the Trenton R.C.A.F. band, which will also take part in the parade.

Guest speaker for the service will be Wing Commander Johnston, M.C., padre at Trenton Air Station, who will be introduced by Rev. Bert Howard of Albert College. The dedicatory prayer dedicating the day as Victory Loan Sunday will be given by Monsignor J. P. Nicholson with prayer by Dr. A. J. W. Myers and benediction by Rev. J. G. Hornsby, One of the special features of the service will be an anthem by members of Christ Church under the direction of W. A. Simpson.

Official cars of the Victory Loan committee will head the parade which is to move off from the Collegiate campus at two o'clock. Following will be flights of airmen from Trenton Air Station and the Trenton R.C.A.F. band. In turn will follow the local Argyll regiment; the Canadian Legion; Army and Navy Veterans; the Belleville Municipal band; C.N.R. veterans; Sea, Air and Army Cadets; Salvation Army band; St. Johns Ambulance Brigade, and the 8th Battery and Argyll vehicles. Parade Marshal will be Lt. Col. R. C. Slater of the Argyll Light Infantry. The ceremony on the Armouries Lawn is scheduled to commence at sharp two-thirty.

"INVEST IN THE BEST"

A SPECIAL MESSAGE FROM MAYOR "FRANK FOLLWELL" TO THE CITIZENS OF BELLEVILLE . . .

Belleville

As Canadian, British and American armies march steadily into Germany, toward Berlin and the inevitable junction with our Russian Allies, Canada is once again appealing to her people for money, for the money which may well supply that final "push" which Prime Minister Churchill has said will end organized military resistance on the European battlefront.

In the Eighth Victory Loan which gets under way across the Dominion on Monday, April 23rd., Canada is asking for a minimum objective of $1,350,000,000. This is a great deal of money, but the need for money at this time is more than justified. With the defeat of Germany, her outlays for war purposes will not be immediately reduced. Some costs will disappear, but others will go on and there will be hundreds of millions of dollars spent in rehabilitating our fighting men and getting them started in civilian life.

Canada owes a duty to these same overseas who are gaining for us Victory on the battlefronts, and as part of Canada, Hastings County and the City of Belleville are being asked to shoulder their fair share of that duty.

Hastings objective in the forthcoming loan is $3,500,000, with an additional objective of $880,000 for the armed forces. As part of that total, Belleville's objective in the 8th. Victory Loan is $1,325,000.

The purchase of Victory Bonds will help supply that final "push" needed to gain complete Victory in Europe and as Mayor of Belleville I ask that Belleville's record in former campaigns be considered. We have over-subscribed objectives in previous loans, and to keep faith with the boys overseas, we must do it again.

Therefore, permit me to make this personal appeal for your generous support. It is your chance to "Invest in the Best."

Signed Frank Follwell
MAYOR, CITY OF BELLEVILLE.

RONTO LOSES NER TO BEARS NEWARK, 3-2

National League Attracts 32,234 Fans On Four Games

By The Associated Press

The Associated Press National League baseball season got off with three cut and dried results on the opening day of the season yesterday as the Boston Braves pasted the Brooklyn Dodgers 3-2 before 32,234 fans at Ebbets Field, the Cincinnati Reds whipped the Chicago Cubs 5-3 before the largest crowd, 36,586 paid, ticket wise, ever to see an opener in the history of the Cincinnati baseball club, the New York Giants whipped the Philadelphia Phillies 5-2 in the Polo Grounds before 18,000 fans and the Pittsburgh Pirates defeated the St. Louis Cardinals 6-3 before 5,000 fans in Sportsman's Park.

Weather was the big factor in the baseball picture yesterday, scaring off thousands of fans who had planned to see the season's first major league game. Rain, sleet and snow fell in most of the National League cities during the morning and early afternoon hours and the threat of more bad weather caused many fans to stay away from the parks.

Only in Pittsburgh and Cincinnati did the weather permit the game to be played as scheduled. In Boston the game was delayed for an hour and a half before the umpires decided that the field was in playable condition. In Brooklyn the game was delayed for an hour and in New York the start was delayed for two hours.

Despite the weather, however, the Boston Braves and Brooklyn Dodgers drew a crowd of 18,000 to Ebbets Field to see the Braves defeat the Dodgers 3-2 in 10 innings. The Cincinnati Reds drew a crowd of 15,586 to the Cincinnati baseball park to see the Reds defeat the Chicago Cubs 5-3. The New York Giants drew a crowd of 18,000 to the Polo Grounds to see the Giants defeat the Philadelphia Phillies 5-2. The Pittsburgh Pirates drew a crowd of 5,000 to Sportsman's Park to see the Pirates defeat the St. Louis Cardinals 6-3.
